North American Raw Furs Will Be Sold in America

In the past it was thought an impossibility, "a fool's pipe dream," that the collection of North American Raw Furs could be sold in America. It has been demonstrated to the world that the collection could be sold on this side of the big pond, for American buyers have practically cleared the market of the entire collection of 1914-15 and the great bulk of surplus stock carried over from the catch of 1913-14. If you should put the question—What percentage of Raw Furs are exported—to any dealer or exporter one year ago, he would say 75 per cent. Did we export that amount or was it a wild guess at figures or is it a fact that the big part of the collection of North American Raw Furs that have been shipped to London to be sold in the Auction Houses of that city or shipped to the Commission Houses of Leipzig, have found their way back to America, either dressed and dyed or raw?

A. B. Shubert, president of A. B. Shubert, Inc., Chicago, U. S. A., the largest House in the world dealing exclusively in American Raw Furs, in a letter to the Record says in part, as follows—"The House of A. B. Shubert, Inc., up to the time of the European War, exported about 75 per cent of their entire collection of American Raw Furs. It is apparent to me, when practically every country on the continent of Europe "blew out a cylinder head" that we would have to look up "green fields and pastures new" for the sale of our merchandise. No doubt all the dealers in thought the same. The low price of American Raw Furs, together with the difficulty of importing foreign furs, materially helped to ease our American goods, but, back of all this, was the push and energy of the American merchant. It looked like a ground hog case to him. It was something that had to be done. He did it. He satisfied himself and proved to the world that the collection of American Raw Furs could be sold in America."
