Pearl studied his face; then she

"That's what they all say!" The sailor's eyes danced as he kissed her bruised mouth; then he was gone. This time Pearl did not look for a present. She would have preferred the sailor back again. But the gift came. It was a brooch set with a genuine ruby. Heine bought the uneut stone from a lascar mess attendant. It cost him $65 to have it cut and polished. and the ruby was valuable.

"To match your lips-from Heine," was the word that came with the iewel.

Pearl's heart was filled with fear. Sailormen who sent presents never came back. Did she not have cream and rose pearls from the remittance man in Ceylon and a black diamond to rival her eyes? There was only one other man whom she had longed to see from Ontario to help in the great again—an English mate who sent her a perfect pair of pigeon blood rubies from Bombay. The jewels were torn from the eyes of a Hindu god, and the Hindus tore the mate's eyes from his head in revenge. But Pearl did not know this. She fastened Heine's gift on her bosom and put the other jewels

> Heine was discharged from the naval service shortly after his visit to Hawaii, and, without informing Pearl, he returned to Honolulu. He had served a jeweler's apprenticeship before entering the navy and soon found employment in a local store as an engraver. He purchased a little bungalow in Kalihi with the savings of his naval cruise and kept out of sight in Honolulu as much as possible, wishing to avoid meeting his sweetheart until he could surprise her with a complete arrangement for housekeeping.

One day as he bent over his engraving tools his heart gave a great bound as Pearl's voice floated through the lattice partition. She was talking with aborne Jet., Sharbot Lake or Ren- a number of jewel boxes spread out on the counter between them. The jewel-

"Do you get all these as presents,

"Oh, of course. The sailers-they are ronto to Sudbury and Sault Ste Mar- so good to me," she laughed. "But what are they worth-pins, brocches, rings, watches and all?"

The ex-sailor sank back, stunned. A look crept into his face that his commanding officer had seen when his boatswain's mate reported "both anchors carried away, sir," as the disabled Shark wallowed with the wind toward the thundering rocks of Cape Flattery. Heine had trusted his anchors. Now he thought of his early training-of his sisters and the girls The Western Fair of London, Ont- back in the Kansas home-his standards of honor for w

A few days before the China mail came in Heine was startled again by his sweetheart's voice. He heard every word as she offered the pigeon blood rubies for sale. The jeweler was in ecstasies. The stones were flawless and perfectly matched. A deal was made for a beautiful diamond incrusted watch in exchange for a number of jewels, including the rubies.

Heine had never seen the girl more beautiful. Her face, shaded by a wide hat of delicate straw and rich flowers, seemed touched with the brush of melancholy. Her neck was bare, and the point of the low V of her white gown was secured by a ruby brooch-

"I'll take this one," she was saying, "and you must cut these words in the

She stood there gazing wistfully at the watch for a long time. When she had left the store the jeweler brought it back to his engraver.

"Get this out as soon as possible," he said, depositing the watch with the slip of words to be engraved.

Heine glanced at the slip. It read "To Heine-from Pearl." Pushing back his stool, he sprang to his feet and faced the jeweler. "I've been judging that little Kanaka girl all this time from a wrong standpoint!" he shouted; then, hatless and coatless, he dashed from the building.

"Heat's getting in its work," the jeweler mumbled to himself. "That's the trouble with these newcomers-can't stand the heat." and he shook his head sadly, for the newcomer was an excellent engraver, and he let the gin alone. Heine overtook the girl in front of the Young hotel, and there, utterly oblivious of the staring public, he caught her again in his arms, kissing her perfeet mouth, no longer bruised, but seft as a red hibiscus blossom.
