PRINCE OF FINANCE.

Cunliffe Given the First Peerage in the War.

In the City of London he is known as "The Kitchener of Finance." Outside the city, Lord Cunliffe, who has been re-elected Governor of the Bank of England—the Old Lady of Thread-needle Street—for the fourth time, is practically unknown. Yet it was he who, in the first days of the war, was mainly instrumental in saving the country from financial chaos, and was, in consequence, made a peer, being, in fact, the first man to have a peerage conferred upon him for service in the present war.

It will be remembered that in the first days of the war a financial panic threatened. It was essential that every bit of gold should be preserved, and equally essential that the national credit should not suffer, and that all great financial houses and firms should be able to tide over the money crisis, brought about by the entire dislocation of the world's markets.

Then it was that Mr. Walter Cunliffe, as he then was, and two or three great money experts, came to the assistance of the Government. The financial system of the country was reorganised under their direction. The money of the country was preserved, so that we were not only able to carry on our business as usual, but were able to be of financial help to our Allies.

Son of a hard-headed Manchester business man, who left a fortune of over a million, Lord Cunliffe spent the days of his boyhood and youth at Harrow and Cambridge, where he distinguished himself both in work and play alike. He took his M. A. degree and won the Inter-Varsity mile for the Light Blue at the sports at Queen's Club one year.

He has, in fact, always been a very keen athlete and sportsman, his great passion of late years being for fishing and big game shooting. In pursuit of this sport he has traveled in the wilds of both India and China.

"Work is the best of all hobbies," is one of his favorite maxims, however, and he is to be found at his office at the bank nearly every day of the week.

Lord Cunliffe is easily distinguishable by reason of his stature. He is six feet high and very broad, with a fairish moustache and his inevitable frock coat and silk hat. For a man of sixty, he is remarkably active and young.

When He Was Beaten.

Dr. Macnamara, M.P., of the British House of Commons, is a skilled debater and rarely at a loss for a retort. Once he was addressing a meeting of laborers, when one of his hearers expressed a wish to ask a question. Dr. Macnamara suggested that he should wait till the end of the speech, but he persisted until another member of the audience politely remarked: "Sit down, you ass!"

There was some disorder, and a third man shouted: "Sit down, you're both asses!" This was Dr. Macnamara's chance, he thought, and he cut in with: "There seems plenty of asses about to-night, but for heaven's sake let us hear one at a time."

"Well," said the original inter-rupter, pointing to the doctor, "you go on then."

For once the doctor, as he does not hesitate to admit, was beaten.

Not for Twice as Much.

He was an idle Irish boy, but he had the Irishman's ready wit. He had shipped on board a man-of-war, where he annoyed the boatswain by his laziness. Seeing him on the main-top one morning, gazing idly out to sea, the boatswain called to him:

"Come down out of that, ye rascal! Come down out of that, an' O'll give yer a dozen whacks wid me rope!"

"Faith, sorr," replied the boy, "O' wouldn't come if ye offered me two dozen!"

Fresh From the Mint.

A returned vacationist tells of being in a country store when a little girl entered with an egg in her hand.

"Give me an egg's worth of tea, please," she said to the storekeeper. "An' ma says you might weigh out an egg's worth of sugar, too, 'cause the black hen is cluckin' an' I'll be up again in a minute."

Immense.

"Blacksmiths seem to have a reputation for honesty."

"Deser't so, but due partly, perhaps, to the nature of the business, they encumber a blacksmith with funds. There is nothing to clutter in his hands, except some of us, a blacksmith's temptations to go."
