TEUTONS TRY TO CUT OFF RUSS FORCES

Plan to Seize Those Remaining in Roumania and Carpathians.

FOUGHT WITH ROCKS

When Russ Ammunition Was Gone-Story of the Ending of a Panic.

Headquarters Seventh Russian Army Cable—The immediate objective of the enemy would seem to be a bold attempt to cut off the troops remaining in the Carpathians and Roumania. For this purpose a blow is being directed between Kamienetspodolsk and Czernowitz. At this crucial point we are unfortunately unable to contain the Austro-German

On July 27 we still held the line, Kolimezia-Leszczyki. Four days later we were 15 to 20 miles back of the line Kutysnia-Tynmielnico. The lastnamed place is southwest of Kaminets, near the confluence of the Zbrocz and Dniester. Moreover, it is an unstable line. The situation suggests that it would have been weil had Korniloff's insistence on the abandonment of all offensive movements or an immediate regrouping of all armies been promptly heeded.

The boldness of the enemy's movement was based on the assumption of our inability to deliver a counterblow from the Carpathians against their right flank. On the other hand. thanks to the passing of the initiative into their hands, the enemy were able at one blow to imperil our left and secure themselves from interference from the Carpathian and Roumanian fronts in carrying out their plans for the conquest of Southern Russia. Petrograd Cable - Russian troops are on the offensive in the Choun region, near the southeastern frontier of Galicia and northeast of Czernowitz. Yesterday they drove the Austro-German forces from two villages, captured a height and took more than 300 prisoners and four machine guns, the War Office announced to-day. retreat, is shown by an eye-witness of the Galician debacle, an officer of an allied country. His judgment is that there still is hope of further activities by the army.

"I went to the front line." he said, "which was assigned to the Seventh army, accompanying a Russian captain who had been sent in investigate the report that the trenches had been deserted while a soldier council debated whether the order called for enough men to fill them. I learned that Austrians had come into the trenches searching for the Russians, which shows the state or disorganization there was before the panic among the soldiers.

"Suddenly we heard rumors that German cavalry had broken through and was surrounding us. Immediately panic began in the soldiers' council. It was impossible to prevent a rush to the rear. The men, knowing that the death penalty had been abolished, had no fear of punishment for desertion. Almost before we realized it, the Russian captain and I were left entirely alone in the trenches Seeking our automobile we found that the tavarish had seized it and

The allied officer repeatedly refered to the soldiers as tavarish, which is Russian for comrade, which the soldier Socialists use in addressing one another.

"We ram for the main road, where we could see that a full retreat was on. The tavarish, leaving their materials and supplies, were crowding into the motor trucks and heading to the rear. The Russian captain with me, who was one of the bravest men I ever met, seized an automobile and raced ahead to cut off the masses mad with fear. It was awful to see an army throwing away its arms, coats and boots.

'The roads were jammed, so we circled the plains and got ahead the rush. We jumped in front of the first motor truck, which was loaded with fully a hundred tavarish. The captain commanded them to halt, and when the tavarish tried to make the driver continue, despite the order, the captain leaped into the motor, jerked the driver from his seat and flung him into a ditch.

"Immediately the tavarish tumbled off in bunches. Others arriving were forced to descend, and with ringing orders the captain formed them into lines at the point of his revolver. Now the masses rushing forward on foot were halted by the newly reforming army, the tavarish yielding to the superior will of the captain. and they began entrenching on toth sides of the road. Enemy aeroplanes were flying low overhead.

"I will tell you the facts on which my opinion is based. At the beginning of this year well-informed Germans admitted freely that their situation was desperate. The peace diversion has failed, and Germany has to meet the combined forces of the Allies at maximum strength with her own army so shattered by losses as to be almost a skeleton.

"They will probably never learn the real figures of German losses. Even the high officials tell you that much has been suppressed, 'in the public interest.' Heroic measures were necessary, and they were adopt-

"There has been much talk in the allied countries about the shortness of the German food supply. It is true that her food is reluced, but make no mistake; Germany will never fall by starvation. I should not be surprised if half of these stories were deliberately circulated by the German Government to distract attention from their real weakness.

