One of the principal attractions at the Western Fair, London, Ontario, this year from an agricultural standpoint, will be the Dominion Government's demonstration of the care of eggs. The egg industry of Canada is a very important one, and the Government, realizing this, is putting on this demonstration to create an increased interest in the care and production of eggs. The Western Fair Association is offering liberal prizes for eggs for Producers only and also for Commercial Packages. All information in the Prize List. Send for one to the Secretary, A. M. Hunt, London, Ontario.

WHERE THE TROUT GO.

The Gamy Fish Seek the Small Brooks in Mid-Summer Time.

Economy river is a typical mountain stream in northern Nova Scotia. The country is extremely wild with only one settlement, and that at the mouth of the stream where it empties into the upper waters of the Bay of Fundy. When I first saw it I could scarcely wait to "go to it" with rod and line, says a special writer for The Saturday Globe.

For eight miles I fished up that river under ideal conditions, and my record was six small trout! I was thoroughly disgusted. I couldn't understand it. The stream was no more than from 30 to 50 feet across; it abounded in deep pools, small falls and many rapids.

The month was August. I thought possibly the trouble was with the bait. I had fish worms, grasshoppers, flies, crickets, and helgamites. None of them succeeded. On the way back I came across a small branch. It was a little brook I could leap across in almost an instant. I turned from the river bank, in my tracks, and cast my line in a little pool where the branch flowed into the river. In a moment I had a half pound trout.

This was an experience that proved of value some time since in the latter part of July and through August I have failed to catch trout in a big stream where the spring fishing would be sure to bring a full basket, but have had the best of success following up the small branches that feed the big stream.

It is probable that the trout go up these narrow streams in mid-summer because they find more food. Thousands of grasshoppers and other insects that keep away from the wide streams, or only occasionally fall in, are constantly leaping across the narrow streams. It may be they do not always see the water between the grass bordered banks, and they fall in from overhanging bushes. At any rate the fisherman who fails to make a catch in mid-summer in the big streams and rivers will find far better luck by following up one of the small brooks that feed it.

TO PROMOTE TOURIST TRAFFIC.

Automobile Reciprocity Will Attract Many Visitors to Province.

After several years of agitation and controversy reciprocity in automobile licenses has been established between the Province of Ontario and the State of New York, and shortly with the State of Michigan and probably other States as well. The event was made the occasion of a celebration at Niagara Falls last week when representatives of the Ontario Motor League and the New York State Automobile Association fraternized with municipal and state officials.

Hon. F. G. Macdormid, Minister of Public Works and Highways in Ontario, who has recently taken over the automobile license branch, lives in Southern Ontario and appreciates the value of tourist traffic especially for some years to see reciprocity between Quebec and Ontario, but the Ontario license was restricted to Canada when a Quebec license might be seen on the streets of New York or Boston.

It is not improbable that 10,000 cars will visit Ontario this year as a result of the new arrangement that has been so successfully negotiated by Mr. Macdormid. A touring car is worth $20 a day to the country through which it passes, and this may be increased if there are a large number of passengers. Compute that on an average of three to five days stay, and one will readily grasp an idea of what this means to this country for the present, and it is sure to grow in the years to come as highway improvement advances and the touring advantages of Ontario become better known.

Pay in Canadian Forces.

The rates per diem of regimental pay authorized for the militia on active service in the Canadian Expeditionary Force are as follows: Colonel or Lieut.-Colonel, $5; Major, $4; Captain $3; Lieutenant (qualified or provisional) $2; Paymaster, Quartermaster, $3; Adjutant (in addition to pay of rank) 50c; Brigade, Regimental or Staff Sergeant-Major, $1.85; Brigade or Regimental Quartermaster Sergeant, $1.60; Orderly Room Sergeant, $1.50; Squadron, Battery, Troop, or Company Sergeant-Major, $1.85; Brigade or etc., Quartermaster Sergt., $1.50; Sergeants, $1.35; Corporals, $1.10; Bombardiers or 2nd Corporals, $1.05; Privates, Gunners, Sappers, Drivers, Batmen, $1. In addition to the above, field allowance is paid, ranging from 10 cents a day for a private to $1.50 a day for colonel.

The Maple Leaf.

Records show that the maple leaf was chosen and adopted as the national emblem of Canada long before the emblem "The Maple Leaf" was written. At the first meeting of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, representing French-Canadians, in Montreal, in 1834, the decorations were arranged with maple leaves, and two years later it was proposed to adopt the maple leaf as an established emblem, and the custom achieved wide favor. In 1860, on the occasion of the visit of Edward, Prince of Wales, the maple leaf was formally adopted and officially used as the Canadian national emblem, and was retained as such at Confederation in 1867.

Something Like Laundry.

For best and bustle, superbly organized, there is nothing to compare with the Divisional Baths and Laundry on the Canadian front in Flanders. Amid all the dirt and discomfort of war life in Flanders think what it must mean for every man to have a bath at least once in eight days. No hand-basin sort of wash either, but a plentiful shower of hot and cold water.
