TAKE PLENTY OF TIME TO EAT.
There is a saying that "rapid eating is slow suicide." If you have formed the habit of eating too rapidly you are most likely suffering from indigestion or constipation, which will result eventually in serious illness unless corrected. Indigestion begins in the mouth. Food should be thoroughly masticated and insalivated. Then when you have a fullness of the stomach or feel dull and stupid after dinner, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets. They relieve cases of stomach trouble and constipation have been cured by the use of these tablets. They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect. Sold by ALL DEALERS.

When a man dies we notice that many people have so many good words to say for him and perform in an ostentatious manner many kind acts. His former competitors in business attend the funeral and perform many kindly offices for the dead, when he is fairly out of the way. Now if these kind words were said when he was alive and pulling hard against the stream, he would have appreciated it more. But we have noticed at funerals men, who a few days or weeks before could not find words mean enough to use against the poor man in the coffin. You might as well stay away. The kindly offices after death are not appreciated by the man in the box, and the folks at the funeral only smile in their sleeves and size you up. Give your good works when they are needed. Do your good work when they will do good. Do not throw on the thin gauze of sympathy at the funeral, everybody can see through it.

An Automatic Buckle

A French coachman has invented a horse buckle that can be unfastened instantly from a distance. When such buckles are used on the harness of a carriage-horse, the driver by pulling an extra rope, can at once release the horse from the carriage, proceeding that is sometimes desirable when a horse starts to run away. The coachman will also be useful when a horse has fallen and is entangled in the harness. The new buckles will probably be adopted also on yachts and war ships, for use wherever to release certain parts of the rigging quickly, and aviators may use them on the framework of aeroplanes.

Down the Grade in the Culebra Cut

On the afternoon of May 20th, 1913, steam shovel No. 222 from the Forth and shovel No. 220 from the south, each working on the floor of the canal, met opposite the town of Culebra, completing a channel at the bottom level of the canal the entire length of the Culebra Cut. The canal will be completed when this channel has been widened to the required bottom width of 300 ft. To complicate matters several million cubic yards of material is being contributed by the various slides located near the Continental divide where the cut is deepest. Col. Goethals plans to continue the excavations by steam shovels until October or November of 1913, when the cut will be flooded and the remaining excavations will be taken care of by dredges. Vessels of moderate draft may be permitted to use the canal soon after the flooding of Culebra Cut.

Tillsonburg Doctors Fined

Dr. Bennett, Lanester, Reid and Weston were summoned before the police magistrate on Friday last charged with not having complied with the vital statistics act of 1908, which makes it compulsory to report all births forthwith. Crown Attorney Ball conducted the prosecution. The defendants pleaded guilty and were fined from $6 to $9 along with the costs. In each case the medical men had registered the births with the municipal clerk which they were not sufficient. The law requires two registrations, one from the doctor of the fact that the child is born and the names of its parents, and the same from the parents along with the name of the child. As the doctors had been provided with no blanks for the purpose, and had been given no warning that they were not strictly carrying out the provisions of the law, they naturally feel that they have been harshly dealt with, the costs in each being unnecessarily heavy.

Census Report.

A bulletin of the Census and Statistics Office issued June 13th by Mr. Archibald Blue, Chief Officer, gives preliminary estimates of the areas sown to the principal grain crops and reports on their condition at the end of May, according to the returns received from crop-reporting correspondents throughout Canada. The reports show that the month of May proved cold and dry with frequent night frosts and that these conditions, while favorable to seeding, retarded the growth of the crops sown and caused them to be unseasonably backward.

The total area under wheat in Canada is provisionally estimated at 9,816,300 acres, or 57,900 acres more than in 1912. The area in spring wheat being 4,980,500 acres, or 15,100 acres more. Oats occupy 9,908,500 acres compared with 9,216,900 acres in 1912, an increase of 691,600 acres. Barley occupies 1,425,200 acres, an increase of 19,000 acres and rye 128,500 acres, a decrease of 9,810 acres. For wheat, barley and oats taken together the increase represents 459,500 acres. The estimated acreage under hay and clover is 7,473,900 acres compared with 7,633,500 last year.

