ANTIQUES

In a study of early motifs of decoration used at various periods, and in different countries, it is remarkable what a prominent place the rose has taken. As the emblem of the Plantaganet kings the red rose was used by the House of Lancaster-1399 to 1413and the white rose represented the House of York-1461 to 1485.

When the Tudors came to the throne in 1485, the rose was conventionalized for their emblem, and in this form entered largely into decorative motifs of that period, and may be seen upon Tudor style furniture right up to the end of the Elizabethan reign—the last of the Tudors-in 1603.

The painter upon porcelain has perhaps done more to keep the rose to the front as a decorative feature than any other art industry, and it is a noteworthy circumstance that the most extensive rose growing centres in England are those contiguous to the pottery making towns.

With acre upon acre of the Queen of Flowers to select from in their simost infinite variety in size, form and color, the china painter, even though he is constantly portraying some new and cunning trick in light and shade, new tint, or hitherto unknown growth, the result of scientific cultivation a freak of inexhaustible nature, still has a long way to go before the heauties of his subject are exhausted. With perfect drawing of this beautiful flower the most delicate and estural tones of color are employed, resulting in very pleasing pictures, the natural arrangement of the blooms and the foliage, thrown into prominence or partly obscured by some subtle effect of light and shade appear to stand out from the background almost as though of natural growth.

No antique in English china is more highly prized than the specimen bearing the hall mark of William Billingsley, justly regarded as the premier rose painter of the early days of British porcelain, and an artist identifled with the best work of more establishments than any other famous cersmie artist, his work being associated with Derby, Pinxton, Nantgarw and Coalport.

hail from the western and northern isles and from the ports of Northern Scotland.

These places are, indeed, natural fleets, though it is interesting to note that by act of parliament whale fishermen were exempted during the Napoleonic wars from the activities of he press gang.

The coming of great ships of war and a standing navy ended to a great extent our country's early dependence on the larger fisher craft in sea bat-

In pre-Armada days the fishing ports of the channel provided the largest sumber of craft and seamen (London, even, was less important to the navy than a combination of west country ports with unfamiliar names), and when a British expedition was to be sent to France the fisher craft were requisitioned as transports.

Light, fast and seaworthy were the fishing boats of the channel—they were used as scouts and patrols, just as their compeers are being used today.

When war was declared in August. 1914, thousands of naval reservists travelled from the fishing ports and felands to rejoin, and though round the denote one heard many dialects. from Newquay to Scalloway, from Stornoway to Dover, there was only one argot of the sea. Donald might ejaculate in Gaelic and his Cornish neighbor in a dialect akin to the lost British language: but they had common ground in the speech of their calling, as a few days later they had a common dress in the uniform of the royal navy.

matted locks sacrificed, and the razor's steady labor produced a man little different on the surface, from a housand of his fellows. Such were our lishermen wartors.

But the first month of war showed that our fleet was deficient in minesweepers, though, of course, with a nucleus squadron of these handy craft. So the trawlers and drifters and carriers of the Dogger bank, the Iceland and White sea fishermen were called upon and the surplus men of the fleet drafted back to their old service.

And none the less fighters did they prove, though at first their duties were but slow and mildly dangerous. At least so these men said, but handling a concussion bomb powerful en-ough to splinter their tiny craft cannot be field to be a pleasure. The submarine war was, however, their opportunity. The Germans aimed at the destruction of every ship in the neighborhood of Britain, and certainly did serious damage.

But our fishermen-warriors proved real sleuth-hounds; every certain evidence of the passing submarine was noted-the even waves in calm werther, the suddenly breaking wave when there was a capful of wind, the scared seafowl, the tiny plume of water where the periscope cut its way.

And no less ingenious and worthy were the methods of attack. The submarine was patiently followed for hours until compelled to seek the surface. He was located by kites and seaplanes. The trawler soon gained the mastery of this monster of the under seas, and will continue to hold it despite the new inventions of the enemy.

There is an invention which assists the location of underwater craft, the coming of which swept von Tirpitz's invisible fleet from his grasp.

