The mirror has claims to antiquity perhaps as remote as any other article of utility of every day need. With an introduction into history coeval with that of the Mosaige law there is no need for further research to establish these claims. Those thirtyfour century old commodities, of polished brass, "the looking-glasses of women assembling" (Exodus xxxviii.; 8) were apparently as essential to the furnishing of the tabernacle of the congregation" in the days of Moses as they are to-day, and have been throughout the ages, in the equipment of the home.

Suggested by nature and brought under control with the first advance of the arts of civilization, the mirror has not only been a most useful commodity in everyday life, but has proved a material aid to the artificer and craftsmen of all ages and all over the world.

Perpetuity of the marror was secure in nature's own resources, its placid waters and its shining gems, but man's inventiveness removed what limitations there were to its conveniences and gave in polished metals and glittering glass tangible mediums of beauty and utility, and thus was nature's first mirror, the surface of some silent pool, framed in its circlet of waxen filly-buds and blooms, and verdant foliage superseded, and thus was accomplished the first surrender of nature to art.

Mirrors of polished metal seem to have filled cut requirements throughut early ares, but history has restones and glassy substances of natural or artificial formation.

In very remote times emeralds the early Egyptians adapted the glassy volcanic product, obsidian, to same use. The eorly Chinese, too, had a way of converting pebbles into mirrors.

Early in the fourth century B. C., "mirrors of glittering glass" were carried in state processions, according to the chronicles of the Singhalese

Two centuries later Archimedes succeeded in "harnessing the sun" with his "burning mirror," an implement of war said to have been used with devastating effect upon the machines and military engines of the Roman general, Marcellus, when the siege of Syracuse was in operation. The power of these mirrors was disputed for a long time, but Buffon proved it by experiment. A message from Rome, tated April

1st, 1913, reported the discovery in the harbor of Syracuse, of what is believed to be "the burning mirror of Archimedes."

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia Smokeless Powder.

Smokeless powder dates back some fifty years, but it was not until about 1886 that it attained its real efficiency and sprang into general use. It must be understood that even the best of this powder is not absolutely smoke-It is not smoky enough, however, to "do any harm," and as compared with the old powder may well be called "smokelesss."

The cross fretful baby is a sickly baby—the well child is always happy and smiling. Mothers if your baby is gross and cries a great deal something is wrong. His little stomach and bowels may be out of border; his teeth troubling him, or he may be bothered with worms. The mother should immediately give him Baby's Own Tablets. They never fail to relieve the baby. Concerning them Mrs. Ronald Hurley, Gilks, N. B., writes: "I know of nothing so good for cross, fretful babies as Baby's Own Tablets and I am pleased to recommend them to other mothers." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville. Ont.

Pearls as Medicine.

Scotland still produces pearls, found mainly in the fresh water mussel. They could no doubt be found in England if the industry were profitable. Cleopatra was not the only person who swallowed a dissolved pearl. Until comparatively recently pearls were used medicinally in the west and still appear in the materia medica of China. According to one Chinese authority, a pearl, after being treated with pumice to the length of three or four feet. Make it into pills and swallow themhenceforth food will be unnecessary." The suggestion is not that the patient would be finished off, but that he would live, foodless, forever.__New York Sun.

Soup Without a Spoon.

Scup without a spoon seems even harder to negotiate than meat without a fork, and we can sympathize with the complaint recorded in the diary of Felix Platter, a young Swiss, who went to Montpelier in 1552 in order to discharge is two volts. While at prestudy medicine. He lodged in the house of his professor, Catelan, one of the greatest doctors of his time, and be made in various sizes for all puryet, writes Platted, "we were com- poses. pelled to eat our stew in the usual French fashion—that is to say, picking the meat out with our fingers and then drinking the broth. In vain we begged our hostess to let us have spoons, but not a single one was to be found in the house, the only implement on the table being a large knife fastened with an iron chain. No one here seems to have ever heard of spoons, which we at home find so useful." Montaigne was astonished when he visited Switzerland in 1580 to find that "at all meals they put on the table as many spoons as there are people present."

Judge Hard to Please.

A prisoner on his trial, in answer to the charge, pleaded "Not guilty." The jury found the charge proved, and in passing sentence - the judge said. Ye're not only guilty but ye come here and tell lies, saying ye're not."

The prisoner who followed next for trial was doubtless influenced by this, and supposed it would be well for him to take another course, so he pleaded "Guilty," in an almost self-satisfied

The actual condition of the scalp and of the hair has very much less to do with the health of the latter than is poundarly supposed. The bulbs of the roots of the hair go down completely through the skin and into the fatty layer which lies between it and the shull, and the thing that to the expert eye is really significant of the prospect as to progress or cure in a particular case of baldness is not the condition or color or cleanliness of the scalp, but the thickness of thinness of this fatty layer which underlies it. So long as this is present and the scalp is freely movable over the skull there is hope of restoring a reasonable growth of hair, but when this fat has been absorbed and the shiny scalp sticks as closely to the skull as the cover of a baseball the outlook is practically hopeless. This, of course, shows at once the futility of most of the local applications Among the queer forms of animal life that inhabit Death Valley is a niquee that has acquired such a taste for scorpions that they form its entire bill of fare. The scorpion carries its formidable armament at the end of its slender, elongated abdomen in the shape of an exceedingly venomous hooked sting. When disturbed it elevates this in the air and goes in search of its disturber. But it is comraratively slow in its motions, while mice are proverbial for their quickness the world over. The mouse learned many generations ago where the scorpion carries its weapon, and when he meets it he leaps at the uplifted at domen, takes the sting off at a single bite and proceeds to make a meal of his helpless prey. It is supposed to be the only animal that relishes scorpion.

