Although Omana women cannot vote, orders recently issued from the different departments of the city government give them more privileges than they enjoy in any other city in the country.

While Milwaukee, Chicago, St. Louis and other western cities have been terribly aroused over the question of bathing suits for women, out here they are more liberal. "Anything that men can wear, women can wear," is the motto at the Rod and Gun Club bathing beach. The "one-piece" bathing suit is the usual and regular thing and many of the women wear men's bathing ouite

"Spooning in city parks is all right," cave Park Commissioner Hummel. "What do people suppose parks are for, anyway? If they can't spoon in the parks, where can they spoon?"

So Omaha's parks have lots of nice, quiet, dark nooks and corners, and while there are park policemen in plenty, these guardians always stay out in the open walks where they can be seen before they can see. "Let 'em spoon" is the order the Park Commission ordered come time ago.

Slit skirts: "They can wear them slit high enough to show the knee, but no higher," says Chief of Police Henry W. Dunn. "I have issued orders to the natroimen to arrest all women whose alit skirts show the top of their hose. I'll have nothing so indecent on the streets of Omaha-and I don't believe Omaha women will wear them cut that high, anyway."

Chief Dunn says he does not care how ultra-thin are the hose worn with these long slit skirts, but he won't stand for rips and holes in the fabric. "But Omaha women won't stand for them, either," says the chief.

Omaha is a splendid city for the new transparent skirt, too. The sun is bright out here, and when the wearer of the light filmy stuff gets' between the man with two eyes and the afternoon oun, the effect is startling. But the police have orders not to interfere. If any Omaha woman wants to walk down Farnum street with a gossamer sort of dress arranged for its transparent effects, she will not be stopped by an officer of the law. On July 16, in the little fishing village of Perce, on the Quebec shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, a memorial was unveiled to Sir William Edmond Logan, Kt. L.D. F. R. S. founder and first director of the Geological Survey of Can ada. The day selected for this interesting event was the occasion of the visit of seventy members of the International Geological Congress to the Gaspe country and the memorial was erected by the congress to commemorate the important official services of Sir William Logan which began in Gaspe in 1842. The memorial is a bronze slab bearing a strong and effective medallian portrait of Sir William accompanied by a suitable inscription and is the highly artistic work of Mr. Henri Hebert, of Montreal. RACIAL CRANIUMS.

Differences in Shape Usually Indicate the Race.

The study of hears reveals some in-teresting facts. One is that the left side of the head is almost always larger than the right, due, it is said, to the universal practice of using the right hand more than the left. Another curious point is that nationality considerably affects the shape of the head. It in the house 'fore I c-could get at him.' would surely be an intresting subject for a biologist to explain why it is that the nearer the equator a race resides the rounder-their heads become.

No one needs reminding of the round bullet-shaped skull of the negro, but the hatter will assure us that a Frenchman's head is rounder than an Englishman's, and similarly an Englishman's rounder than a Scotsman's. The average Scotis head tapers considerably toward the comes square and prominent at the forehead. German heads, on the average, are rounder than English, and broader at the beck. Irish dears, in general, are long, like the Scotch, but scarcely as narrow.

The Slavonic head is narrow in front and very broad at the beack. When the recent Peace Conference took place. in London a few months ago, the first thing that the delegates of the Balkan States did on arrival was to call on Messrs. Heath with a demand to be immediately fitted out with the top hats that their new position necess tated: and that famous firm was wellnigh nonplussed to provide, at instant notice, hats of so totally unusual shape.

But the native Indians are most enthusiastic, according to J. Jamieson, a traveler and lecturer, who has recently returned from those parts. The blankets are made from the bark of a tree which is cut particularly thin. It is pounded and moistened and then pounded some more and put out in the sun to dry. After battling for three hours with a ool of huge sharks entangled in their nets in Halfmoon bay, four Italian fish-ermen managed to kill and land three of the monsters. So exhausted were the men by the long struggle that they were oblidged to surrender their nets to three still larger sharks which escaped, car-rying with them $300 worth of fishing gear. Captain Dominic Ghio and his mate, Florin Ghio, had hardly put out their bass nets when a school of sharks pursuing the bass rushed into the meshes. sharks were of the trasher variethe shares while of the the blows with their long tails, they made havoc of the nets and threatened to smash in the stout planking of the boats. Two other fishing boats came to the aid of Ghio usning musts came to the aid of Ghio and Canipa, and, after three hours of desperate fighting, the united crews succeeded in clubbing three of the sharks into submission. But the largest of them all, with two others, could not be subdued, the nets slipping from the fingers of the exhausted men, and the monster and his companions swept off with the trailing meshes.

The largest of the captured sharks when brought to Fisherman's wharf measured sixteen feet in length and measured sixteen feet in length and weighed over 400 pounds. The others were scarcely smaller. Captain Ghio was possitive in asserting that the mons-ter that carried on his nets was equal in length to his 30-foot boat.
