HISTORIC SWORDS

A Pair That Did Duty at the Battle of Bunker Hill.

ENEMIES IN THAT CONFLICT.

Now They Are Clashed in Peace in the Massachusetts Historical Society Building—A Legacy From the Historian Prescott and His Wife.

The most impressive memorials of the battle of Bunker Hill are the huge shaft over in Charlestown and a pair of swords which hang crossed like a pair of clasped hands over the door of the building of the Massachusetts Historical society.

Both these swords were used in the heroic duel of June 17, 1775, the one by the commander of the patriot forces, the other by the captain of one of the British war vessels which bombarded Charlestown and protected the crossing of the English troops. And for many years these swords, which had not been beaten into plowshares after the Scriptural prophecy, but which had become the symbols of peace nevertheless, hung upon the wall of a great American historian whose father was the son of the American commander and whose wife was the granddaughter of the British captain.

It was to these weapons that Thackeray referred in the very first paragraph of his novel "The Virginians," which reads thus:

"On the library wall of one of the most famous writers of America there hang two crossed swords, which his relatives wore in the great War of Independence. The one sword was gallantly drawn in the service of the king, and the other was the weapon of the brave and honored republican soldier. The possessor of the harmless trophy has earned for himself a name alike honored in his ancestors' country and his own, where genius such as his has always a peaceful welcome."

William Hickling Prescott, author of "The Conquest of Mexico," "Ferdinand and Isabella," and other fascinating histories, the grandson in his paternal line of Colonel William Prescott, who held the hill against the British grenadiers and gave the world the first taste of the valor of the Continentals and whose wife was the granddaughter of Captain John Linzee of the royal navy, who commanded the sloop of war Falcon during the battle, was the writer to whom Thackeray referred.

The only son of Colonel Prescott of Bunker Hill, named for his father, was born thirteen years before the battle was fought in Charlestown. This son was educated at Harvard, graduating with the class of 1783. Admitted to the bar in 1787, he became eminent in his profession and accumulated a fortune. His wife was Catherine Green Hickling, the daughter of a Boston merchant who was afterward consul in the Azores. The future historian was their son.

Captain John Linzee on that April day in 1775 was charged with the duty of cannonading the rebels and covering the passage of the British soldiers. The British ships of war were moored at various points in front of the Charlestown peninsula.

Three years after the battle, on Aug. 8, 1778, the Falcon was sunk off Newport, R. I., to prevent its capture by the French fleet under Admiral D'Estaing.

This Captain Linzee's daughter, Hannah Linzee, became the wife of one of the leading merchants of Boston, Thomas C. Amory, and it was the daughter of Thomas and Hannah Amory, Susan Amory, whom William H. Prescott married. Thus the two swords came into the possession of one family.

The historian had a degree of pride in his ancestry and liked to discourse upon occasion about these swords. In this respect he resembled Sir Walter Scott. The weapons used to hang over the recess of the great window in his library used commonly as a reception room, where they were the more conspicuous because of the thousands of books, the busts and the pictures by which they were surrounded. It was from the room of the scholar that these ancestral memorials were removed to the quarters of the historical society. That happened in this wise:

Upon the death of the historian it was found that the thirteenth item in his will read thus: "The sword of Colonel William Prescott, worn by him in the battle of Bunker Hill, I give to the Massachusetts Historical society as a curiosity suitable to be preserved among their collections, and the sword which belonged to my wife's grandfather, Captain Linzee of the British royal navy, who commanded one of the enemy's ships during the same battle, I give to my wife."

When William H. Gardner on April 14, 1859, sent a letter to Robert C. Winthrop, president of the Historical society, formally conveying the information that the swords were to become the property of the institution he said as to the Linzee sword, "Mrs. Prescott and the other heirs of Captain Linzee unite in requesting me to present at the same time in their behalf the sword of their ancestor also, that the two, enriched by all the memories which now belong to them, may still hang together on its walls."

The letter read, a cover was removed from a packet on the officers' table, and there were the swords, crossed presumably as they had been on the library wall and as they are today.—Boston Herald.

Mr. H. S. Falls,
Simcoe, Ontario,
Canada,

DEAR MR. FALLS,
I am going to ask a little favor of you—"I would greatly appreciate you sending me a close description as possible of the Crank by which your elevator is operated. We have two hydraulic elevators, neither of them supplied with such an attachment which seems to me to be a great improvement on our method of directly pulling down. I have just returned home after an absence of 8 weeks, I spent some days of my vacation in the vicinity of Simcoe having friends at Port Dover and Waterford. I had the pleasure of being shown over your new store and the methods used in your business. I regard your business as one of the most impressive things I saw in my recent trip to the Eastern United States and Canada.

In the cities where conditions are favorable to handling a large trade, one naturally expects to find commodities conducted in accordance with modern ideas. But in the size of Simcoe it is very unusual to see the large assortments of sorted stocks, convenient stock-keeping arrangements, window displays, found in your store. A town, the size of Simcoe, supporting an establishment such as yours is to be commended on the spirit of loyalty to the home market which makes it possible for you to provide the trading facilities available to your customers, you are rendering a distinct service to the community from the benefits conferred on your customers by conducting a store which tends to build up the general business of the town, and by showing that assortments, values and service can be secured at home equal to the best offered in the large cities.

I am sending you a few photographs showing various sections of our Seaside store; You will notice that we run large assortments of boxes using them for notions, shosery, under-reeves, shirt waists, gloves, etc. A very small percentage of our stock is kept in the original box or package uniformity and neatness of appearance being secured in this way which would not be otherwise obtainable.

Last night I was the guest at a banquet given by employees to celebrate my return seventy-five being seated at the tables. We had songs including "there's was luck about the house when our good man's awa' Recitations and speeches, my account of my travels including a description of your store.

It was a very gratifying occasion to me and impressed me more than ever before with my responsibility as employer of so many fine men and women. I have no partner but am assisted by a remarkably able and loyal staff, many of whom have been with me for years.

Wishing you the continuation of the success your enterprise so fully deserves.

Yours Very Truly,
SAMUEL LEASK.
