

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

Spread on Limbs. Red and Inflamed. Became Sores. Had to Tie Hands While He Slept. Well, Thanks to Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

St. Cesaire, Quebec.—"My child was scarcely two months and a half old when his face and arms became covered with little red pimples which a little later spread on his limbs. The pimples were very red and inflamed. They were like a little red spot which soon became a little larger and raised up. There were four or five together. These pimples caused him to scratch so that we had to tie his hands while he slept. The itching made him suffer so much that he cried part of the night, waking up most of the people in the house. The pimples became sores and were very painful.

"I used without success several remedies which were recommended to me. I then used Cuticura Ointment and Soap, giving him a bath every morning with hot water and Cuticura Soap, and then applied a thin layer of Cuticura Ointment on the parts affected. They gave great relief with the first application. After using one box of Cuticura Ointment and a little more than one cake of Cuticura Soap my child was completely cured. Thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment my baby is perfectly well, and I shall always have them at hand."

(Signed) Mrs. N. Jobin, Jan. 4, 1912. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. A single set is often sufficient. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address Post card Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 37 D, Boston, U. S. A.

THEY FOUND OUT.

That it is just as well to remember not to inquire too deeply into things is aptly illustrated by the story which Clifford Crawford, of "My Best Girl," company is now telling.

"Old Aunt Sally, the highly esteemed cook in a Southern family, was frequently praised for her culinary skill, and on one occasion, when a number of guests had been to dine with the family, a remark was made touching the beautiful appearance of Aunt Sally's pie, which showed a very pretentious scallop on its edge.

"Inquiry being made as to how the old lady managed to get such an even design, Sally was summoned to the dining room and the question was duly put to her.

"The emotion of the guests may be imagined when the old lady replied: 'Oh, dat's easy. I jest uses my false teeth.'—Young's Companion.

THE PICTURE THEATRE.

The badly ventilated, dark, fire-trap picture show, with pictures portraying crime or vice, should not be allowed to exist for a single day. The peculiar dangers which must of necessity exist where highly combustible materials are brought into close contact with heated carbons demand special precautions. Where these are taken and rigidly enforced the danger of fire is minimized. Films censored with care and common sense, auditoriums properly lighted and ventilated, objectionable posters done away with and the motion picture theatre should be no worse than any other place of amusement. No amount of legislation, no system of espionage, no invention, will take the place of parental responsibility.

THE IRISH POTATO IN PERIL.

The United States Department of Agriculture has ready for distribution through representatives in Congress one thousand bushels of seed Dasheen, the semi-tropical tuber, which it is expected, will take the place of Irish potatoes in the Southern States. This is the first season in which such distribution will be made.

The new potato substitute, which has a hairy coat and has been grown with much success in Florida, comes from Central and South America, and will grow in the moist, warm regions of the south, which are fatal to the Irish potato. It has been tried at the banquets of the National Geographic Society and pronounced deliciously good. It can be boiled or baked, or cooked in any other way a potato can be used. The taste is far more mealy than a potato. Some who have eaten the Dasheen say there is a suggestion of roasted chestnut about it, and others that it tastes as though a very slight addition of gravy has been made to the potato. Statistics have shown that a crop of 400 to 450 bushels an acre can be raised.—Canadian Countryman.

AN EXPLANATION.

One hundred and sixteen sardine canneries on the coast of Brittany, in France, have closed down on the ground that the business is unprofitable. Sardines, some people may be aware, are little fishes that come packed in boxes the way you see them in street cars.

There are about 100 gas stoves in use in Hong Kong, the Chinese cooks preferring their old methods, preparing the food over charcoal and wood fires.

TRIFLES CAUSE WAR.

Here Are Three Samples to Prove It.

Many times it has happened that a great and costly war has been brought about by an accident trivial and even ridiculous. Thus the war of the Spanish succession is said to have been caused through a glass of water. Mrs. Masham was carrying a glass of water, when she was obstructed by the Marquess de Torcy. A slight scuffle ensued, and the water was spilt. The marquess took offence and bad feeling ensued between the English and French courts, with the ultimate result that a war was declared. The campaign cost France many severe battles, viz., Blenheim, 1704; Ramilies, 1707; Oudenarde, 1708, and Malpaquet, 1709.

