THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I tried to induce rest and exercise in youth. I became very dependent and quiet care with the worst of it. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. I had a nervous headache, and the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were always numb, heart beat, memory poor, etc. A business in the firm was set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many different physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but without any benefit. I was induced to consult Dr. Kennedy & Kennedy, Windsor, Ont. I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a crowing hen I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so."

"Friend" Incident Which Made Game Dour in Windsor.

The proposal of the Dutch to guest at Zuphen a statue to Sir Philip Sydney recalls to mind the world-famed episode of the dying soldier, with which his death is inseparably connected. It occurred when that Paladin on September 22, 1588, received his death wound before the walls of Zutphen. Parched with thirst, he called for a drink.

As he was putting the bottle to his mouth his eyes fell upon a desperately wounded soldier, who as he was being carried past threw him longing glances, which Sir Philip perceiving, took the bottle from his lips before he drank and delivered it to the poor man with these words: "Thy necessity is yet greater than mine."

In the murder of Edward the Martyr in 979 a cup of wine played a tragic part. Wearing with the hunting the young monarch was persuaded to seek refreshment at Coris Castle, in Dorsetshire, the abode of his step-mother, the widowed Queen Elfrida. Upon his entrance she greeted him with a kiss and then, as he resisted her invitation to dismount, brought from the castle a goblet of wine. Even as the King raised it to his lips one of her retainers drew his dagger and with fatal effect plunged it into his back.

Every June the quaint old town of Rothenburg celebrates by a costume festival which goes by the name of "Meister-Drank" the mighty feat of a former town councillor who in 1591 saved the town from destruction. In that year Rothenburg fell before the arms of the savage Tilly, who at the head of the forces entered the vanquished town, where at the town hall he gave orders for the execution of the civic magistrates. Before, however, the doomed men were led forth to the scaffold the burgomaster's daughter presented herself bearing an immense flagon of wine, out of which the conqueror drank and passed it around to his officers.

All quenched their thirst and yet the flagon was only half empty. Seeing this, the fair Hebe remarked that one of the councillors present was able to empty the stoup at a draught. "If such be the case," cried Tilly, turning to the condemned magistrates, "I will pardon you all for the drinker's sake. Fill the flagon to the brim."

This was done, and then one of the city's magistrates, stepping forward seized the vessel, raised it to his lips and neither drew breath nor set it down until he had quaffed its contents to the last drop. Then only did he reverse the flagon in proof that the feat had been accomplished. Tilly kept his word, and every year in commemoration of their deliverance do the citizens of Rothenburg enact over again this famous event in their town's history.

The Correspondence of Royalty.

If one were asked to speculate as to the sovereign whose daily mail bag was the greatest one would hazard the Kaiser, says The London Globe. But no. Then most will say it ought to be. On the unimpeachable authority of a Paris contemporary we learn that the Pope is the recipient of the greatest number of missives. The mail of his holiness consists on the average of 23,000 letters, newspapers, etc. To go through this mass of 35 secretaries are kept employed. The President of the United States receives nearly 1,000 letters daily and about 4,000 journals and books. The Kaiser's mail consists of 4,000 letters and frequently the same number of books and papers. Our King, we learn, is favored with 1,000 letters a day and over 2,000 newspapers and books. The Czar is not overworked in this respect for a sovereign, his majesty's mail being given at 650 letters, etc., per day. The kings of Italy and Spain have to deal with about 300 letters each. Queen Wilhelmina is still more favored, with 150 letters, etc. But President Fallieres is still more fortunate, for we are told that he receives few letters and hardly any papers.

Our Sleep.

As a race we sleep too little. An infant's life is nearly all sleep. Gradually as the child grows older the hours of sleep are shortened to half the day or about eight hours. Youth until the age of twenty is reached requires fully ten hours' sleep. Although nature demands fewer hours' sleep in summer than in winter, it has been proved that eight hours of sleep are required for the average adult in good health. By this, explains the Pittsburg Dispatch, is meant not simply eight hours in bed, but that amount of good, sound, restful sleep night after night. Our power to work is intimately related to our ability to sleep, and there is no more reliable indication of sound health than the capacity to sleep naturally, and the more active and energetic the waking life the deeper the sleep.

RUBBER OYSTERS.

They Brought Wade and Saved Wade Invention From Failure.

"Rubber oysters laid the foundation of my success," said a millionaire hotel man.

"I had a small saloon in them days, and things looked very black. They looked, in fact, like bankruptcy. So in desperation I cut an old rubber doormat into oyster shaped pieces on April 1 and fried them in egg and breadcrumbs to a tasty brown.