For the three Northwest provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta the total wheat area is estimated at 8,013,800 acres, as compared with 8,861,800 acres that of oats at 5,207,700 acres compared with 4,913,900 acres and that of barley at 862,800 acres compared with 809,800 acres. These differences representing increases of 152,000 acres for wheat, 293,800 acres for oats and 42,800 acres for barley, or 388,600 acres for the three crops.

On May 31 the condition of the crops was reported as generally favourable throughout Canada. Expressed in percentage of the usual standard of 100, taken as representing the promise of a full crop, the condition on May 31 for the Dominion was as follows: fall wheat 80.82, spring wheat 91.55, oats 91.72, barley 91.19, rye 87.70, peas 89.24, mixed grains 85.15, hay and clover 91.12, pastures 85.08 and alfalfa 77. At the corresponding date last year the condition of fall wheat was only 71.46. All the other crops were then above 90, excepting rye 87.24, peas 83.85 and mixed grains 87.72. The poor condition this year of alfalfa is due to the effects of the winter and cold spring.

Bridle for Women's Tongues

A grimy coin-male of Chester's early prowess in horse racing can be seen in the old parish church of Walton-on-Tames. It is a "gold's bridle," one of the numerous devices adopted by our unguiltless ancestors for keeping their "unfractured" under control, and is thus inscribed: "Chester presents Walton with a bridle To curb women's tongues that talk too idle."

The Western Fair LONDON, ONTARIO

The Management of the Western Fair, London, Ontario, have completed arrangements for the Attraction programme for their Exhibition this year, to be held September 5th to 13th. The Speed programme shows two events daily with the largest purses ever offered at the Exhibition. The platform programme will consist of the best music obtainable, and the best attractions money can buy. Fire-works of a very high class will be given each night. Full particulars will be given in the programme to be issued later. The midway will again be a feature, consisting of good, clean shows which will interest both old and young. Single fare railway rates will start on Friday, September 5th with special rates on September 9th, 10th, and 12th. All tickets good until the following Monday. All information on application to the Secretary, A. M. Hunt, Room 302 Dominion Savings Building, London, Ontario.

A Decaying People

In an editorial a few weeks ago, one of the leading journals called attention to the collapse of the Persian nation and its helplessness before the encroachments of Russia on the north and England on the south. The chief cause of the decay of this ancient people, who were masters of Western Asia until the time of the city state of Lattin, is found in a correspondent of the London Times in the shameful corruption of its governing class. The Persian populace is far from being wholly bad, and much may be given to the large section of it that is very poor. Here, as elsewhere in the east, the rural peasantry are the best of all. The peasant is not very different from the rest of the peasantry all the world over. He presents frequently the same appearance of cross stupidity, and possesses the same curious, observant shrewdness. He has the same objection to innovation and the same grasping thrift. Wherever the desert yields a little water, his grateful patch of cultivation is to be found, and the system of kanats, or deep underground irrigation system, is a striking testimony to his persistent industry. Yet the ranker from above has gone through all ranks, and has reached even the peasants in the villages of the wilderness. The highest standard of honesty and courtesy is to be found among the peasantry. It is an unpleasant characteristic of the poor Persian who can make a show of offering any service, although it be only the offering of a withered flower, to ask an immediate reward therefor. Nothing is left to the strangers instinct or generosity. But the illit or nomads, or perennit, a passing traveller with bread milk and cheese, and persistently refuse a reward on a plea that it is not their custom to accept one.

No language can be too harsh to describe the members of the aristocracy, whose grandiose titles might have been a reminder that noblesse oblige. With a few honorable exceptions, the Pillars and the Meteors of the State, the Lions and the Confidences of the Kingdom, the innumerable band of ed-wahls and el Muks possess neither common honesty nor moderate capacity. Intrigue is their only art, lying their most cultivated talent, and greed their sole inspiring motive. When throngs of waiting women clamored daily at the gates of a minister of finance for arrears of salaries due to their husbands, or for some small instalment long unpaid, he bought in their claims for a trifling, and helped himself to their face value from a treasury that could not pay its civil servants. The governor and the great men of the province combined to form a carting, and for all the miseries of the population from the famine prices of bread could make them enter a single kran of their ill gotten gains. During the seizure of Tabriz, the poor lay dying in the streets, the Persian leaders of the defense seized large warehouses full of grain, for which they had not paid a penny, and refused to sell except at the ruinous price that they fixed for their own profit.