Quite as absurd in its origin was the war that took place during the commonwealth of Modena. A soldier stole a bucket from a public well belonging to the State of Bologna. Although the value of the article did not exceed a shilling, its annexation was the signal for a fierce and prolonged war. Henry, the King of Sardinia, assisted the Modenese to retain the bucket, and, in one of the subsequent battles, he was made a prisoner. The bucket is still exhibited in the tower of the cathedral of Modena.

A third instance of a war resulting from a trifling cause was that between Louis VII. of France and Henry II. of England. The Archbishop of Rouen decreed that no one should wear long hair upon their heads or elms, whereupon his wife Eleanor rallied him upon his appearance. A quarrel ensued, which resulted in the dissolution of the marriage and Eleanor's marriage with Henry. By this marriage the broad domains in Normandy, formerly belonging to Louis, passed into the possession of Henry, Louis, hotly incensed, made an attack on Normandy, and henceforth for nearly 300 years arose those devastating wars which cost France upward of 3,000,000 lives.

CONSTIPATION CURED BY BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can use to relieve her little ones from constipation and all other stomach and bowel troubles. They act as a gentle laxative, are pleasant to take and are absolutely safe. Concerning them Mrs. Philippe St. Pierre, St. Perpetue, Que., says: "My baby was badly constipated and was cross all the time. Nothing I gave her seemed to do any good till I began Baby's Own Tablets. They are the best medicine in the world for little ones and quickly relieved my baby." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ONE ODOR MISSED.

A good illustration of the wit of Bishop Weildon, the popular dean of Manchester, is afforded by the following story: Once at a luncheon given by the Lord Mayor of Manchester, the dean sat next to Sir Herbert Tree.

"Well, Mr. Tree, what have you been doing to-day?" he asked.

"I went for a long motor ride this morning and lost a bet," replied the famous actor.

"Indeed," said the dean, "and may I ask what the bet was?"

"I made a bet that we would pass through 400 different odors, and we only encountered 399."

"Ah," replied Bishop Weildon, promptly, "you missed the odor of sanctity."—Strand.

TURTLE EBONY.

There is something new for medomobile who wishes a change—not silver, not celluloid, nor ivory—turtle ebony. One of us are acquainted with the black ebony, and this new ebony is also of the wood, but in a lovely brownish red hue that brings out the grain of the wood. Its newness is its most distinctive feature, and it would be rather easier to keep clean than silver. There are many and various pieces, which come with little silver circles, quite plain and simple, ready to be married with one's monogram or initial.

And as to the pieces one may choose, there is everything, from a hand mirror, hair or cloth brush, to shoe horns, nail files, button hooks, salve tins and hat brushes that one would like for the dresser or chiffonier.

RIGHT LIVING PAYS.

(Niagara Falls, N. Y., Gazette.) The over-developed athlete is not the healthiest man nor he who has the chance of longest life. Exactly the condition depends upon one's own condition. Right living is the great conservator.

Right living stores up reserves of endurance against the day of trial, or some unusual strain of sickness or accident or work. One does not degenerate physically in the city because of the city, but because of one's habits. Exactly the same remark can be made of the country, for the country as well as the city has its degenerates.

LANDS OF FIRE. It is rather singular that both of the "lands of fire" are near the cold extremes of the globe—Iceland, far to the northward, and Terra del Fuego, remotely south. Iceland, to the eye, seems at first glance to be better named by the cold appellation. Its glacial fields are not only numerous, but in some cases these and the connected snow stretches are hundreds of square miles in extent. But only a little travel into the interior, say to the site of the ancient Icelandic Parliament at Thingvall, discloses miles upon miles of such desolation as is possible only in a "land of fire." It is a very island of volcanoes, and, while they have been exceedingly well behaved for a hundred years or so, the great hot springs in the neighborhood of Reykjavik, the capital, indicate that the subterranean heat is massive, and still very much alive. Huge glaciers also mark the "cold land of fire" at the other end of the earth. Thus, each of the two parts of the universe is properly named, whether the name be warm or cold.