Snowball Showers.

More than one explorer in cold elimates has noted the curious phenomenon of a "snowball shower." The balls, it is true, are not very big, the average being about the size, of a hen's egg, but they are true snowballs for all that-compressed globes of snow, not little lumps of ice or hail. A fail stone and honeycomb, mixed with the honorable, whatsoever thing are just, of the kind occurred in north London in March, 1859, and at the time it was observed that the balls seemed five times as dense and compressed as ordinary snow and in no way to be told from the usual handmade missles. They had fallen during the night and were strewn many layers thick over a very large area, No cause—except a doubtful electrical one—can be ascribed for the strange phenomenon. and mountaineers are apt to discredit the stories of snowball showers told them by the old guides till suddenly ber of new features and built on the in the midst of an ordinary storm they find themselves assailed as is universally used for general pur- though by myriads of mischlevous schoolboys-London Standard.

The Music of Thunder.

The bass of thunder is considerably lower than the lowest sound produced in an orchestra-below the zero of music, we call it, at which all positive apprehension of musical sound ceases and our senses are merely conscious of a roar. In observing the music of thunder our attention, however, may be most profitably directed to the expression rather than to the notes. The musical diminuendo is more perfectly represented by thunder than by any other form of sound in nature. After the first clapp is over the ear will pursue with pleasure the rolling away and gradual fainting of the peal until at an immeasurable distance it sinks into silence.

Bleeding by Bowshot.

That all diseases can be cared by bleeding is still firmly believed by several savage tribes and especially by the Patuan negroes. When one of their physicians becomes convinced that it is necessary to bleed a satient he goes several feet in front of him, and then, drawing his bow he fits a sharp pointed arrow to it and after careful alin, fires the arrow into the vein which he desires to open. The arrow, it is said, invariably goes straight to the mark, and the thorn or splinter of glass with which it is tiped does the work as successfully as a lance That all diseases can be cured by bleedor spiniter of glass with which it is tiped does the work as successfully as a lance moreover, the patients never show the slightest fear, since they are convinced that from the moment the arrows pierce their voins they will begin to recover.

TAUGHT BY THE KING. A Lesson Given by Frederick William III. to his Steward.

King Frederick William III. of Prussia was a man of few words. Whatever he had to say was always brief and to the point, as the following anecdote from a foreign journal

The King, who was accustomed to interest himself in all the details of court management, ordered his stewthedral spire. He chose the latter, and, and to take special pains to see that all the carriages were amply supplied with food and drink whenever they left for a journey of a day or so, but it sometimes happened that the steward despatched the drivers without any food, giving them a coin, perhaps, to buy what they wanted. That usually meant that the driver went hungry, as he did not have much opportunity to leave his horses and dine at a restaurant.

At length the King became aware of his steward's failure to carry out hie orders and awaited the next opportunity to bring the fact to his attention. He had not long to wait. That night the King stopped his coachman as he entered the courtyard and upon inquiry found that the man had had nothing to eat since breakfast. He held out a dollar in his hand that the steward had given him to buy food with. Without a word the King took the dollar.

He went into the castle and summoned the steward. That worthy appeared immediately and made a profound bow, but as he raised himself up he was surprised to feel a coin placed against his mouth.

"Eat it!" ordered the King.

"But, your majesty, I--" "Eat it!" the King again roared.

"Why, your majesty, I can't eat it!" "Oh, you can't? But you expected the coachman to! Well, in the future just remember that that people eat fcod, not money. Do you understand?

The steward understood. In the future the King's coachmen were amply supplied with provisions whenever they went upon a journey.

May Weddings.

Contra to the Contract of the Contract

BRANCHES IN ALL CITIES

In ancient Rome there was held in May a festival called the Lemuria or feast of the Lemures, which was ceremony in honor of the spirits are departed souls. It became with the Romans what we should call "bad form" to have matrimonial feasts at the session of a solemn ritual, being no doubt thought to be an insult to the dead to marry at such a time. From this a number of stories grew of the revenge made by the outraged ghosts upon those who dared to disregard them, and if anything unfortunate happened to a couple who had been married in May it would, of course, have been put down to retribution. So the repugnance to May weddings arose, and its influence has lasted ever since, even to our time.-Exchange.

The Nebular Hypothesis.

The nebular hypothesis assumes that the matter composing our suft and planets once existed as a vast gaseous neoula, spiral in form, having an inconceivably high temperature and slowly revolving on an axis. passing through its centre of gravity. As the mass cooled by radiating heat into space a contraction of volume with accelerated axial rotation would ensue, in accordance with well-known dynamic principles. The centrifugal force thus rapidly increased would cause the separation of large masses which would, by mutual attraction of their own particles, gradually assume a spherical form and become planet By a repetition of this process, planet after planet would be thrown off and the central glowing sun would remain.
