Waiting for a wind;
Hanging off and on;
These are the terms the sailors used
In days now past and gone.
Describing why their blessed ships
Were ever late in sailing,
And so lost out in making good
To owners left bewailing.
Too many now hang in the wind
On board another craft—
The craft preservative of crafts—
For some kind fate to wait
Them to port of trade and gain;
Not using brains or eyes
To note the means to make their way
Is here, and advertise.
The sailors used to whistle
A clear and lively note
To get the wind they longed to get;
This plan would get our goat
To-day, because a whistle shows
One has the wind already,
And all you've got to do, my son,
Is blow it strong and steady.

There is nothing worth having that can be had without labor: labor, therefore, and improve the time. If we neglect our Springs, our Summers will be useless and contemptible, our harvest will be chaff, and the Winter of our old age unrespected and desolate.
