(Rochester Herald.)

When a good looking, prettily dressed young woman entered a St. Paul street car at Avenue A, the other day, the newspaper man looked at her as all the other men were doing, as she worked her way gradually along the aisle to a seat. But when all the women that she passed nudged one another and smiled, he looked a second time, and when several of the women giggled and gave one another a rather knowing wink, the reporter looked a third time, and then egan to wonder what was the matter. There was no "April Fool" sign pinned on her, her waist did not gape in the back and none of her puffs were loose, nor the end of her switch showing. These are a few of the things that a man knows delight women when they discover them on one of their dearest friends. Trust a woman's eyes for seeing things and to do her justice; trust a woman's ingenuity to straighten things out, when she wants to.

What was the trouble? Well, it seems from what one woman told another that the young lady had her dress skirt on wrong side out. "You tell her," said one woman.

"Oh, I couldn't," said the other. "Well, someone ought to tell her; she may be going down town shopping. and just think how she will feel if she discovers it on the street; you tell

"No, you could do it better." Finally they both decided to tell her. Up the aisle they struggled, and one of the women bent down and whispered the

It must have been a staggerer, for the peor girl gave one little scream as if she had looked down and seen a snake instead of a skirt, wrong side out, and then she seked in tearful tone, loud enough for everyone to hear: "Oh, what am I going to do?"

The men in the car got nervous, and fidgeted around, but the women went into secret session then and there and what with much whispering and nodding of heads, a plan was arranged and put into execution, on the spot.

The woman sat in the seat with the wrong-side-out victim, got out into the sisle and the two women who sat in front of her stood up, and one of the women across the aisle stood up with the girl's seat mate. And then there came a glimpse of a big black hat being taken off and handed to another woman back of the crowd of sympathizers, a long, envelope appearing white arrangement came up next, disappeared, came up again and again disappeared, carefully guided by friendly hands. In less time than it takes to tell it, the women resumed their seats and the girl sat there as smiling and contented as could

Do thing seemed to mystify all the women and they asked one another quite audibly: "What in goodness name was she thinking about while she was dressing, not to have discovered those seams? What mystifies the newspaper man question: II a woman can dress and do it in such limited time and space, why a man has always to wait around an hour, when he is going to take her anywhere and she is upstairs putting on her "bat?"

THE PRESENT.

What is wanted in the present day in a finer sense of proportion. We do not divide the word of truth rightly. We are lep-sided and heavy and out of trim. The traditions of the fathers have too great a hold upon us, we attend to the process, when we should be careful only of the result. Now knowledge should grow out of the old, the new wine is bursting the old skin bottles. What is the past to us? May we not transform our shedowy heroes into shining mythe, whose conceptions shall be modern and whose moral usefulness shall help the present men?

We need to apply this rule of proportion to the Master's day, and not the great difficulty He had with His disciples: "How is it that ye do not understand, how long shall I be with you!" The Holy Ghost's work was not fully accomplished at Pentecost; it is not finished to-day. God has more truth to shine out of His Word. The stop was not put upon His teaching when the canon of Scripture was closed. Some are so conservative that there is no progrees in their nature.

It is impossible to put this point in language clearer or stronger than that which Max Nordau uses in "The Interpretation of history:

"The historical sense is an artificial product of the ruling classes, who use is as a means for investing the existing order, which is advantageous to themselves alone, with a mystic and a poetic charm, for beautification of abuses by the glorification of their origin, and for casting a glamor of half tender, half reverential awe over institutions that have long lost any reasonable justification and become useless and meaning-

Surely we do not live in cycles; do not stand to-day precisely where any historic nation stood in a past age! Therefore, the man who is capable of being most useful to his country, to his race, to-day, is the man who has no restricting veneration for the past, who realizes his responsibility, and does not go running to history as a child to ask his father what he shall do.

Our duty is to serve our own generation; we are called to be Presentists. We are children of God. With Him is no past and no future. He says: "I am that I am"; and so many we say the same, because our spirit is from Him. We live in a day called Now. When tomorrow comes, it will be to-day. If holinces is imperative, you must be holy to-day. If you are perfect in Christ, you must be perfect Now. How can it be otherwise? You cannot divide Christ. The poor Levite divided his concutine into twelve pieces and sent each piece to the twelve tribes to accentuate his grief, but you cannot so divide Christ. You must have all or nothing, and you must have it now. The reason why you see so many small Chhistians is cause their receptivity is small. They show a little Christ because their hearts are diminutive. Heaven is not a land very far off. it is near-it is here, it is in you. The Kingdom of God is within; there is no show; it cometh not by observation, but it is real, and real for ever. "God will answer every prayer;

God is present everywhere. H. T. Miller.

