IN A GERMAN PRISON

AUSTRALIAN IN BAD FIX WHEN WAR BROKE OUT.

Former From the Antipodes, Who Has Just Arrived in London Has a Strange Story to Tell of His Adventures in Germany—Had Been Jailed for Assault—Reached Canada Sent to the Front.

An Australian farmer, who has arrived in London from Germany, tells an interesting story of the past six months, so far as it concerns his personal history. He says: During May last year I was making a pleasure trip through Germany. I was going to Hamburg from Berlin, and had engaged a seat in the train by placing my luggage upon it. While I was smoking a cigar in the corridor, a German removed by luggage and took my place. He refused to give it up and I lost my temper and struck him.

In the fight that ensued the German fell through the door on to the platform and was injured severely. I was imprisoned for two months before I was brought to trial in Berlin before a bench of five judges. Though my counsel pleaded that the German's fall from the train was the result of an accident, the prosecutor's version that I threw him out of the train was accepted, and I was sentenced to five months' imprisonment.

I was first sent to Siegburg Prison, near Cologne. Here I stayed for seven weeks and heard of the declaration of war while I was there. I was set to work at making buttons, the first I made being for the British market.

After the outbreak of war I was sent away to the prison at Cassel, a goal which has the reputation of being "easy." Here I had to make lead soldiers for the English market. About 15,000 soldiers of all kinds are made daily in the Cassel goal. The food was very bad and I was kept working from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.

As soon as I realized that Great Britain was at war with Germany, I determined that I must hide my nationality. The only evidence the authorities had of this was that my prison docket was marked "English," because that was my native tongue, but they had no papers of mine. I therefore said I was an American, and this secured better treatment for me than I should have received if it had been known that I was British.

After a time I was given easy work and came into contact with other prisoners. The German authorities were recruiting soldiers from the prisons. All prisoners under forty were sent for and asked if they wanted to serve. Those who volunteered were let off the rest of their sentence. Those who had already done their military service were sent straight to the front; those who had not yet served were despatched to training camps.

Two of the prisoners who used to help me with the food were despatched to the army. One was a clerk from a big shop who was serving a sentence of three years for embezzling. He had eight months of his sentence to run when he went off, and another prisoner had a year and two months to do when he was released. Only the ordinary prisoners, who occupied a separate wing of the prison, were allowed to volunteer for the army. Some of the released prisoners sent back to the goal officials picture postcards from the front.

I made friends in prison with a Serbian who was serving a sentence for stabbing a man. He pretended that he was an Austrian. We used to laugh together at the fabulous tales of German victories, always circulating through the goal.

As I had made myself out to be an American, when my release came I persuaded the prison governor to give me a ticket to Frankfurt so that I might call on the American Consul at Zurich, who had managed to send me word that he had money for me. From Frankfurt, after many difficulties, I reached Zurich. Now I am back in London I mean to have a fortnight's rest and then try to go to the front and get a little of my own back.

Both in face and frame the Australian shows traces of the suffering he endured in German prisons. His clothes hang quite loosely on him.

When Water Gets Into a Watch.

A watchmaker who has worked at the bench for over a quarter of a century gives this advice to watch owners who may accidentally get water into their watches: Do not open your watch until you secure some sort of dish into which to place it and also enough kerosene to cover it all over. Any old tin can will do. Open your watch case, both front and back covers, and carefully move it around in the kerosene until you have filled it with oil. Allow it to remain in the kerosene and you can have it cleaned. It will come out of the oil without any of the parts rusting, thus saving much expense and the watch.

Touton Nerve!

Efforts were officially made to ascertain whether the German Government would be willing to consent to an exchange of civilian prisoners interned respectively in England and in Germany. The German reply was that they would require some such rate of exchange as five to one—that is to say, the British Government would have to release five Germans to secure the return of one Britisher. The "cheek" of the Hun is simply colossal.

An Old Lady's Scheme.

An old lady of ninety has sent £1 to the Prince of Wales' National Fund, which she has herself raised by making and selling little silk bags filled with lavender. There is also a contribution of £6 from a little Bristol girl, who has made and sold hats and iron holders from pieces of soldiers' khaki given her by her father.

The People in Jarvis Want to Spend Money

Money is for use, not for hoarding. Most of us want what money will buy more than money, so we are always spending our money. Also most of us do not make enough money to hoard it—we must spend it on necessities.

Much Jarvis money is spent with firms outside of this community—with the big city mail order houses; money that ought to be spent at home.

More money would be spent in Jarvis if more of our merchants would advertise, and if those who do advertise would advertise more.

To the People In and About Jarvis

Spend your money in Jarvis, Sending out of this community makes the community poorer for you and everybody else. Building up outside business won't help you any.

AN ARCTIC SOLOMON

It Didn't Take Him Long to Reach a Sensible Conclusion.

The "floating court" is an institution founded by the United States government for administering judgment in the far north. An interesting example of the unusual problems that confront Captain A. J. Henderson, one of the first judges of the court, is told by Mr. Walter Noble Burns in the Wide World Magazine.

One day, at Point Hope, there appeared before the court held on the Thetis, Captain Henderson's ship, an old Eskimo and his wife. They were accompanied by their pretty daughter and two stalwart young men, who were suitors for her hand. In choicest Eskimo that sounded like a series of explosions of vocal dynamite, the venerable father poured a voluble tale into the ears of the interpreter.

"This man, he say," began the interpreter, "these two feller want this gal for wife. One feller he offer a rifle, ten pound whalebone, six walrus tusk, a dog team and sled. The other feller, he give kayak, two reindeer, a bear skin and six fox skin. This gal the old man's only daughter. He old, and he want good trade. But he not know which he best take. He say maybe you tell him."

Captain Henderson is no Cupid—he stands six feet two and weighs 250 pounds—but he determined to essay the role of Cupid's first assistant.

"You love this girl?" he asked one suitor.

"Yes," replied the interpreter, "he love her."

"And do you love her?" the captain asked the other.

"Yes, he love her too."

The captain looked at the girl, who was a pretty little thing, something over four feet high, with coal black hair plastered down over her temples, and sloe-black roguish eyes. Let no one doubt the vital beauty of Eskimo maidens in the flush of youth and health.

"Here," said the captain to the girl, "which one of these men do you want?"

The interpreter put the question. The maiden's eyes grew brighter, her cheeks a deeper crimson and a coy smile wreathed her lips. She stepped over to one of the young men unhesitatingly and touched him on the arm.

"This one," she said, and there was no need for the interpreter to translate.

"All right," said the captain, with a roar of laughter, "take him."

And he married them on the spot. Straight from the ship back to the village the newly wedded couple paddled, to set up housekeeping and to live happily, no doubt, ever afterward. The bride's father touched off a few more explosions of vocal dynamite into the interpreter's ear.

"He say," declared the interpreter to Captain Henderson, "he satisfied."

The Western Fair

September 10th to 18th.

The Western Fair of London, Ontario, will maintain its reputation this year as being one of the best Live Stock Exhibitions of the Dominion of Canada. Live Stock Exhibitors are always loud in their praises of the treatment they receive at London and the amount of business they do there. Buyers are always plentiful, surrounded as London is by the best agricultural district of Canada. Although large cash additions have been made to the prize list, for the past three years, this year will surpass them all, when $3000 will be added to the Live Stock and Poultry Departments. This has been made possible through the generous assistance given by the Dominion Government. The amount has been distributed throughout the different classes and some new classes and sections added, which will be of special interest to the farmers and live stock breeders. The prize lists will soon be ready for distribution. Send to the Secretary, A. M. Hunt, London, Ont., for prize list or any information.