If a soft piece of home-made bread is rubbed on a scorch on woollen goods it will remove it entirely. Oxalic acid and water in the proportion of one to twenty may be used to remove perspiration stains. A fool and his money are always together.

A very little lard used with butter in frying tomatoes cannot be detected and will make burning less likely. A few minced dates added to fudge as it comes from the stove will give a novel and dainty confection. Lots of mistakes of married life are home-made.

For the Merchant Who Doesn't Advertise

In these days of higher efficiency in the management of affairs, where do you find an advertiser? We invite you to become an advertiser in this paper; to join, if you have not already done so, the progressive merchants of this vicinity who have something of merit to sell and something of interest to say about it. Many a tale about your store or business is yet untold which if placed before our readers would rejuvenate your whole establishment. The time is out in the open today. The lives of merchants and manufacturers tell the public of the merit and superiority of his wares. The most successful enterprises in this County are so constantly before the public in the columns of The Record that when one thinks of the many articles of daily trade his mind turns to the particular makes whose advertisements are set forth in these pages.

Exit One Old-Fashioned Bachelor and Old Maid

Times are changing and we with them, and certain types of men and women seemed doomed to disappearance. The typical old maid is now no more, and the old bachelor of former days has also gone into oblivion. Where are the oldish single men that we need to meet in the world seen on the stage and read of in novels? Of these was the stern, hard man who saved his money, disowned his orphan niece and left his nephew with the proverbial shilling. Then as a pleasant contrast came the stout, genial uncle, with his heart full of kindness and his pockets full of money, and who acted as a substantial fairy godfather to all his friends and relations. And the worldly minded old bachelor must not be forgotten. He had dyed hair, and a make-up figure, played high, drove his own cab and was a mere doll in the hands of his valet. One wonders why these familiar types are now a dead letter. No doubt the modern secret of eternal youth has something to say on the subject. As there are now but few old ladies, so the oldish man has almost ceased to exist. And the fact that a man is unmarried keeps him young in taste, manners and appearance. The bachelor uncle of to-day looks like the brother of his niece and nephew. He plays golf with his nieces and nephews in his motor, takes her to balls and gives her dinners at restaurants. And as for his nephew, he shares his apartments with him, asks him on board his airship and joins him on a shooting trip to the Rockies.

The Tipping Evil

Mr. Littell McClung, in Lippincott's Magazine, discourses about the tip evil. We all do that at times, and it is about the only thing that we can do, lacking the pluck to do anything else. Mr. McClung is not wholly averse to tipping, but he draws a clear line between the legitimate tip and its illegitimate brother. The service which is invited ought, he says, to be rewarded if it is efficiently performed, but the service ought to be ignored. "I questioned him further, and he continued affectionately: 'When I demand service, such as the attention of a waiter, I am appreciative of what I receive. If the waiter does his best with the order and makes me enjoy my meal, he has earned a little money, and I tip him cheerfully. When I ask for service I tip judiciously if the service is satisfactory and if it is not satisfactory I fail to come across. For voluntary service nobody should tip. When I am waiting my hands in the washroom of a station and somebody hands me a towel I am reaching for already. I don't think I am obliged to shell out ten cents. If somebody insists on brushing me off without my suggesting it, he can expect nothing from me for his rudeness. If everybody followed this simple rule people would not be subjected to this voluntary service, which is more often an annoyance. Tipping would be what it should be—a stimulant to excellent service.'" But what's the use of talking? We all come through as soon as the extortioner fixes us with his admonitory eye. A friend of mine summed up the problem in a concise sentence. We went into a restaurant. As we passed through the doors an alert individual fairly jerked our hats out of our hands and gave us brass checks in return. When my hat parted I forked over a dime; for my hat, my friend failed to produce and ignored the scowl. Going out, he turned to me with the remark, 'I never tip for voluntary service.'

A good farmer is the land on which a good farmer lives.

R. R. TELFORD, Agent
Jarvis, Branch

There has been a good deal said of sentiment expressed in the press of late over the celebration of Mother's Day, but it would be very much more pleasant for thousands of good mothers, and very much more to the credit of the children, if the latter would celebrate "mother's day" every day in the year by obedience, courtesy and affectionate attention and consideration toward the said mothers. It is very well to wear a bouquet for mother on May 11th, but very much better is it to hand Mother a bouquet every day in the form of some little attention and thoughtful act. "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."
