

LESSON XI—MARCH 16, 1913

The Test of Abraham's Faith.—Gen. 22: 1-19.

Commentary.—I. The command given (vs. 1, 2). After these things—After the birth of Isaac and the events subsequent to it as shown in the preceding chapter.

II. The test of Abraham's faith.—The test of Abraham's faith in God was given to him in the form of a sacrifice. It was the most severe and the most unusual of any that he ever underwent.

III. The sacrifice provided (vs. 11-14). Here we have Abraham's recognition of the voice of God and his response thereto.

IV. The covenant renewed (vs. 15-18). The covenant which God had made with Abraham was renewed to Isaac.

THE POULTRY WORLD

KEEPING POULTRY PAYS THE FARMER

Why should a farmer keep hens? For the reason that he keeps a pig or a cow, or sheep, because it pays. How many farmers have said that it does not pay to keep hens? They make the statement as a general proposition, applying to all classes and kinds of farmers under all conditions and circumstances, not as a specific case.

Practical Survey.—I. The test of spiritual character. In this lesson we contemplate one of the greatest saints subjected to the severest of tests, the last of a series which began when he was called to leave his country and his kindred at God's command.

II. The test of obedience. Abraham's obedience to God's command was complete. He had learned that all power to do right or to do wrong comes from God.

III. The test of faith. Abraham's faith in God was complete. He believed in God's promises and was willing to sacrifice for them.
