As Old as the Ages, Says English Writer.

(By Joseph Greenaway.)

The human race is always striving to do something new-something strikingly original-something that will open up the eyes of this poor old globe of ours. But, believe me, it is a difficult job.

When, for instance, "Votes for Women" came into vogue a few years back quite a lot of folks thought something entirely novel had popped up this time. I remember reading somewhere a poem by the famous Ella Wheeler Wilcox that started off like this:

"So vain is the cry of the masters, And vain the plea of the hearth, As the ranks of the strange New Woman Go sweeping across the earth."

There was really nothing strangely new about it all. Surely every schoolboy knows that there was once long ago a fine, sturdy race of women known by the name of Amazons, who left Mrs. Christabel Pankhurst- and all the other window smashers-completely in the shade. They got far more than the mere vote -they ran the whole show. And the Socialists are very fond of telling us that a New Age is upon us. we first began to use steam, that a New Age -electricity brought z another New Age- and the flying ine well, that's going to turn s upside down. It will be even than a New Age.

ndidly. I don't believe there is anyr new under the sun. I may be z. and not being well enough post in ancient history, I won't argue. when people tell me that Advertish is a new profession, I kick. Last night, here in old London town, I at tended a meeting of advertising men. and every one of the speakers emphasized the fact that ad. writing was something entirely new.

Advanising a new science? Why, is k to the dark ages, when our ers were cive men. Why, a i thousand years ago they were as wen versed in the subtle art of pubity as even Teddy Roosevelt or Winaton Churchill and surely that's going some!

Ank any tourist who has been to Typi for the name of an Egyptian King, and sure as fate he or she will at one tell you Xerxes. You can't escape im if you go to the dreary goldan i of the Pharaohs. He wasn't with his name being nailed over oorways of the temples, but he stamped on every brick. Yes. single brick you turn up you read this jolly old King's name. Xerxes -even though you cannot pronounce it, you remember it forever afterwards. It haunts you, and if you happen to be an st. man you wake up in the middle of the night and think what valuable adportising space there is in a single New York sky-scraper, and what a chance Carnegie missed when he built his free Ibraries.

ing a new game, indeed? Julius Caesar was another ancient Tho knew "the game" pretty well. In order to avoid his many adventures being wrongly reported, he did the job himself. And he took good care that nothing should be missed-how he atomed over Gaul and kicked our poor old noble ancestors the English. The Commentaries of Caesar—they have been read through the ages, and the name of Julius stands boldly out on the sky. line of glory.

Napolson Bonaparte also knew a little of the game. With his old green hat socked on his head and his arms folded: and legs spart—he was most careful about every detail. He was too busy to write up his own adventures, but no doubt if he had conquered the world he would have also had his whole history put up neatly in two volumes. Still, the records he left behind are pretty good I suppose he takes up as much space as anyone in the news of the world.

But please don't mieunderstand me. I believe firmly in advertising. After all, when you advertise you have to get busy. If you keep on telling the world that you can do something better than anyone else, there comes a time when you have to "make good." Advertising keeps things a-going and it makes for honesty, for when a merchant advertises regularly it shows that he is willing for his name to be coupled with his goods. He is not afraid of anything. Advertising 's far too expensive a way to sell bad atuff

EYE OF A HORSE

The appearance of "white" in the eye of a horse indicates a vicious nature, because a high tempered horse constantly looks about, apprehensive of danger or desiring to do mischief. The quick motion of the eyeball in opposite directions exposes an unusually large surface of the white, which thus becomes an evidence of the temper of the animal.

BIRDS AND FARM PESTS.

(Montreal Gazette.) The fourth annual report of the Que-bec Society for the Protection of Plants from Insects and Fungus Diseases contains a chapter devoted to the bird friends of the farmer and fruit grower. The attention which all that pertains to the production of food has received of late years has added much to the knowledge of plant disease and pests, and to the means of checking them. So far as insect pests are concerned. and there is no crop from them, it would appear birds are nature's ever active check. The hawk, which occasionally steals a chicken, is a great devourer of rats and mice, which live by tolling the crops. The same is true of the owl. The wood-pecker is an insect devourer; so is the kingbird, the flycatcher, the pewee, the jay, the blackbird, the native sparrow, the swallow, the robin, etc. Even crow, while he eats what wordes farmer, destroys beetles, crasshoppers, weevils, cutworms, etc., and earns his board. When the wisdom begotten of the knowledge set out in the report has its effect, the cheap sport who shoots birds will be in greater disfavor than he is now even, and the farm which is chosen as a home by many feathered flyers will have something added to its

Rules Governing Importation Into Canada.

All persons who are accustomed, or intend, to import trees, shrubs and plants, or other ki of vegetation into Canada, or to ship such trees and plants from one province to another, should make themselves thoroughly familiar with the regulations of the Dominion and Provincial Governments in this matter. If this is not done inconvenience and possible loss mar result owing to the neglect to comply with the requirements of D. minion or Provincial governments, which requirements are necessitated by the danger, always present, of the importation of dangerous pests into Canada or their spread from one province to another.

The regulations governing the importation of vegetation of various kinds into Canada and the Dominion and Provincial laws under which they have been passed have been collected in a convenient form and published as a bulletin, with explanatory notes by the Dominion Entomologist, Dr. C. Gordon Hewitt. This bulletin, entitled "Legislation in Canada to Prevent the Introduction and Spread of Insects, Pests and Diseases Destructive to Vegetation with Regulations Regarding the Importation of Vegetation Into Canada, is published as Bulletin No. 11, Second Series. of the Experimental Farms Branch throat. (Philadelphia Record.) "A man," the doctors say, "is as old s his bloodyessels." Recent investigaas his bloodvessels." Recent investiga-tions have pretty conclusively shown that in spite of the great reduction in the general death rate due to improved social and sanitary conditions, the death-rate among men between the ages of 45 and 65 is increasing. This is due to the rapidly increasing aggregation of popu lation in towns and cities where, under present industrial conditions of modern life, there is undue hustle and stress. The husters bring about premature degeneration of the animal system. The increasing number of deaths from heart disease gives startling statistical confir-mation of the killing page among middleaged men. This is further proven by the contrary showing among women. There has been for many years past continuing reduction of the female death rate between the ages of 45 and 69. Among active business men anxiety, worry and active business men analytical overwork but a constant mechanical overwork but a constant mechanical strain on the heart and bloodvessels.

LEARN FROM LOVE LETTERS

Dr. Arthur Holmes, who advocates the exchange of love letters between students as a means of acquiring the art of composition, might point to Samuel Richardson as a proof of the efficacy of his method. Richardson began by acting as scribe for a number of young women, for whose correspondence with their sweethearts he frequently supplied not only the words, but the sentiments. His relatation for this kind of composition led a firm of printers to propose that he should prepare a "complete letter writer" for the use of "those country readers who cannot indite for them selves." Two or three of the epistles written for this purpose suggested a separate story. "and thence," in Richardson's own phrase, 'Pamela,' "sprang
