THE CLOCK OF DEATH.

It Was the First Astronomical Timepiece Made in England.

The clock at Hampton court palace derived its unpleasant title by reason of a superstition that whenever any one long resident in the palace dies the clock immediately stops. It is of record that when Anne of Denmark, the queen of James I. died the old timepiece was striking four and that it stopped almost before the last stroke sounded. Since that time it is said to have repeated this grisly proceeding each time a royal personage within its jurisdiction died.

At any rate, the clock has an interesting history quite aside from this. It was the first astronomical timepiece made in England, being constructed in 1540 for Henry VIII. Thirty-two years ago it was brought out of a shed where it had lain neglected for nearly half a century, and by order of the then secretary of the office of works it was re-erected in the courtyard opposite the entrance to the state apartments. There is historical evidence to the effect that it was built by one Nicholas Cratzer, a German astronomer who came to England at the invitation of Cardinal Wolsey.

This old timepiece tells the hour, the month, the day of the month, the position of the sun and the number of days since the beginning of the year, the phases of the moon and its age, the hour at which it crosses the meridian and the time of high water at London bridge. The time required to wind it is half an hour every week. The weights have a descent of over sixty feet.—Harper's.

THE VANISHING SEA COW.

A Marine Curiosity That is Rapidly Nearing Extinction.

One of the largest fish that has inhabited the waters of the gulf of Mexico and the south Atlantic coast of this country and which is almost extinct is known as the manatee. It was found in great numbers a century ago, and even a few years back this creature was quite plentiful in certain localities.

It is very gentle for a large fish and easily captured in heavy nets, which are usually stretched across the mouths of rivers emptying into the south Atlantic or the gulf of Mexico. The flesh is very delicious and brings a high price, having a strong resemblance to the very finest veal. The skeleton is valued at $100, and the skin if removed properly and cared for by those who understand its properties will bring a like amount.

This fish is often from ten to twelve feet in length and weighs about 2000 pounds. It is so gentle it will not strike the light craft that happens to be near it, and when captured it shows no resistance whatever.

It is safe to say that in the next quarter of a century this creature will become extinct unless specimens are preserved simply to prevent the complete loss of one of our most wonderful sea creatures.

It lives wholly on salt water vegetation and grows found in the mouths of the rivers emptying into the sea.—New York World.

The Spell of London.

The greatest of modern French poets, Paul Verlaine, fell instantly under the spell of London, even though he came to it as an exile to earn a wretched living as a teacher of French. "As a whole," he wrote, "it is very unexpected and a hundred times more amusing than Italy or Paris or the banks of the Rhine." And again: "The docks are wonderful—Carthage, Tyre, all rolled into one." He deplored the lack of clean cafes, but nevertheless, "No matter, this incredible town is very well, black as a crow and noisy as a duck." In Verlaine's view London had no monuments except the docks. He ignored Westminster, the Tower and all the sights. For him they do not seem to have existed.—London Chronicle.

Uncle Sam's Public Printer.

The United States public printer has charge of all business relating to the public printing and binding. He appoints the officers and employees of the government printing office and purchases all necessary machinery and material. The foreman of printing has charge of all matter which is to be printed. The following are the official heads of the several departments: Public printer, secretary to the public printer, attorney, deputy public printer, Congressional Record clerk, superintendent of work and superintendent of documents.

Tuppence Saved.

McAndrews (the chemist at 2 a. m.)—Two penn'orth of bicarbonate of soda for the wife's indigestion at this time o' night when a glass of hot water does just as well. Sandy (hastily)—Weel, weel, thanks for the advice! I'll no bother ye, after all. Good night!—Pearson's.

Defined.

"Pa," said the young hopeful, "what does dining a la carte mean?" The father did not know, but he did not wish to show his ignorance. "It means," he explained, "that is—er—it means eating in a lunch wagon."—Exchange.

Wedded Bliss.

Wife—So you don't like my new dress. Well, I'm not surprised. You haven't half the taste that I have. Husband (sarcastically)—Our marriage proves that.—London Telegraph.

We know best what we are least conscious of knowing.—Samuel Butler.

EDITORIAL

Thrones visited the Store last Saturday but never a crowd. The reason for this is that the big building large as it is, hasn't in it a waste corner or a stubble field anywhere.

The large spaces enables us not only to give roominess for all departments but to be roomy all over to prevent the jostling which most people hate. Really the more space we have the more we seem able to do for our kind patrons.