"There was only one man in the bar when I fetched in that dish of smoking rubber oysters. His eyes glittered, and he grabbed a fork, jabbed it into a big fellow and took a hungry bite.

"Seeing the surprised look that spread over his face, I turned away to hide a smile. He gave an awkward laugh and said:

"Them's fine oysters. I'll bring a couple of the boys in to sample them."

"Sure enough, he brought two friends a half hour later. The friends no sooner saw the appetizing rubber oysters than, setting down their beer, they each sunk their teeth in one.

"They, too, sent in friends for oysters. I fried up no less than three old doormats and two overshoes that April fool day. The whole town laughed, and the papers printed funny stories about my joke. My joint got real popular.

"In short, I was saved—saved from bankruptcy by rubber oysters."—Washington Post.

A Light on Mothers.

The late William James, Harvard's famous psychologist, would often illuminate a misty subject with an appropriate anecdote. Discussing motherhood in a lecture on psychology, Professor James once said:

"A teacher asked a boy this question in fractions:

"Suppose that your mother baked an apple pie and there were seven of you—the parents and five children. What part of the pie would you get for your portion?"

"A sixth, ma'am," the boy answered.

"But there are seven of you," said the teacher. "Don't you know anything about fractions?"

"Yes, ma'am," said the boy. "I know all about fractions, but I know all about mother too. Mother'd say she didn't want no pie."

The Misguided Friend.

De Chapple—If there's any one nuisance I hate more than another it's a fellow who is always going around introducing people. There's Goodheart, for instance.

Bouttown—What's he been doing?

De Chapple—The idiot! The other day he introduced me to a man I owed money to, and I'd been owing it so long he'd forgotten all about me. Now I'll have to pay up or be sued.—London Telegraph.

Catching On.

Young Mr. Struckett-Ritch was eating his first meal at a real restaurant.

"What are those?" he asked, pointing at the finger bowls the waiter had just brought to the table.

"Those are to wash your fingers in, sir," said the waiter.

"Oh, I know that," rejoined young Struckett-Ritch, with remarkable possession. "I mean are they cut glass?"—Chicago Tribune.

Betty and the Kitten.

Betty is only four and often in her excitement she makes very odd remarks. The other day she cried out, "Oh, mother, there's a dear maitre kitten all curled up in the corner!"

A Feast For Willie.

Teacher—Willie, if you had five eggs in the basket and laid three on the table, how many would you then have? Willie—Eight.—Life.

His Light Diet.

The actor's sense of humor is always uppermost. He will jest about his hard luck, his ill luck or almost anything that offers an opportunity for a joke. Generally, too, he has courage—the courage to smile when his heart is heavy. A comedian, who was known to be in desperate straits, was invited to a social gathering one evening. When the poor actor arrived he was seen to be thinly clad, although the weather was bitter cold. He looked also as if he had not had any too much nourishment for some time. The hostess greeted him cordially.

"I am so glad to see you," she said.

"How well you are looking!"

"Yes," replied the comedian; "the wind has been very nutritious of late."—Saturday Evening Post.

ATE A WHOLE SHEEP.

One of the Feats of Nicholas Wood, a Famous Glutton.

The following account of a man named Nicholas Wood, famed for his gluttony, was written by John Taylor, the "water poet" of the seventeenth century:

Nicholas Wood was a Kentish yeoman. "Be it known to all men to whom these presents shall come," writes John Taylor, "that I, John Taylor, waterman of St. Saviour's in Southwark, will, with plain truth, bare and unadorned, treat of the remarkable actions of Nicholas Wood.

"He hath eaten a whole sheep at one meal; pardon me! I think he left the skin, the wool and bones; and presently after he hath swallowed three pecks of damsons. Two loins of mutton and one loin of veal are but three sprats to him. Once at Sir William St. Ledger's house, so valiant and staunch of teeth he showed himself, that he ate as much as would suffice thirty men, and afterwards he slept eight hours.

"One morning I sent for him to the inn to eat breakfast. He had already eaten one pottle of milk, one pottle of portage, and bread, butter, and cheese. He gave me thanks and said that if he had known any gentleman would have invited him to breakfast he would have spared his meal at home. Nevertheless he would do me the courtesy to show me some small cast of his office. Whereupon I summoned the hostess and commanded that all the victuals in the house be laid before my guest.

"The inn was slenderly provided, but six-penny loaves were mounted two stories high like a rampart, three sixteen penny veal pies, one pound of sweet butter, and a number of other dishes were set out, all of which were quickly brought to nothing."

Many sufferers from rheumatism have been surprised and delighted with the prompt relief afforded by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. Not one case of rheumatism in ten requires any internal treatment whatever. This liniment if for sale by all dealers.
