Curios Brought Misfortunes

That certain things bring cure disaster to their owners is firmly believed in by many people.

Take the case of a Mr. Apperly, a young artist. A little over three years ago he bought a small West African idol or ju-ju. Before this, says Pearson's Weekly, for years in succession he had had his pictures hung in the Royal Academy. He has not had a picture in the Academy since he bought the idol.

Just after Mr. Apperly bought it his house was burglarized and all his wife's jewelry stolen. A week or two later an outbreak of fire occurred. Next year artist had a run of bad luck and disappointment.

He loaned the "ju-ju" to a friend, who sturned it hurriedly in a fortnight. turing that time he lost heavily over business deal; his wife, a most careful roman, scalded herself on two occaions; his neighbors bought a puppy the day after the idol came, and the result was a mob stoned his windows by mistake for those of the puppy owner. Finally he had a severe attack of rheumatism. No wonder he returned the

Still more extraordinary was the case of the mummy of the high priestess of Amen-Ra, now in the British Muceum. This priestess belonged to the royal family of Egypt. A party of four young Englishmen secured the mummy about thirty years ago in Egypt. One of the young men was crippled before they left that country, and another was shot shortly before reaching England. A third died sudddenly, and the fourth followed him after losing a large fortune.

The sister of the last hastily presented the mummy to the museum. The man who drove it there died within a week. while one who helped to carry it into the building soon afterward had both his legs cut off in a railway accident.

The first man who attempted to photograph the mummy case fell, emashed his camera and cut his face severely. The first journalish who described the Al luck that followed it died soon after-

Finally the daughter of the Marchioness of Salisbury, who went to look at the mummy fell and sprained her ankle. Another ill luck bringer that was thrown out of the house and given to the museum was a carved teakwood image of Buddha.

It was stolen from a Buddhist temple in Lower Burma by a sea captain. When the ship carrying it was near Liverpool is fire broke out on board . The crew brew the image overboard, believing the idol was responsible, and they machtd port in safety.

The image was washed ashore in Wales and claimed by its owner, the captain. Soon afterward he died. His daughters kept the Buddha in their house for several years, during which time it gave rise to continual trouble. One of them Then it was given to the sumeum. Th enit was given to the museum.

An Indian idol is said to heve been responsible for the assassination of President Carnot of France. It belonged to one of the rulers of India, and there was a tradition that the idol bestowed power with one hand and death with

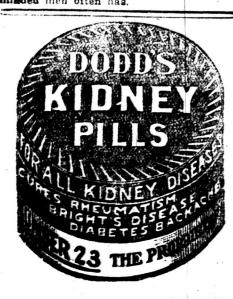

Ruler after ruler who possessed the in conquered India the idol, then in possession of a rajah, who lost his ril fortune in its train, however,

Among its possessers who died suddenly, before it reached President Carnot, were a major of British cavalry, a Brahmin princess, a rich money lender and an old dealer in antiquities.

POOR COOKING RESPONSIBLE.

(Montreal Herald) The Rev. Donald Cutheric says that poor cooking drives many a man to the tap room and urgest he churches to take up settlement work. He also says that the church has largely forgotten that a man's soul is reached through his body. Canon Paterson-Smyth was evidently of the same mind when he declared at a meeting of the Synod that "More brother-ly feeling was often engendered by a lot of men eating together than by all the spiritual exhortation in the world." Centure alone has seldom reformed the drunkerd but the dimensional the control of the control o the sympathy of broadminded men often has.

A CHILDLESS REGION.

I thought I floated on the edge of the outer infinite, and I was not alone. I heard a whisper, and lo! a commanding figure, grey with dignity, whose pose suggested magnificent reserve. His gaze was kindly and far-reaching. Captain of a host, indeed, whose equadron lay encamped in the distance.

With a smile he demanded my quest. I seek the destiny of the fallen." Uron this he led me to a promontory, where, with extended vision, I could take in the scene. "These," said he, "are men, not much altered since the days of time; hard, heavy, hideous, not elump-footed. but web-footed, not walking, but wading, in the shallow slough. A few bad women may be found by searching, made bad by these men. They are as one to a million, for the Master's gentle ministry extended to these in plentiful measure. His radiant sinile fell like a benediction on the devout; the frown of His meek austerity banished the wanton; He was ever the champion of those who fail and are weak.

