FINE RESULTS IN TWO WEEKS

Miss Nettie E. Callaghan, a wellknown young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash, and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face. My color was poor, and my blood evidently completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I went at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like this remedy for a long time, and now

Cut stripes of salt pork a finger long and about a quarter of an inch tatek, cut holes in each slice of liver with a charp-pointed knife and of giver with a marp-pointed kind and stick out each side an equal distance. When they are all "larded" put then into a warm skillet. Set over the fire and fry very slowly for five minutes. Turn each liver slice and fry again. If it cooks too fast it becomes hard and indigestible. too fast it becomes hard and indigestinie.

Fry again for ten minutes so as to give every part of the liver equal heat.

Twenty-five minutes is about the time required for cooking it. Take up each two tablespoons of the drippings and add two tablespoons of dry flour. Stir rapid-two tablespoons of dry flour. Stir rapid-by to keep from scorching and keep stirly to keep from scorening and keep sur-ring until every lump has disapeared. Turn into the fat and flour 2 cups of cold milk, stock or water, boil 5 minutes and serve by turning over the larded liver. A fine dish for either lucheon or dinner.

FIG HARVESTING.

Several Methods of Forcing the Fruit

The season for gathering the figs in Italy joins hands in October with the vintage, but it really begins in August, owing to a curious system of culture. Early in August the fig gatherers squirm through the twisting branches from tree top to tree top and "oil the fruit." These fig people are nomadic; they appear and disappear like the wandering harvesters of France. Late in July the masserie are rented to them, a stated sum being paid to the proprietor, a payment that gives to the fig gatherers the right to all the fruit, beginning with the figs and ending with the last cluster of grapes.

Rude huts thatched with straw are built by the proprietor in all his orchards, and in these the gypsy-like harvesters live with their families. Sometimes they supplement their narrow quarters with a ragged tent. Three sticks placed crosswise and a kettle in the crotch constitute the kitchen.

Shortly after their arrival the work of forcing the fruit is begun. The methods employed are curious. A wad of cotton is dipped in olive oil and gently rubbed on the flower end of the fig. Fig by fig is thus treated, and in eight days the fruit is ready for the market .

Another method consists in gathering in the spring the half-formed fruit, which new-looks improved, spirits rose, and is strung on ropes. These ropes or gar-I selt I was getting well. The fig. when perfectly ripe, exudes drop of honey-sweet juice at the nether end, which never falls, but hangs there, a standing temptation to children and When fresh picked at this stage the fig has a rich flavor entirely lost in the dried fruit. New York Sun.

PISHES IN STRATA.

Deep Sea Denizens Have Each Their Range.

When a disaster occurs at sea, and people read that some leviathan has gone down to the utmost depths of the cean, imagination is stirred in wondering what conditions surround her.

According to Sir John Murray, one of the greatest authorities on oceanography, the botton is a desert of pitchblack darkness, penetrating cold and eternal silence. Worms, sea puddings, and coral polyps sluggishly crawl or sway in the almost currentless depths, and only two species of fish, both of them small, with much head and little body, have been found deeper than a mile and a quarter down. The range of fishes in the sea is as though it were divided into layers, one above the other, and no fish can live above or below this layer. Thus many of the deeper fish-three-quarters of a mile below the surface-have been found floating at the top. They had swallowed a fish as large or larger than themselves, and its buoyancy had lifted them out of the strata to which they were accustomed.

The physiology of a bottom fish is almost impossible to know, because they are built to resist a tremendous pressure of water, and when this pressure is released-as when they are brought to the surface in a net, sometimes the pass the time of necessary waiting. fish has burst; the organs are crushed beyond reconstruction.

Similarly, if a fish of a higher stratum attacks a bottom fish in the neutral zone where both can live, and-as sometimes happens-his teeth become entangled so that he cannot let go, and I cured a horse of a bod swelling by he is dragged into deeper water he strangles instantly, for his breathing arrangements are of no use to him under | The light is the best and the ventusthose above or below them.
