Will present the Colors

A beautiful stand of colors has been promised the 114th by Mrs. and Miss Margaret Thompson, wife and daughter of Lt. Colonel Thompson, both daughters of Haldimand, the one by adoption and the other by birth.

Colors are something with which the people of Haldimand are not familiar, because rifle regiments never carry them, and the 37th Haldimand Rifles was a rifle regiment. A few words of explanation, then, are in order.

The colors consist of two flags, the one known as the King's Color, the other as the Regimental Color. They represent the honor of the Battalion, and are always greatly cherished by the corps. Many a brave man has given his life to save the colors, and many another has won distinction by a resting a set from the enemy.

Old churches, public halls, museums, etc., in Great Britain, are thickly adorned by colors taken in many a noted British war, besides which it is customary to deposit colors in cathedrals and churches when they have grown too old and tattered for further use. Upon them is embroidered the names of battles in which the corps possessing them has been engaged with distinction. "Battle honors" as they are known, and perhaps when these come back to Haldimand, the war over, they too will be adorned with proud historical names. Stringent rules and regulations are laid down for these military flags. They must each be made of the heaviest possible silk, three feet nine inches long, by three feet broad, surrounded by a beautiful gold fringe.

The King's Color is the Union Jack embroidered in the center with the King's Crown and a part of the regimental crest. The Regimental Color is of dark blue, and in its center is embroidered the full regimental crest. Rules are laid down too, for the exact shades and colors of the silk to be used in the embroidery, and only an expert is really capable of producing an absolutely correct set. The work is in the hands of Mrs. Malone, of Ottawa, a lady who has produced numbers of very beautiful specimens for other corps. It will take her with an assistant, six weeks of steady labour to finish the task.

The presentation of colors is always a great day in the history of a corps. When the Haldimand Battalion has been together for to become fairly well drilled, it is the intention to have the ceremonial, and big excursions will be run from all parts of Haldimand, so that the people may see their very best.

WHERE RIVERS OF ICE FLOW

(1) The Cracks in a Glacier. (2) A Rocky Mountain Lakelet fed by Glacial Waters. (3) The Fissures in a Glacier. (4) The Yoho Glacier.

STAND with me on the summit of a Canadian Pacific Rocky Mountain. What a wondrous panorama is unfolded: not only of peaks and ranges, tier on tier, line on line, but of vast glittering fields of snow and ice, making a white world of the upper heights, a region of eternal winter in striking contrast of the flower-covered beds of the valleys a mile below us, or the green of the alpine meadows and the forest depths.

We are standing in a realm where streams of ice flow, for it is one of the manifold wonders of nature that these huge snaky lines of ice are slowly but surely moving down the mountain slopes to their death in a terminal moraine. And while they thus travel down hill, they are at the same shrinking, so that with few exceptions they show a gradual recession which is marked in some glaciers by scientific study, huge boulders carrying the year when the toe of the glacier reached that spot, with later markings indicating the shrinking process. The Illecillewaet Glacier, for example, retreated up the valley, between 1890 and 1898, a distance of no less than 482 feet.

The Illecillewaet glacier, in the Selkirk, is one of the largest remaining glacial deposits in the Canadian ranges, a gigantic icy river of green and white-flowing valleyward with a magnificent sweep. Longfellow's description comes to mind as one gazes on the scene as "a glittering gauntlet which the front king has thrown in defiance of the sun," and so it seems as it glitters back its radiance from its white bosom and its crystal architure. Or stand on Lefroy or Hungabee, or better still, on Teppie, in the Lake Louise region, and again the eye is held in thrall with the colossal canvas and the icy glaciers on every peak. Who will forget that superb view of the Victoria Glacier from the Lake Louise Chalet, or the white masses on the lofty roofs of the Ten Peaks, when a full moon floods them with silver light? The sheen of a hundred sparkling waterfalls makes a drapery, while at times the ear is bombarded with the sound of a mighty avalanche tumbling from inconceivable heights.

The wonder of the glacier is more fully realized when they are explored at close quarters, when their fantastic caverns and awesome fissures are entered or crossed, when the mountain climber picks his way over a mass of ice masses thrown up as if in mortal agony by the pressure of the upper deposits that cause the downward movement. Yonder in the snow field from which the glacier flows, here is a "bergschrund" as the ugly-looking crevasse is called that separates the glacier from the mountain side. Seracs—curious ice towers—look like monuments of the gods, and the tongue or snout marks the end of the glacier or whence flow the melting waters that mark the birth of great rivers.

In this vast Canadian Garden of the Gods, of Rockies and Selkirk, in which scores of Switzerland could be put, nothing is more wonderful than the great glaciers ever journeying to their dissolution, ever sweeping toward the valley beds, and
