WORKING WOMEN; IDLE MEN. (Chicago ·fribune)

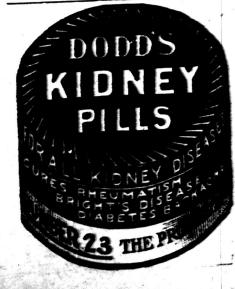

About 500,000 women work in New York City. Of these 100,000 are married and of the latter support husbands. On 10.000 of the latter support husbands. On the face of it this looks like an indictment of American manhood. The superficial eritic might jump to the conculsion that the American man is a drone, lazy shiftless, a good-fornothing, hugging his rocking chair while his wife works to provide for herself and him.

In reality, however, these figures are not an indictment of our manhood, but of industrial cases, induces or compel discrimination against men in favor of somen. While 500,000 women and girls jam subways, elevators, and cars in their rush for the shons and factories every morning, 300,000 men in New York City and state are jobless. The New York department of labor hus just made public figures to that effect. Many of the 50,000 husbands who are being supported by their wives probably would be found in the ranks of this army of unemployed men.

Still others of the husbands who are being supported by their wives are probably victims of industrial diseases or of the system which makes, or considers, a man of 40 old and refuses to employ him. It is a deplorable fact that in many machanical trades the average period of a man's activity has been shortened to but fifteen years.

The husband who is being supported by his wife is most not to be scorned, but still others of the husbands who are

There are chickens and chickens, and the famous goose that laid the golden egg of the fable, but Bradddock has produced a hen that promises, if the breed can be perpetrated, to pull down the high cost of living.

Postmaster Christian H. Sheets, of Braddock, who is now closing a service of 20 years in the office, is the discoverer of the remarkable chicken that has done the trick, and now he is the envied of early morning housewives and other early-to-rise business men who are compelled to swallow their eggs whole and uncooked, for Postmaster Sheets has always been an early riser, getting to the postoffice anywhere from 5 to 5.20 in the morning.

The hen that laid the eggs bought by Mr. Sheets decided she would go the ordinary cackler one better, and consequently is now delivering them hard-boiled and ready for serving. Belgian Visits America to Gain in Inches.

There was much speculation among the inspectors at the immigration station when the Prinz Adelbert began discharging passengers. One of the male passengers was apparently coming down the gangplank on stilts, and the inspectors wondered at such a strange procedure. Towering high above the heads of the other passengers, the man slowly made his way as though he found the art of walking down an incline on stilts a delicate proposition. When the object of their curiosity neared them, the inspectors found that he was not only minus the stilts, but was very much bowegged.

The man is Julius Laubach, seven feet two inches tall, of Brussels, Belgium, and the object of his visit to America is to increase his height. Julius wants the line. In our family we use it for a kinks in his lower limbs eliminated, and in Chicago, who makes a business of straightening deformed limbs. Physicians at the immigrant station told Julius that if he can have the curvatures removed he will be about four inches taller. This brought a smile to his face, for, he explained, he will then be the tallest man in continental Europe, a distinction which he has long sought.

Laubach's description of how he became bow-legged caused a faint smile to spread over the faces of the inspectors. He said that he was the beliringer in the Cologne Cathedral and that one day while he was tolling the big bell the rope broke and he was hurled through a window in the tower. When he struck the ground he landed on his feet, and his legs have never been straight since. He is the tallest man that ever landed at this port.—Philadelphia Record.

Dresden Publication is Now Municipal Property.

It is an interesting fact that a newsaper is owned and administered by the ity of Dresden, the property having been tequeathed to the municipality. In the year 1858 Dr. Justus Guentz, publisher of the Dresdener Anzeiger and proprietor of an advertising bureau with a concession from the Saxon Government willed the bureau and the right of publishing the Dresdener Anzeiger as a special foundation for the common welfur under the condition that the profits should be used for beautifying Dres and for charitable purposes. During lifetime he retained at first fifteen say teenths, later two-thirds and finally one-Falf of the net profits. After his death his heirs received and will receive until their death one-third of the profits. The head of the city of Drosden and his representative, with equal rights, were designated as administrators of the foundation for all time.

In 1895 the print-house woner. Clemens Blochmann, who had printed the Anzeiger from 1848 until that time, enlarged the foundation by the gift of his well-equipped printing establishment without retaining for himself or heirs any shares of the profits which are employed for the same purpose as those of the original Dr. Gueatz foundation. The annual profits of the united foundations amount now to about $60,000.
