days, was not honored in his own country, very often deserved his fate, for those people who are apt to foretell some wrath to come, or impend-

In Canada, however, we are incurable outimists, and there are few of us unprepared to paint the future in colors of the rainbow. There is, indeed, a tendency to prophecy too the war to end and for the return of the flow of men and capital to our uniess we have a secure foundation,

The potential wealth of Canada lies in her immense natural resources. but these must remain merely potential till they have been developed with the aid of human labor, which, in turn, must be paid its wages. me day when her population is sufficiently large, and her people have put saide more savings, Canada may herself previde the capital to develop her own resources, but for many years to come a large propor-tion of this capital must come from outside, and be paid for in interest duly earned. Our credit, therefore, is our chief concern, and it is the first ernment, municipal and public company expenditure, to be merciless en graft, to insist on a lynx-like and reason to fear that the progress of in the case of the insist perpetual audit even in the days of record earnings, humper increases and untaxed war profits. The spendinvestor may be cut off by the property thrift ration gots short shrift from the foreign banker, who, in his turn, is putting out to interest the savings of the war is decided, one can only other invention. entrusted to him by his own thrilly hope for the best. It is, however, a give farming go to we customers. Our credit new is of the historic fact that Burepean wars dur-born only to serve a political end, must be vigorously stifled at their birth, and these unhealthy offsprings which have been spoon-fed by too lenient subsidies or guarantees, must be reduced to absorbing the heterog sterner tutelage—in some cases perhaps handed over to the guardianship to assimilate after this terrible racial of an official receiver.

The business man of the United much and do toe little, waiting for States is essentially an individualist, and never has shown much belief in the tide which is to bring once more state socialism or any form of commercial enterprise operated by Govfarms, our mines, our forests, and ernment officials, however upright or our factories. Whereas in reality our well-intentioned. Where, on the other hand, there is scope for a wellarranged private business or indus the superstructure to which we put try, with the prospect of good divi-the labor and the capital must be us-dends, no one is more ready than the American to stake large sums of mency without hesitation. Mortgages on farm lands are also a favorite ment south of the border, and such mortgages often provide the farmer with funds useful for increasing his live stock or better cultivation of his land. Our lands, particularly in Western Canada, are still assessed en a comparatively low valuation, se that the security we have to offer in that the accurity we have to exer in this field in good. The migration of farmers from the United States to Western Canada shows no sign of falling off, and there is no doubt that considerable capital for the development of our agricultural land will follow in their factures. follow in their feetsteps.

ity and our credit are good, I see no co entrusion to nim gy nis own thristy customers. Our credit new is of the most argent importance, since the ing the past century have been fellowed by enigration to the North have not entitle and other European countries in Camedan securities on continue that inventions is Camedan securities on which the development of Cameda depended so much in the ten years preceding her believing that the rates of vapos in their securities is the sentimental interest in their by the Hother Cauntry in Camedan to the United States and Cameda, the translation with which the Erittish between the sentimental spaceties. depends largely on the ability with which we handle the incoming p lation, the preparedness we make for ments whom we may be called upon eruption in Europe. During the past thirty years Canada has more or less successfully absorbed a very large immigrating population, but much energy has been dissipated through lack of co-operation shown between the Dominion Government, the Provincial Governments, and the transportation companies. We should be busy now thinking out and formulating an organization which should tries for which they are fitted, with the least possible friction or less of anelf and find his plans helped in times of con to overcrowd our cities.