THE PASSING OF THE FAMILY PHYSICIAN.

(New York Sun.)

By slow but steady decline the doctor who was wont to share the joys and more abundant sorrows of the family is more abundant sorrows of the min-disappearing from the scene of his min-istrations. Another ideal closely enistrations. Another ideal closely entwined with the life of every man or woman is succumbing to the tendencies of the age. The eloquent and sympathetic pens of Ian McLaren and Robert here pensetuated in thetic pens of Ian McLaren and Robert Louis Stevenson have perpetuated in modern literature this steriling and lovable type of man, and it is sad to note his threatened disappearance. This transition has not yet reached the rural communities. There the family doctor, who in childhood was dreaded because of his nauseous drugs, but was loved more deeply as the years passed during which he was the first to greet one in this world and the last upon whom the darkening vision of loved ones rested, this sympathetic counsellor in sorow is still firmly intrenched in trusting hearts. In large urban centres, however, the family doctor is rapidly passing into a distributor of cases to the specialist.

BAD TEETH.

(Kingston Standard.)
Of some 400 or more pupils who have been examined in the public schools up to date the astonishing revelation is made that 250 of them have defective teeth. Surely this is not a matter to be passed over lightly—that parents should be so neglectful of their children that they should allow so deployable a condition to persist. No clearer evidence could be offered than this, of the fiecessity of medical inspection in the schools. (Kingston Standard.)

The Chinese adore their children; family life is very close, and all the numer-ous members assist in bringing up the ous members assist in bringing up the little ones; the bables are always in the arms or on the back of mother, sister, father or brother; and as soon as they can walk, they toddle about with their elders their little bodies trussed up in wadded clothes, and their yellow heads a varied pattern of small, erect pigtails and shaven surfaces. Until they are five or siv years old, boys and girls are treated much alike. They are always underfoot, swarming on the streets and in the cramped houses of the poor, playing softly together in the many-roomed sectional mansions and garden courtyards of the rich. Their elders seem to enjoy having them about, perhaps partly because they are by instinct quieter enjoy naving them about, perhaps partily because they are by instinct quieter than western children, having been trained for centuries to a code of reverence.—From Harriet Monroe's "The Training of Chinese Children" in the March Century

There are those, indeed, with whom for reasons very near to them, all other problems pale before this one. How momentous is the problem of the neglected tuberculous child may be appreciated by the statistics supplied to the public some time ago by the Instructive public some time ago by the Instructive Visiting Nurse Association, of Baltimore, when it had on its visiting hit sixteen hundred and sixtd-five tuberculous patients, of which one hundred and sixty-five, or ten per cent. of the total, were children of and under school age. And it was estimated that the association was only visiting a third of the consumptives of Baltimore.

CONAN DOYLE ON ENGLISH DIVORCE.

Conan Dovie in Girand Magazine.)

If I were given supreme power, a power as great as both Houses of Parilament for a single day, I would exercise it in the direction of the reform of the divorce laws. The divorce laws in England are so arranged at present that divorce is practically impossible for a poor man; that people are tied without hope of release, to lunatics, drunkards and cr.minais, and great numbers (more than 200,000 individuals) are separated by law and yet are not free to marry again—a fact which cannot be conducive to public meralit

WHEN TO EXERCISE. Tips Especially Valuable to Those Who Are Not Strong.

Exercise should be taken at that time of the day when the temperature is most of the day when the temperature is most agreeable. For example, midday in the winter: or the morning and evening in the summer season, says Health. In the merning of winter the atmosuhere is too coe! for any but the soundest lungs; and if the weather be not frosty, there is more or less moisture in the air, which is ungalubrious.

The evening is much more objectionable for the summer season, and not merely on account of the cold which it produces, but also from the circumstances that infectious matters are more example in the cold which it is more than a dry air.

In large cities another objection attaches to the morning and evening, namely, the quantity or smoke minded hecomes the earth by the cold air which becomes dissipted by the middle of the day. In the summer season the middle of the day is objectioushile from its great heat, and the night air from the fogs and mists which collect near the earth's surface.

FOUNDING A SHEEP FLOCK.

