VARICOSE VEINS CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.
Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Dr. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and reliable. I wrote them and got the New Method treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

HENRY C. LOCUR.

It is Canada's gain that conservation—that mutually profitable co-operation of nature and man—had begun to come into its own while yet the country possessed thousands of square miles of secluded animal haven and untouched forest. Canada has seen in other countries the wastefulness of experience in time to protect the quiet breath of nature's calm repose.

It was thirty years ago that this country stepped in with a determined will to retain some of her native simplicity. The first transcontinental, the Canadian Pacific Railway, was aiming for the Rocky Mountains on its way to the Pacific coast. The mountains of British Columbia were utterly unknown, except where a few livestock engineers had struggled through in search of a way for the steel.

But even the slow-making wheels of officialdom began to revolve in time, and steel was still away out on the prairie when, in one quick revolution, the entire eastern slope of the Rockies was set apart as a huge reserve, a five-hundred-mile strip where the native wealth of the country might find permanence and peace.

But not for twenty-five years or more did that first bold stroke of wisdom develop into a complete system of conservation able to meet all contingencies that could arise from sudden corporate or individual greed.

In 1908 the construction of transcontinental lines became the policy of the two other great Canadian railways. One hundred and fifty miles north of the C.P.R. line the Yellowhead Pass was discovered to offer a way to the Pacific through mountains and valleys that had scarcely even been seen. The approach to the Rockies from the prairies was included in the blanket reservation of the early 'eighties, but so far north there had never been found necessary any formal system of protection for game and forest; and the construction camps of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway were fast nearing this unpraised treasure house without a legal guardian of the old informal law in sight.

Once more the wheels began to turn, and again a single sweeping movement established special protection for five thousand square miles along the route to be followed by the new railway. Before the first mark of construction, rangers were sent into this area, and to Canada has been preserved a realm of primeval glory probably unsurpassed on the American continent.

Jasper Park, as it was named, commenced about 200 miles west of Edmonton, Alberta. Westward it continued to the summit of the Yellowhead Pass, the dividing line between Alberta and British Columbia, and the watershed that sends its streams in one direction to the Pacific Ocean and in the other far up to the Arctic.

Jasper Park derives its name from a man whose life was spent in the shadow of the Rockies, and whose memory is preserved in much of the nomenclature of the district. In 1817 Jasper Dawes was placed in charge of the Hudson Bay trading post established seventeen years before in the centre of what is now the park.

Dawes' industry and his popularity among the Indians made this post one of the most profitable in the possession of the company.

It was from his shock of yellow hair, called the name Yellowhead, applied to the pass he discovered, a lake and a river. The French of it, Tete Jaune, attached itself to a valley fifty miles beyond the summit, to an Indian village near which Dawes established a cache, and now to one of those blights of civilization, an end-of-steel village. His first name of Jasper came to the park and to its largest lake.

A MARVELOUS ESCAPE
"My little boy had a marvelous escape," writes P. F. Bastians of Prince Albert, Aspe of Good Hope. "It occurred in the middle of the night. He got a very severe attack of croup. As luck would have it, I had a large bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. After following the directions for an hour and twenty minutes he was through all danger. Sold by ALL DEALERS."

Octogenarian Cuts Molars.
To live to the age of 88 years and then cut her wisdom teeth is the unusual experience of Mrs. Holmes Crawford, a well-known resident of the east end of Toronto, who within the past few weeks has cut no less than eight molars. Despite her advanced age, Mrs. Crawford feels little the worse for her experience, though she states that her eyesight has been a little affected.

Mrs. Crawford is the daughter of the late Jacob Fike of the Township of Hope, who had the distinction of harboring William Lyon Mackenzie when a price was being offered for his head during the rebellion of 1837. Mackenzie, fleeing from the Government troops, reached the Fike home, and was there sheltered for the night.

Mrs. Crawford was then a child of twelve, but she distinctly remembers combing the hair of the patriot after he had eaten his breakfast. He was then smuggled into a haymow and there hidden from the view of the searching soldiery.

Accepted by the Academy.
The hanging of a picture at the annual exhibition of the Royal Academy is a gratifying occurrence in the artistic career, which does not lose its flavor as the years of effort go by and the studio expands. Mr. Ernest Wallace has received the welcome news that his pictorial presentation of the classical story of "Actaeon Surprising Diana," which was sent last March, has found favor in the eyes of the members of the Hanging Committee. This is the fifth year that Mr. Wallace's work has won acceptance by these high authorities in London, and he is to be congratulated on his series of achievements.

Boy Scouts as Gardeners.
The Boy Scouts of Regina are to render first aid to the low cost of living campaign there, it having been announced by the Town Planning Commission that the boys are to be given the use of vacant lots around the city for market gardens.

The produce for the first year will be sold by local dealers, later by the Regina Boy Scouts' Market Garden Produce Co. Other towns in Saskatchewan are expected to take up the idea.