The latest declaration of the enemy will compel the men who use the Dogger bank to become warriors. Fishing craft have always been theoretically immune from sinking, now they are to be sunk on sight. But we shall see the raider jerking out his machine guns just a few seconds too late, for the fisherman warrior, bereft of all other weapons, will certainly use the full power of his tiny craft to ram and destroy the enemy From Pearson's Weekly.

NAMES OPPOSITE

How Sohe Well-Known Ones Were Originated.

Once upon a time given names were the only names in use. One was Toru, Dick or Harry, and that was all there

Our present surnames arose from nicknames. Thus Tom, the tailor, became in time Tom Taylor and his descendants used Taylor as a family name.

The most familiar of our surnames were taken from the occupations of our forefathers as Smiths, Bakers, Brewers, etc. Many men, moving to new towns, had the name of the place from which they had come fastened upon them.

Others took names like Pope, King and Bishop from playing those parts in plays. Hogg and Bacon are simple, developed from poucsi, meaning little pig.

Gait and Grice are old dialect words of the same meaning. Tod meant fox, Fitchie was a pole cat, and so the keen student of languages traces the beginnings of our names in the old dialects.

Some of the nicknames were origfinally distinctly uncomplimentary, as Seely for silly; Cameron for crooked nose and Kennedy for ugly head. Grace developed from grass or fat. Exchange.

SAILORS DREAD JONAHS.

They Draw Only One Moral From the Biblical Story.

There is still firm belief in Jonahs at Recently a sailor, who was prosecuted for failing to join a British admiralty transport, pleaded in excuse that he was known to seamen generally as Jonah, and that the sailors on the transport had threatened to throw his overboard if he did join.

Gertainly if superstition ever could be rational, they had some reason for theirs. The sailor had served on the Titantic and the Empress of Ireland, both of which were wrecked, and on the Lusitunia and Florizan, both of which were It seems a pity that sailors should know the story of the prophet Jonah, since they get only one moral from it. The book was certainly not written to instruct seanen how to deal with Jonahs. Yet it is unfortunately the only moral which sailors seem to draw. Jonah is probably the character best known to them in the Old Testament, and what they know about him is that he caused bad weather through his own fault, and was very properly dealt with by his fellow voyagers. They forgot, if they ever knew, that the sailors cast lots to discover who was the cause of the bad weather and that lot fell upon Jonan. weather and that lot fell upon Jonan.

The Jonahs of modern times are not discovered by such means, nor do they ask to be thrown overboard. They are assumed to be Jonahs because they have been uncommonly unfortunately. Perhaps they are pitled as well as shunned for their misfortune, but have done something to deserve them, and then the superstitious fear of their fellows becomes cruel.

Hagical Effect on Reuralgia Thrubbing Pain Goes Quickly

A YEAR'S SUFFERER CURED B" "NERVILINE."

No person reading this need ever again suffer long from Neuralgia. Nerviline will quickly cure worst Neuralgia, and Mrs. G. Evans, in her strong letter written from Russel post office, says: "One long year, the longest of my life, was almost entirely given up to treating dreadful attacks of Neuralgia. The agony I experienced during some of the bad attacks was simply unmentionable. To use remedies by the score without permanent relief was mighty discouraging. At last I put my faith in Nerviline; I read of the wenderful pain-subduing power it possessed and made up my mind to prove it valuable or useess. Nerviline at once eased the pain and cured the headache. Continuous treatment with this magic-working remedy cured me entirely, and I have ever since stayed well."

Mrs. Evan's case is but one of hundreds that might be quoted. Nerviline is a specific for all nerve, muscular or joint pain. It quickly cures neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, back, neuritis and rheumatism. Forty years in use, and to-day the most widely used liniment in the Dominion. Don't take anything but "Nerviline," which any dealer anywhere can supply in large 50c family size bottles, or in a small 25c trial size.

FASCINATING BAD MEN.

No Matter How Vile, They Can Find Women to Trust Them.

Of all the queer and unpleasant truths dragged into the light of day by way to the dock none is more surprising than this: That, no matter how great a blackguard a man may be, he can always, and with ease, find women to believe in him. Indeed, it would almost seem that, the greater the scoundrel, the more women can he get to trust him.

