Value Of Space

SPACE VALUE IN THE JARVIS RECORD is worth more to those wishing to reach the homes of Jarvis than by any other method or use. This journal goes into all the homes all the time. It is appreciated and READ BY HUNDREDS.

If you want to rent an office, home, etc., there is no better way than through these columns. Likewise the sale or attention of any article. It is true our rates are just a little higher than some other journals, but value counts. There is more value in Jarvis advertising than the rate warrants. Try us!

SYMPATHY IN TWINS.

Curious Cases of Dual Suffering in Case of Children of Same Age.

Improbable though it may seem, there is good foundation for the statement recently made to the Chertsey Board of Guardians that a girl, now sixteen years of age, was struck deaf and dumb when she was two and a half years of age, following the sudden death of her twin sister. Scientific investigation has revealed some curious instances of "sympathy," as it has been termed, between twins. For instance, of thirty-five specially noticed cases, in no fewer than seven did both twins suffer from some special ailment or other exceptional peculiarity.

One curious instance is of two girls who, at the age of twenty, both found they experienced great difficulty in coming downstairs except very slowly and awkwardly. Two twins, at the age of twenty-three, were attacked by toothache, and in each case the same tooth had to be removed. There were also curious cases of coincidence in the falling off of the hair.

There is another case of twins in a Government office, one of whom sickened and died of Bright's disease. Seven months later his brother died of the same complaint. In nine out of the thirty-five cases, twins found they sickened from the same disease simultaneously, although neither was infected by the other.

Darwin has recorded a French case of two twin brothers, one living in Paris and the other in Vienna, who were attacked by rheumatic ophthalmia at the same moment. Each was certain, when consulting a specialist, that the other was suffering from a like complaint, and mentioned the fact. Subsequent letters confirmed this.

This case recalls that of the twin sons of a Birmingham manufacturer, who were passionately attached to one another. For close upon twenty years they had never been separated. Then one of them went to London. One day he was knocked down by an omnibus and killed. At the identical moment, as it was afterwards proved, that the accident occurred, the brother in Birmingham complained of being attacked by sharp and violent pains in the head, and he too died, a few days later, from some mysterious disease that the doctors failed to diagnose.

The Theban Sphinx.

The Theban sphinx was said to be a monster sent by Juno to lay waste the country around Thebes. It had the head and bust of a woman, the body of a lion and the wings of a bird, the paws of a lion and a human voice. It at once became the terror of the neighborhood and devoured all who could not solve the riddle which it propounded. "What animal walks on four legs in the morning, two at noon and three at night?" Oedipus, attracted by the promise of King Creon of his crown and his sister in marriage, came to Thebes and declared that man goes on all fours in infancy, erect on two legs when grown and supports the infirmities of age with a staff. On hearing this correct solution the sphinx dashed her head against a wall, and the land had rest.

Snake's Eyes.

Snakes may almost be said to have glass eyes, inasmuch as their eyes never close. They are without lids and each is covered with a transparent scale much resembling glass. When the reptile casts its outer skin the eye scales come off with the rest of the transparent envelope out of which the snake slips. This glassy eye scale is so tough that it effectually protects the true eye from the twigs, sharp grass and other obstructions which the snake encounters in its travels, yet it is transparent enough to allow the most perfect vision. Thus, if the snake has not a glass eye it may, at any rate, be said to wear eyeglasses.

The Largest Kitchen.

The largest kitchen in the world is part of a Paris department store. In this kitchen is prepared the food for the 4,000 employees of the establishment. The largest kettle holds 75 quarts, the largest pot holds 75 quarts, the largest frying pan, each of which is capable of holding 300 outlets at a time or of frying 200 pounds of potatoes. When there are omelets for breakfast 7,500 eggs are used. The coffee machine makes 750 quarts of coffee daily. There are regularly employed sixty cooks and a hundred kitchen boys.

Not a Distinction.

The detective was trying to get a few pointers from the man who had employed him to hunt for a runaway boy. "Has he any distinguishing marks about him?" he asked. "Yes," said the father, frowning impatiently. "The distinguishing mark about him, sir, is that he looks like me."

Olfactory Nerves.

The olfactory nerves are rendered useless for an hour by simply rinsing with cold water, and other fluids may destroy their efficiency far more. The anatomist Eyrich, who drew an infusion of tea into his nose with the idea of curing a cold, suffered loss of the power of smell for six months and throughout his life never completely recovered it.

Expecting Too Much.

Customer (sarcastically)—I've managed to cut this steak, but I'm bothered if I can chew it.
Waiter—Yes, sir. We guarantee our knives but our responsibility does not extend to our customers' teeth.—London Punch.

Your Days.

Every day that is born into the world comes like a burst of music and rings itself all the day through, and then shall make it a dance, a dip or a lift march, as thou wilt.—Carlyle.