But here is the wonder of our survey, lo! the crowning mystery of God! I cannot show you a child; it is a child-less region! The law of infant departure is upward, and not downward. The piercing ery of infant torture may not have been vicarious, but it was certainly victorious. As the sparks fly upwards, so do they fly, but not alone. The oldest, most faithful, most numerous carriers are angel convoys. They wait, they watch, they carry through the showers of tears. They land their freight in Abraham's bosom. Rachel weeps, for her children are not, but the elect are glad, for the oldest ordination is still in force, "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

The purchased possession of redeeming might begins in helplessness and ends in beauty, the beauty of the Lord.

Who shall count the number? "Who can count the dust of Jacob, or number the fourth part of Israel? Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."

With this sublime suggestion, the vision melted, and I stood again on the shores of time. I offer a word of comfort, a world of comfort, to young mothers who have to let their young ones go. They eay that half the human family die in childhod. How amazing the millions of the redeemed! Christ gete all the children, for He has bought them; angels gather them, barrel of apples in the cellar. Not long he had done?" ago they moved next door to an orphans' home. Shortly after moving Harry's mother noticed that the apples disappeared with great rapidity.

"Harry," she said one morning, "what is going on with the apples?" "Mother." he replied, "I have to eat a great many apples."

"I am willing that you should have all the apples you want. But why do you eat so many lately?"

Why, I have to eat a great many, 'cause the orphans want the cores."

A GRAVE QUESTION.

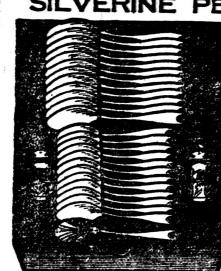

(St. John Telegraph) A question which Christian people everywhere in Canada must consider is asked by the Toronto Globe. It is a discgreeable question, but it must be faced. The Globe publishes a Toronto police court report in which certain women testified that the white slave traffic, so-called, is being carried on in that city, and that women were virtually made foreigners who are carrying on the terrible trade in the community which is commonly styled "Toronto the Good."

WOMEN DID WELL.

(Kingston Whig.) Everywhere-in Wyoming, Wisconsin, Everywhere—in wyoming, wisconsin, Idaho, Montana, California— the women did their sex credit by the manner in which they discharged their dutles as electors. FOREST RESERVE

Recommended in Prince Albert District, Sask.

The forestry branch of the Depart ment of the Interior has again, during the past summer, had parties out examining the timber on some of the regions still in the hands of the Dominion Government, with a view to reserving from settlement lands more suitable for forest growth than for farming. Some of these parties have finished the work assigned them and have made their re-

Mr. C. H. Morse made an examination of a district northwest from Prince Albert, lying between the Shellbrook branch of the Canadian Northern Railway (on the west), and the third Dominion meridian (longitude 106 degrees) and recommends that the tract between the meridian on the east and the Sturgeon River on the west should be made a forest reserve. This land is not pure sand, but has some stretches of sand among lands of better quality; none of it. however, can be classed as good agricultural land. At the present time this tract carries, in places, a good stand of spruce, as good a stand as will be found anywhere in the country. The reproduction of the forest is good and this should make one of the most valuable forest tracts in the west. The rate of growth is good. As it is calculated that the present stand of timber, which is held under license, will be cut out in ten years, it will be seen that the necessity for looking for a future supply is close at hand.

The tract lying between the railway and Sturgeon River was found to be of good agricultural quality, and, as the timber is pretty well cut out, it was not considered necessary to recommend any further reservation beyond the time required for the removal of the present stand .-- Department of the Interior. LAND AND OTHER VALUES

(Ottawa Citizen) But it is further argued by Professor Shortt and others that not only the value of land but also the value of other things is due to the public. The very word "value" means a measure of demand. To say, then, that the value of a thing is the estimate of it in the minds of those affected—the public—is only stating the fact in different words. But if Professor Shortt means that the public gives value to labor products in the same sense in refer him to the authorities on question of value and taxation, from Adam Smith to Lloyd-George. The term "uncarned inerement" is fairly well-known; and, while it may be argued with some show of reason that this increment attaches to some other things than land, it certainly does not attach to those things that can be moved or multiplied.