MUSIC IN THE DAIRY. According to information from the Patent Office at Berlin an American has discovered a serious defect in all butter churns at present in use. He declares that the noise of the machine is so monotonous as to ruin the nerves of the dairymaids. The discovery has induced him to connect a gramophone with the axle, which is set in motion by the crank. The idea conjures up visions of an era when all work will be performed by the machines, what time the mechanics dance to the latest tunes or join in a chorus to orchestral accompaniment.

Useful Shelf From Packing Case

Shelves are very convenient things to have around the house, and packing cases are rather cumbersome. Therefore persons having packing cases and needing shelves can easily get rid of an incumbrance and provide a great convenience by sawing through the box in the manner shown. The shelves can be put up in either of the two ways shown in the sketch.

TWO WAYS WITH HONOR.

(Chicago Tribune.) If Congress would repeal the toll exemption clause of the Panama Canal Act it not only would avoid an international controversy, but it would step out of a domestic difficulty. Protest against the exemption of coastwise trading is not confined to the British objectors. There is a lively disapproval of it in the United States, not only as based on an extremely questionable construction of a treaty, but as an inequitable concession to commercial interests which can present no justifiable claim for such consideration. If Congress will not repeal the exemption clause the United States Senate will probably prove itself contumacious against an appeal to honor if it refuses to accept President Taft's proposal for a submission of the points in controversy to an arbitral commission. The United States cannot afford to be both wrong and indifferent.

Send no money, but write her to-day if your child has the trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. WHO GET THE TITLES?

(Rochester Herald.) We have often thought, and doubtless many of our British brethren think, that there is something very fatuous in these honors conferred at New Years or on the natal anniversaries of the King. The truth is that the greatest men, as a rule, do not receive them.

WANTED TO WRITE THE EPITAPH.

In the death of Sir Richard Cartwright Canada loses her only Post-impetarian who loved letters in and for themselves, to whom words were things of beauty, to be manipulated as works of art. Sir Wilfrid Laurier can indeed, with unsurpassed skill, use words to express or to conceal his thought; Dr. Clark, of Red Deer, the Finance Minister, and a number of others can make lucid and witty speeches. But to play with words for the mere delight of showing mastery over things of such beauty and variable charm, belonged to Sir Richard alone. His love of words was in some ways a weakness. More than once it could have been said of him that "he had his jest," but his political opponents "had his estate."

Thus in 1891, when Ontario and Quebec gave a majority for the Liberals, but the Conservative Administration was saved by the votes of the Maritime Provinces and of British Columbia, Sir Richard dubbed the majority so obtained "a thing of shreds and patches." The aptness of the Shakespearean quotation was indisputable; but it cost the Liberal party the votes of hundreds of good Nova Scotians, who could not brook such a scoff from a mere Canadian.

Another admirable jest, which did not endear him to his fellow Kingstonians, was made shortly after the death of his personal and political enemy, Sir John A. Macdonald. A fund was being raised to erect the very fine memorial to Sir John which now graces the city park. The treasurer of the fund, greatly daring, ventured to ask Cartwright for a subscription. Sir Richard drew himself up haughtily. "No, sir, no, sir," he said. Then suddenly a grim smile broke out and spread over his face until the very tips of his whiskers and mustache were a twitch with the thrill of the coming jest. "Unless, sir, you will permit me to write the epitaph," Prof. W. L. Grant, in the Canadian Magazine.

HE PAID.

A wealthy man, well known for his extreme stinginess, drove up hurriedly in his carriage to the door of a celebrated doctor. He was in a state of acute discomfort and fear, from the simple fact that at the moment a piece of fish bone was sticking somewhere in the region of his throat. The doctor speedily removed the dangerous obstacle, and the gentleman breathed freely.

"Thank you, doctor," he exclaimed much relieved. "I'll never eat salmon again—never. And with what ease you removed it—a mere minute's operation, was it not? How much—a what is your fee?"

