ALONE.

It is not good to be alone; the eye is dim, the hands hang down, the heart is sad. Dreams come and come to stay, but, on the loneliness of dreams! Robinson Cruspe was lonely on his island. Columbus was lonely in his dream of the western world, and went after companions By some means he had heard of northern voyagers, he fled to Scandinavan for company, how his solltary spirit pined for fellows, how glad to drop his lanchor in a port in Norway, to get food to feed his dream, the greatest hunger is soul hunger, when once we are set in the path. Who does not pray for a double portion to be given to the ploneer!

The majority of men are not first. never will be; they will follow, they cannot lead. I knew an excellent man who had an opportunity to be a leader, he had wealth, position, he was, good: he would have cheered the heart of an ardent wan who had a fruitful bee in his bonnet, but he did not respond.

reliance; what diversities of character we meet. When there is an insurrection look out for the ring-leaders! Those are the men who realize their dream. They are alone at first, they pray, they weep, they are in agony, and by a strange and beneficent law they see the mountainside full of horses and chariots. Luther was alone as he went up the steps of the stone tower on his knees, saying a prayer at every step: then came a little bird and whispered, "The just shall live by faith," and he came down quickly, and the loneliness was past. He was in possession of truth and light, nouns of multitude. This is TGAST-Melt two tablespoonfuls butter. | the most finished character which begins in beauty and ends in power, when a host of spirits occupy and fill the spirit, and he can say at last before assembled dignities and church and state, "Here I stand; I can do no other. May God help me." The mountain pinnacles are lonely; they eatch the first light, they are aflame when the valley is in darkness. Mountain men obev the summons, perform the task with vigor, paralized by no anxiety, ruffled by no doubt, volitions are executed at once. nothing intervenes between seeing the course and taking it. He waits for no man's support, he scorns concession, opposition hinders him and he is fixed as a rock. "This one thing I do," savs Paul. "The hour cometh," says the Master. "Yet it is now come that ye shall be scattered and shall leave me alone, and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me."

The management of the character, the correction of evil habits, the suppression of wrong desires, the creation of new virtues—this is a work strictly individual, with which on stranger intermeddleth, in which the sympathy of friends may be deceptive, and our only safety is in a superhuman reliance. The relation of the human being to God is altogether personal; there can be no partnership in its responsibilities. Our moral convictions must have an undivided allegiance, and to withould our reverence till they are supported by the suffrages of others, is an insult which the ywill not bear. What can those even who readus best know of our weaknesses and want and capabilities?

Perhaps in no other country in the world are conchas used as a substitute for window glass. These shells are flat, nearly round, and average four inches in diamteer. THE CANADIAN PACIFIC'S NEW POLICY.

(The Financial Post of Canada.) On the recommendation of the directors the shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway have decided upon an increase in capital, the new stock to be assued at $175 for each $100 smare. As the market value of the shares to-day is about $276 it looks, to those unfamiliar with the financing of large undertakings, like a very generous bonus to the shareholders. Those who have to find money for Can-adian public service corporations will agree that the price is a fair one. The last allotment was at $150, but when it was announced that permission to increase the capital would be submitted to the shareholders. The Financial at The Ontario Medical Institute, Fost expressed the hope that a still higher premium would be placed upon the 263-265 Yonge Street, Toronto. new shares. The company undoubtedly acted wisely in making them higher than before. It is true that some conservative financiers thought they should have made the price $200 for each $100 share. but it must be remembered that the Can-adian Pacific, in common with other railroads in Canada, has yet ahead of it hundreds of miles of extensions and an enormous amount of development, for which it will require still further fresh capital. The Canadian Pacific Railway has to appeal to the public for it, for the has to appeal to the public for it, for the day is past when they can obtain Government aid for this purpose. To get future money readily it is advisable for the company to retain a reputation for fair and even generous treatment of its foreign shareholders. Such a reputation has made it easier for other Canadian corporations seeking foreign funds. ations seeking foreign funds.

ENGINES ON FISHING BOATS.

Used on Few of the Larger Vessels, But on AlL the Smaller Ones.

Out of the lifty large fishing smacks hailing from this port, schooners of from 40 to 120 gross tons, only three have auxiliary engines. On the other hand, of the sixty or more of smaller craft, sloops and schooners of from two or three up to twenty or thirty tons, belonging here and in neighboring New York and New Jersey waters and coming to the Fulton wholesale fish market, almost every one now has a kicker installed.

The big boats with the three exceptions noted still rely solely on sail power, though they may take a tow from Fulton Market slip to the Battery when they go to sea and a tow from the Battery up when they come in. The smaller boats, almost without exception equipped with gasoline engines, may make entire trips without hoisting a sail. If the wind is light or the tide against them they don't wait, they just start their engine and mosey right along. Of course their trips are shoretr.

It is more of a job to put an engine into a big vessel than into a small one. Most of the larger vessels now in com-"After careful cogitation," said he, "I mission were built before gasoline enam firmly convinced that I displayed a gines had come into their present wide use. A few of the big boats now carry a power dory or a boat a little bigger than a dory, like a seine boat, equipped with a gasoline engine. This power dory is carried on the schooner's deck for use as a handy boat on occasion. They may use it for towing boats loaded with seines or they may use it for the picking up and quicker rbinging in of men out fishing in dories to tow them in. On at least one occasion a power dory has been used to tow the schooner itself.

A schooner captain who was out for bluefish but who was now becalmed where there wasn't a sign of a blue, caught sight about nightfall of a schooner about a dozen miles away that was in the midst of a school of them. So he got his power launch overboard with a towline made fast to the schooner and started towing, and he made a mile or two an hour through the night, to bring up in the morning where the blues were and to get a full catch.
