Several of the ladies whose hats did not correspond to the requirements of the law were told they could either leave their plumes at the customs office, go without their bats or else return to Windsor for more simple headpieces. A majority agreed to re-move the offending plumes, while others indignant at what they declared to be an infringement on personal privilege, left the office with their hats and their heads in the air and returned to Windsor. (Jack Canuck, Conservative.) Hon. Dr. Montagne.-When the gent. in question accepted the office of Minister of Public Works in the Cabinet of Sir R. P. Roblin, in Manitoba, the last of the "nest of traitors" came back. Of course all those interested in politics during the past twenty years or so know who they were. Twas in the stirring times of 1896 the awful thing happened. Old Sir Mac Bowell having turned down his Orange brethren, found his Cabinet Ministers lined up against him, but refused to resign. So they cheerfully handed him the axe. Then the merry little row in the Conservative party broke out and the party went out of office. One by one, the "nest of traitors" came back, in spite of the bitter opposition of the recreant Orangemen, old Mac Bowell, who for a time thought the whole Conservative party was going to fight his battles .-Not one of the nest of traitors will ever get back into public life again," he used to say; but, like many another man, he found people had something better to do than to fight his battles, and allow his pect of a great party. So one by one the nest of traitors" arrived on the scene again, and the last to come is Hon. Dr. Montague. In days of old the round doctor was counted one of the hest debaters in the Conservative ranks, and lived right up to his reputation. A likable suave man, with a merry smile always on tap, and a cheery story just will do for you, whether you have acute round the corner; people who used to or chronic troubles. know him in Ottawa in the old days said he would make a great real estate agent. fact that it came from Roblin, who as a "Ray of Quinte boy," as he likes to style glove with old Sir Mac, But evidently even his best friends know by this time well, but he is in the wrong field.
