The city of London is about to experiment on the raising of the school age from 14 to 16 years. The idea is not to force children over 14 to attend day school but to see that they attend night school for a time in order to take lessons in manual training and domestic science. The idea is a good one and the result will be watched with interest.

A woman in Hamilton is in a sweat to find out why the police do not punish the men as well as the women who frequent houses of ill-repute. It would be a surprise to the woman who is so anxious to see the names of the men published were she to find her own husband's, father's, brother's or cousin's name in a list of men frequenters of houses of this kind in police court. The real work in front of the women of Hamilton is not the reformation of men, who, long ago, got past their control; nor is it the punishment of a few frequenters of a few houses of ill fame. But their real duty is the education of the young boys and girls who often are left to themselves to roam the streets at night after night while their mothers are attending to the social engagements or endeavoring to reform a class of people who were hopeless cases long ago.

A noted scientist recently made an experiment which proves that the man with a moustache or beard is a far greater menace to the health of the community than the clean shaven man. This scientist had two assistants. One was bearded, the other had no hirsute adornments at all. He decided to experiment with them. He also had a lady assistant, and it was with her the experiment was made. She was placed in a bacilli-cleaned, germ-proof room. Her face was thoroughly sterilized. She was positively innocuous; absolutely harmless. Now he of the beard was taken for a two-hours walk up and down, hither and yon throughout the main streets of the city, into its byways and highways. After coming in contact with all the bacilli in the air for two hours, he was brought to the doctor's office and placed in the room with the young woman for two minutes. In that time he was to continually kiss her. At the end of that time the doctor entered and scraped the girl's lips and face and deposited the germs in a jar. Later the clean-faced assistant suffered the same fate. The germs after each experiment were put in different jars and later counted. He of the beard had transmitted to the lady's face over 30,000,000 more germs than the smooth one.

Would Change Law

Toronto, Nov. 16.—The commission having under consideration the revision of the Insurance Act and compensation to workmen, have inserted clauses in the report which the Government is recommended to adopt, and which will give the without recourse to the law courts. The liability of the insurance companies is to be made pretty plain. Under the present law corporations insure their workmen, and as soon as an accident happens the insurance company is notified, and write issued against the corporations are turned over to them to fight. This practice will be stopped by making the employing company responsible for injuries to its servants.

Parcel Post System May be Improved

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—The Postmaster-General, Hon. L. P. Pelletier, is considering the question of following the lead of the United States, of Great Britain and of other European countries in regard to the parcel post system. Canada has so far lagged behind these countries in the matter of adopting a comprehensive and progressive parcel post system in competition with the monopoly of the express companies. With the increase in density of population and the inauguration of rural mail delivery, it is believed that conditions in Canada will soon be ripe for a considerable extension of the present very limited parcel post arrangements of the Post office department. The United States Postal Department will inaugurate on Jan. 1st next a parcel post system with a weight limit of eleven pounds, and special rates for dairy and farm products for urban consumption. Mr. Pelletier will probably send officials of the department to the States during the coming winter to investigate the working out of the new system, with a view to adopting it at least in a part of Canada.

The attitude of the people toward employers is always as unfriendly as the attitude of people toward "scabs" during a strike.

DEATH.—The sad news was sprung upon our peaceful village on Monday of the death of Rev. Carson and although the deceased had been patiently waiting for the glorious summons from his Maker whom he had so faithfully served and loved for so many years, yet there seemed to be a note of sadness to his friends. Rev. Carson was for many years pastor of this circuit and was well known and much beloved by everybody. After retiring from the active work of the ministry a few years ago, he and Mrs. Carson chose to come to live in our quiet village and amply proved their wisdom. Your correspondents once heard the deceased say that he never lived in a place where every thing was so quiet and orderly and where they had so many kind friends. Even the young men seemed to have a reverence for Father Carson. The funeral on Wednesday met at the house at 1 o'clock then to the church for service and interment in Hagersville cemetery.

Christmas is the one day of the year when we remember the failures the men and women who have fallen short of the mark, the human derelicts. In the fierce commercial race we crowd these to the wall without thought and without compunction for 364 days of the year, but through the Salvation Army and other charitable agencies give them a share in the three hundred and sixty fifth. Well, it is good that we catch even that much of the Christ spirit for one brief day.

Phone 55 - Jarvis, Ont Christmas Postals Banned

The dead letter office in Washington last year destroyed 178,000 picture post-cards. The majority of them carried Christmas greetings and were held as un-mailable because either the postage was not prepared or the cards bore mica or tinsel ornaments and were mailed in unsealed envelopes. The transmission of cards with mica or tinsel decoration is forbidden by the postal regulations because in the past the eyes of the employees were injured by handling them.