"Half-a-guinea," replied the doctor.

"For half a minute's work? Impossible!"

"But, consider for a moment!" said the doctor: "it's a salmon bone!"

"What has that to do with it?"

"Oh, a great deal," replied the doctor. "Had it been halibut or fresh haddock I should have charged less—perhaps five shillings; for codfish of eels, two-and-six would have been ample payment; mackerel, two shillings; while a red herring bone I might even have removed free of charge; but, salmon—well, really, sir, one has to pay for these luxuries."

And his patient paid.—Weekly Telegraph.

FOIBLES OF FASHION.

The rough faced goods are considered a bit smarter this year for strictly tailored costumes than those with the smooth surface, and those with the boucle finish have the first place. Among the number there are the velours de laine, wool sponge, ratine and other similar fabrics.

An especially good set in moleskin, which seems to have won the place of honor in the fur realm this season, shows the draped stole, with ends weighted by a long silk tassel in a shade to match. One end of this stole is longer than the other, reaching well below the waist, and is slit at then eck. Through this slashed end the other end is run, thus fastening the stole close to the neck, with the shorter end tugged in that tantalizing abandon which is the envy of all who have not learned the trick.

Artificial flowers are used in every possible way on all occasions. No one flower leads in popularity.

An excellent door stop can be made with a piece of metal bent as shown in the sketch. The metal is fastened to the wall against which the door swings, and the end bent so that the doorknob fits it and prevents it from striking the wall.

HER LIMITATIONS.

A teacher asked her pupils to draw a picture of that which they wished to be when they grew up. The pupils went to work, some drawing pictures of soldiers, sailors, policemen, fine ladies, etc.

They all handed in the result of their work, except one little girl, who sat quietly, her hand in front of her and her pencil in her hand.

"Well, Sarah, don't you know what you want to be when you grow up?" asked the teacher.

"Yes, I know," answered Sarah, with a worried look, "but I don't know how to draw."

"What is it you want that you can't draw?"

"I want to be married."

A COUNTRY'S BEST DEFENCE (Philadelphia Record.)

It seems like the beating of swan into plowshares and of spears into pruning hooks for Paris to buy of the French Government the dismantled fortification of the city, level the ramparts, sell the land into parks and recreation grounds. We fear the significance of this move is at least suggestive. If nations spent on the health of their children and the living conditions of their workers, a small part of what is spent on a vigorous defense any country can have a vigorous, independent and spirited population.

KEIR HARDIE'S MISTAKE.

(Detroit Free Press.) Hardie says, in effect, that since princes or nobles, more or less ornamental and superfluous personages, drink to excess, men employed in the extra-hazardous pursuit of railroading must be allowed to drink the same thing, and endanger the lives and limbs of those entrusted to their care, to say nothing of their own lives.

It seems to be pretty poor business for a leading socialist and a man of presumably superior intellect to be advocating this sort of stuff. We do not know how the railroad men and other workers in Great Britain may feel about it, but we know that in this country conductors and engineers take immense pride in the fact that they are sober and fit, and do not respect the workmen generally prefer to set an example of good conduct to those who are weaker.

THIS BABY IS AN ATHLETE.

The 6-month-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Heath of St. Louis, is an athlete. The baby's name is Cora Marie.

Though she is not old enough to walk, Cora Marie has such strength in her hands that she can hold a horizontal bar, keeping her body suspended in the air for three minutes.

Her parents discovered she could do this trick through the tenacity with which she held to any object with which she was playing.

Several days ago the parents read of a 2-year-old child that could do tricks on a horizontal bar. Mr. Heath was sure their baby could do such tricks. She got a toy broom and offered it to the baby so that its hands could catch the handle of the broom at the centre.

Then Mrs. Heath took one end of the broom and Mr. Heath the other. The baby's hands tightened on the handle until the tips of her fingers were white. Mr. and Mrs. Heath lifted and the baby came out of its cradle, hanging on to the broom.

Dr. H. J. Foster, the Health family physician, says the baby is the best formed child he has ever seen.—Chicago Examiner.