Since the new edition of the bulletin "Sheep Husbandry in Canada" was issued a few weeks ago, there has been a constant stream of requests for it flowing into the Publications Branch at Ottawa. A great many of the applicants state that they are just commencing, or are about to commence, sheep raising, and that they wish to learn how to handle a flock successfully. This bulletin contains a chapter specially prepared for such persons, describing how best to establish a flock of commercial sheep. The author, Mr. J. B. Spencer, recommends flock of fifteen ewes as the minimum ot a farm of one hundred acres. Such s flock can be increased with experience but not beyond twenty to twenty-five unless it is desired to make a special business of sheep raising. With the management and care described in the bulletin, an increase through lambs can be expected of from 150 to 175 per cent and it should be the latter.

The early weeks of autumn is stated to be the best time to purchase ewes, as then one can select those that have raised good lambs.

Before the present edition of the bulletin is fully exhausted a still further one will be ordered, so that no one need hesitate about ordering a copy, which will be sent free to all who apply for it to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Hetty's Son Says It Is Given to the Rich to be Used.

(Interview with Edward H. Green in St. Louis Post-Dispatch.)

We use money because we know how. We aren't afraid of it. We're used to it. You aren't, but we know all about it Now. I'm not afraid to handle a hundred thereand dollars. It means no more to us then so much flour to the cook, And it's the same wit ha million. I know how to do it.

the same wit ha million. I know how to do it.

I have no use for idle people. Nor for idle pleasures—amusements that don't have some use. That's why I like comedy best, the other piays are idle if they don't teach some lesson. But it's a good thing to laugh, and comedies are useful that was. Travel is no good, if you don't use ft—for health or something. Everything must have a purpose. I used to collect rare editions. But people began to say, "Oh, he just does that because he can afford it."

he can afford it."

The only use for money is to keep it in use. A million dollars in the bank down town means nothing—it's nonsense. But that million our earning other millions a secful million. And it means that I know how to use it. That's my pleasure in it. Only the very poor hoard their money.

We're an extravagant people. We think We're an extravagent people. We think too much about clothes, but yet that's early human mature. The same impulse governs every one of us—to look successful before others. Now, very rich people are known to be able to afford good clothes—so they don't have to get 'em. The only people who get fine clothes are those who still have to prove their success—and they think the clothes clothes are those who still have to prove their success—and they think the clothes look like success. But it's nice to be called a Yankee, just the same—nicer than anything else. We're the livest native there is.

I have an ambition. I want to own a big yacht some day and ownice.

big yacht some day and cruise for six weeks. I'd like that! I sit here some-times and make pictures of it and draw times and make pictures of it and draw plant—it's to be the biggest yacht ever made, and everything in it is to be a few sizes larger than things in other yachts. I don't want to bump my head going through doers. No! Maybe it won't ever be built like I can see it in my mind. If I had it I'd get tired of it.

Gasoline is a volatile liquid and evaporates at the rate of a mile in 53 seconds. People who buy it in itve-gallon lots notice that it evaporates faster between the hardware store and the house than anywhere else.
The price of gasoline is regulated by supply and demand, just as the price of steel rails and beef on the hoof. Whenever the demand for college gymnasiums exceeds the supply on hand, the price of gasoline ascends in a very precise and irritable manner. If you own an automobile, this price also depends upon how for you are from home and the elastic conscience of the garage proprietor.
Gasoline is made by a suave and pure trust which has recently been divided into fifty-seven different varieties under one benign and benevolent head. These various hranches all commete with one one benign and benevolent head. These various branches all compete with one another with so much bitterness that as another with so much bitterness that as soon as one raises the price, the other add a couple of cents in order to cover depreciation and overhead expense.

Gasoline is very fast on its feet, and should never be disturbed when in the act of expleding. It is better to lose a new gasoline stove than to have one's physique filled full of dark brown crevices.

SORROW AND HAPPINESS.

The waves which sorrow lashes up around us stand high between us and the world and make our ship solitary in the midst of a haven full of vessels.

For a man who knows how to sorrow rightly, knows how to be glad with a holy joy; and when he is happiest, it is as though there ere a something of God throbbing in his bosom. It is as souls that we are happiest; and so Juffering makes for happiness, because it helps to make the soul. Oh, what good sorrow does us, often! To many a one, while he is happy, the outer world feels eternal; but as soon as he is sorrowful, all worldly existence is only a film, because God and his soul feel so close. William Mountford.
