Seeding is Started

Winnipeg, April 2.—Seeding has been started in the southern portions of all three middle western provinces...

The most optimistic reports come from Alberta, where, according to the statement of the minister of agriculture, conditions are fully three weeks in advance of last year...

The only districts which need rain at the moment are eastern Saskatchewan and western Manitoba. From Brandon west to Broadview in Saskatchewan, reports say, seeding operations would be helped considerably by a fall of rain...

What a Girl Owes to Her Mother

(By Mrs. T. N. Tefft.)

What does a girl owe her mother? Especially a good mother, one who has tried to train her daughter in the right way.

I have heard people say if a girl goes wrong it is all in the training but that is not always the case, I don't think a girl (or most girls at least) ever realizes what she owes her mother until she is married and has children of her own.

They are too apt to take what mother does for them as their right. They would feel terrible if anyone even suggested that mother did not love them, but how many wait till there is a mound in the burial ground before they fully realize how much it meant to them.

In the first place a girl owes her mother obedience, and she owes it to her mother to be cheerful and help make home as happy as possible. She must not keep all her smiles and good nature for strangers and outsiders. Cheerful faces help to drive trouble and care from mother's face.

Home is the safest place for any girl, and if she would always confide in mother, how many heartaches she would escape. She cannot have a more sincere friend or better counselor than her mother.

If mother's ways are old-fashioned and not what she would like then to be, remember mother has sacrificed much for her daughter and has not kept up with the times as much as the younger generations. So a girl owes her mother much more than she can ever repay.

MADE HEAD OF THE RED CROSS HOSPITAL IN WILTSHIRE.

Conflict of the European Powers

Meanwhile the Slavs of Bulgaria are under Hungarian rule; and here, as in Bosnia and Herzegovina, promises of local self government have never come to anything more than words. Thus the northern half of the Serbian race is still under the Austrian empire.

In the fall of 1912 the Serbians mobilized 200,000 men in the first three weeks, and later added 145,000 more to the number.

But the fruits of this war were in part taken from them by Austria, whose diplomatic activity was responsible for the ruling of the powers, which compelled the Serbians to give up part of their conquests in Albania.

But the Serbian victories in Macedonia and the Greek capture of Saloniki put an unexpected obstacle in the way of Austria's march to the south. No more could the dual monarchy hope to inherit Saloniki and the land between that port and the frontier of Bosnia on the final downfall of Turkey; Serbia was now squarely across her path.

The conflict among the European powers, if a clash cannot be averted, will bring two great groups into opposing array. It will be the third time in five years that the triple alliance (Germany, Austria and Italy) and the triple entente (Russia, Great Britain and France) have been brought face to face in hostile attitudes.

Germany threatened the east's country in 1908, and two years later presented to France a demand for a large territorial grant in Morocco because the French protectorate there had been recognized. Russia, France and Great Britain apparently were ready to contest Germany's resentment has been bitter.

In Tripoli, Italy defeated Turkey, regarded as a German ally. Subsequently came the collapse of Turkish power in Europe and the increased strength of the small Balkan states. Today these minor states bar Austria from the Aegean, and Serbia threatens Austria with the union of southern Slavs.

The Balkan alliance was undoubtedly a Russian move, to counteract which Austria promoted dissension among the Balkan allies, leading to a second war among those states. But Serbia defeated Bulgaria, Austria's support of Bulgaria had alienated Roumania. Servia began to cast longing eyes on Bosnia and Herzegovina. Roumania wanted its millions of countrymen in Hungary.
