Where girls with pright glances are seeking romances,
And cool woods would backon to me,
Where roaming and boating and swimming and floating

Tomality put out of curi. ming and floating
Formality put out of curl.
And soft is the heart of the summery

Of summer resorty girl.

I've tried every jolly and dangerous folly
The prodigal city affords;
I've toyed to satiety with each variety
Of the bait served us on swords;
And none of it thrills me—with ennui
it fills me—
And yet I'd get all in a whiri
Could I ramble apart at some summer

But just take to the woods, run away from your moods.

ADVERTISING.

(Pittsburg Gazette-Times.) Advertising is the connecting link between the merchant and the customer. There is not a doubt that daily advertisements, in which there is a comprehensive and specific presentation of facts, rigures and specific presentation of facts, figures and commodies, are read with the same avidity as news reports and usually with greater care and a more definite end in view. Therefore, the merchant who fails to advertise is not sixing up to his real opportunities and is not alive to the first aid in prosperity

A Military Compliment.

During the South African war an order was issued to the men of the Highland regiments that they must cover up their tartan kilts as they made too good targets for the enemy. The order proved very unpopular and caused a great deal of dissatisfaction among the soldiers concerned. When Sir George White heard this he thought of a way out of the difficulty.

That them cover up only the front of their kilts," he said. "The enemy will never see the other side."—Lendon Anonemic in the fashionable, it seems, than sentimental.

Strange how many beginners fail to heed the advice of known experts in poultry. A few years of experience, however, puts the beginner right. Yet time and money could often be saved if the advice of those who have made good in poultry was heeded.

There is yet much to learn in poultry. Our best experts do not know it all, but the foundation has been laid to successful poultry, and the advice given by those who have and are making good should be carefully considered.

who have and are making good should be carefully considered.

The better the care the chicks receive the more rapid the growth, and quicker maturity to the producing of eggs for the winter markets. A well-grown chick from good stock is a profit-payer.

The utility question is at its height. Now watch for the reaction, not that utility is not a good thing to have in the flock. In fact, it is the first consideration, but the claims made by some called utility is almost a crime against the name, one on seeing them on the farm American fowls. If it were not for the name, one on seeing them on the farm would call them common scrubs. All shapes, all sizes and looking anything but like the breed of variety they are named after. The only recommendation they have is the name utility, and that means to some only egg production.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

The 'tailored maid" in midnight blue seems to be just as popular in June as she was at Eastertime. The sombreness of the "midnight darkness" is lightened a bit by cuffs and collars of old gold or tan-and these glowing tints, by the way, are much smarter for cuffs and collars than white linen.

TRICKS OF BULLETS.

Occasionally They Defy All Rules and Make Queer Flights.

It has been truly said that, once you fire a bullet from a modern rifle, none can forecast what it will do or where it will ultimately come to rest. Even when a bullet has an uninterrupted course, says Mr. Frank Scadamore in the London Globe, it is capable of upsetting all known calculations of its flight and range. Before the Battle of Omdurman a sick officer was taken across the Nile and placed under an awning at least 5,500 yards from the nearest point of possible fire. This should have ensured him an ample margin of safety, but none the less a stray bullet ate up the intervening three miles of desert, struck him in the head and killed nim.

Shortly before the Battle of Giniss, in Sudan, General Sir Archibald Hunter, Colonel Hacket-Thompson, C. B., and another officer whose name escapes me were reconnoitering through an opening in the wall of a disused sakeeyeh, or waterwheel. The hole in the wall was so small that the officers had to stand one behind the other to see anything. The officer whose name I forget was in front using a pair of binoculars, while Sir Archibald Hunter was in the rear. The glint caused by the setting sun shining on the glass of the binoculars attracted the attention of a dervish who, together with others, was retiring along the Nile. He stopped, took aim, and fired. It was a very good shot, for it sped through one lens of the binoculars, through the brain of the officer holding them, killing him on the spot, through the shoulder of Colonel Hacket-Thompson, and finally lodged in the breast of Sir Archibald Hunter, where, I believe, it remains to this day.

The vagaries of a bullet when it touches the human frame are almost beyond relief. During another Sudan battle I saw an officer, a friend of mine, go down apparently shot through the head. To my surprise after the battle apparently none the worse save that his head was bandaged. Then he showed me how a bullet, striking and deflected by one of the hooks of his helme, chain, had a groove under the skin, and had then glanced off the hearst hook on the other side.

TRACING COUNTERFEITERS.

The Secret Service Agents Have a Splendidly Effective System.

Some time ago one of the local banks caught during the day a counterfeit ten dollar bill. It was such a clever counterfeit it would pass anybody but an expert. The next day ten or fifteen more of the bad bills were found in the city.

Then the government's machinery to protect its currency began to work. But there was nothing mysterious about its working. in the office of the secret service here an official sat all afternoon smoking and looking at specimens of counterfeit currency. Huge clouds of smoke rose from his pipe. That kept up all day. The reader of detective tales who believe the secret service works in a mysterious way would have been distinctly disappointed. But at last the pipe dropped from the lips of the man sitting at the desk in the federal building with a whole pile of greenbacks infront of him. He took up two bills and compared them carefully. Then he studied them again. noting every little curve and characteristic mark. He stepped to the telephone and called the United States prison at Leavenworth.

"Was James Hard, alias Stewart, alias Nolan, in prison?" No. James of the two aliases had been out six months. Then telegrams went out to certain officers in certain cities. How they located James Ward the government keeps as a secret. Later the counterfeiter was arrested at Springfield, Ill., and his outfit for raising bills was found with him. And so another counterfeiter was caught and put out of business. How was it done? Simple enough-if you helong to the secret service. Every counterfeiter has some distinguishing characteristic in his work, some little curve or break in a line that gives him away. The secret service agents compared the new counterfeit with dozens of old counterfeiters. At last he found the telltale distinguishing characteristic. And the rest was easy.

ies all over the American continent, there are to-day ten thousand housewives and more, who also are doing their marketing. But many of them are doing it in a kimono and a lacefrilled boudoir cap, with no more exertion than taking down a telephone receiver. What is the price per pound of the lamb chops that Madame Manhattan is ordering? Really, she has never troubled to inquire. Loes she know that there is a shortage in peas to-day that has made them jump in price? And that peaches this month are costing twice as much as they will next? Rut these are details in domestic economy that she has very likely wholly mirsed. A voice at the other end of the wire "sends them over," and "charges it." Presently there is the butchers boy and the baker's boy and the grocer's toy calling up the dumb-waiter shaft, and a succession of packages has arrived on the kitchen table. The marketing for the day is done-until the maid remarks that she "forgot, but the breakfast bacon is

For every dollar expended by the American-housewife on food for the home table, twenty-five cents goes to pay for transportation. Seven hurdred million dollars' worth of food stuffs and relief I met him walking about are consumed annually in New oyrk City, and that means a cost of one hundred and seventy five million dollars for transportation. All if it isn't for railroad freight. Some of it is for the grocery wagon that is always runrun right around his forehead, cutting ming up and down the street every time a housewife happens to think of something else. In Paris there is no delivery wagon running up and down this boulevard for these bousewives with a filet in either hand. They carry home their own packages. It helps to keep down household expenses.