Can any blackguard get a wife? Is there something about really bad men that appeals in some subtle way to women? Judging by the evidence given in the murder trials of the past few years, there is no limit to the number either of guilible women or women who are willing to take any risks where marriage is concerned.

For instance, a few years ago Whitzoff, a Russian Jew, was convicted of bigamy. This choice specimen found, in a comparatively short space of time, no fewer than six women willing to marry him, each of whom he deserted after he had possessed himself of her money! Then, to take another outstanding example, there was George Chapman, who was executed in England. This brute had no difficulty in getting three girls to marry him, each of whom was, in her turn, foully done

"How," people will say, "is a girl to know that a man such as this is a wonderful "feminine intution" about which we have always heard so much? Is it a myth?

It is not necessary to search the calendar for proof of these statements. Day after day the police court proceedings show how pitiably easy it is for the worst kinds of men to deceive women; most of us know of cases among our own private circle. Who among us is not acquainted with at least one woman whose husband almost since their wedding day!, has done nothing but slack about and get drunk, quite content that his wife should slave her life away in order to keep him in beer and tobacco?

If you look a little deeper you will discover, as a rule, that even when they are engaged he was as often as not out of work, and that he drank "more than was good for him." Yet she swallowed whole all his "hard luck" stories about the difficulty of getting a steady job. And, as to the drink, had he not "promised to reform ?"

Nor is this sort of thing confined to any one class; you will find it everywhere. In regard to the men, is just possible that in some cases the baseness of their characters is due to the fact that they have been "made a fuss of" by their womenfolk since the days when they were babies, love of the pill box, and in the interwaited on, hand and foot, by sisters, val of the other work Sardou was servants, giri friends, etc.; idolized and pampered by foolish mothers, until at last they have grown up with a contemptuous, but domineering, re- work to supplement his more slender gard for all women, and a fixed determination to get what they want at and Sardou rushed from the theatre any cost. And still women answer matrimonial advertisements.

the Siege of Sebastopol.

"During the siege of Sebastopol num bers of our best artillerymen were continually picked off by the enemyts rifles as well as by cannon shot, and in order to put a stop to the fool hardi ness and incautiousness of the men, a very ingenious contrivance was invented by the Rev. William Taylor, the coadjutor of Mr. Denison in constructing the first 'Big Ben' bell. It was called the reflecting spyglass, and by its simple construction rendered the exposure of the sailors and soldiers who would look ever the parapet or other parts of the works to observe the effect of their shots perfectly unnecessary, while another form was constructed for the purpose of allowing the gunner to 'lay' or aim him gun in safety. "The instruments were shown to Lord Panmure, who was so convinced of the importance of the invention that he immediately commissioned the Rev. William Taylor to have a number of these telescopes constructed, and if the siege had not terminated just at the time the invention was to have been used no doubt a great saving of the valuable lives of the skilled artillerymen would have been effected.' -London Express.

SINGING SANDS.

Peculiar Properties of These Curious Freaks of Nature.

The most notable of those curious frealis of nature, "singing sands," are those of the Hawaiian island of Kauai. When a small quality of this sand is clapped between the hands it is said to give forth a sound so shrill as actually to resemble a hoot. Put into a bag and violently shaken, the sand emits a noise strangely like the bark of a dog. Similar sands also occur in the Colorado desert, where also are to be found those curious nonsequentary sands that continually travel hither and thither over the vast plain of clay. Their movements are induced by the winds, and when a strong breeze is biowing the particles of which they are composed give out an audible humming or singing. Under the microscope these sands show an almost perfectly spherical form, so that they roll upon each other at the slightest impulse, a circumstance that also accounts for the rapidity with which the sands travel over the desert. One theory advanced with respect to the "singing" of these sands is that it is due to an exceedingly thin film of gas that covers the grains. Gathered and removed from the desert, the sands lose their youal proporties.—Exchange. Under the microscope these sands show their vocal proporties.-exchange.

A waterproof matchbox is good, for emergencies, but not for a smokers daily supply. I waterproof the matches themselves by dipping them half length in shellac varnish thinned with alcohol and laying them out separately on a newspaper to dry. Shellac is better than parafin or collodion because it does not wear off, and it is itself inflammable, like sealing wax. Matches so treated can be left in water a long time without spoiling.