"No. Germany's weak spots are to be sought elsewhere. For the moment the Russian collapse has silenced the Austrians' murmurs, but the German leaders have no delusions on the subject. They know the victories in Russia, like the exploits of their submarines, are only palliatives which soothe and stimulate the people without affecting the main issue. The evil day is merely postponed, that is all. They have a little more time in which to try to evade destiny, and nothing further."

RULED THE AIR IN BIG BATTLE

Foe Planes Swept From Skies During Recent Flanders Drive.

CLEAR MASTERY

One Airman Chased Staff Officers in Auto for Five Miles.

London Cable.—"Continuous rains and fogs have made the past week one of little activity on the western front," said Major-General Frederick B. Maurice. Chief Director of Military Operations at the War Office, in his weekly talk to the Associated Press to-day.

"The German communiques in their usual fashion," continued the general, reported numerous British attacks repulsed with heavy loss. That shows the Germans are jumpy and nervous. As a matter of fact, there has only been one British attack, that on St. Julien, which was an entire success, The German communique made a deal Nieuport, which was, in fact, only a minor raid."

Summing up the situation on the Russian front, Gen. Maurice said: "The Russian retirement has been conspicuously less in the last week. Premier Kerensky and Gen. Korniloff, the Russian commander-in-chief, are making strenuous efforts, with considerable success to re-colish discipline, but it would be premaure to say that the Russian leaders have yet succeeded in setting a limit to the German advance. It would be premature even to regard the situation as more satisfactory."

BRIEF BREATHING SPACE. "It is natural to expect that the Germans, after advancing 90 miles and reaching railways of a different gauge must pause awhile and bring up communications and supplies. All that can be said to day is that the Russians have gained a brief breathing space, which we hope they will use to the best advantage to prepare for the next

German move forward." Gen. Maurice gave an interesting resume of the detailed reports which e had received on the air-fighting situation in the Flanders battle of July 31 and the amazing superiority which the British aeroplanes had displayed on that day, owing to their determined onslaught on Germany's air fighters during the preceding fortnight. "On the day of the attack," says Gen. Maurice, "the weather conditions were as nearly impossible as could be imagined—low clouds of great density. haze and mist. The observation was almost nil, and as a result the artillery was under a severe handicap, having to work without adequate aeroplane observation.

SWEPT GROUND WITH GUNS. "But the aeroplanes were enormously busy in other departments. More than one hundred engagements were fought by aeroplanes with the forces of the enemy on terra firma, our planes in these cases descending often to within less than fifty feet of the ground and sweeping the hapless enemy with their machine guns or bombing them. The enemy aeroplanes were well nigh helpless to interfere. "Less than twenty fights in the air occurred because the enemy did not dare come up, and in these lights we downed six enemy machines, while we lost only three of our own. There were eleven cases of machine gun attacks on German aerodromes by British machines. Our airmen swooped down to an altitude lower than the tree-tops and fired string after string into the German hangars, killing mechanics, workshops. Similar attacks were made repeatedly on parties of marching troops, on working parties and on transports. CHASED OFFICERS' CAR. "During the afternoon one of our airmen, cruising aloft, several miles behind the German lines, spied a German staff car, containing four staff officers, speeding along a country road. He swooped down and chased the car five miles. The excited passengers, while urging the chauffer: to find shelter, stood up in the car. drew their revolvers, and fired wildly into the wings of the big pird which was ching overhead. Smithe British pilot (Inally got the abruptly and the two other passengers rushed to a farmhouse for refuge. "That is the sort of thing which went on behind the enemy's lines throughout the day of the attack. We had absolute command of the air. There was not a single instance of a German airman trying any such tricks behind our lines. We won this absolute command, however, only by persistent air offensive during the weeks before. There is no evidence that this mastery is permanent. We shall have to fight again for it, but our airmen are confident that they can repeat when necessary."

FOE REPULSED IN MACEDONIA. Paris, Cable.-The War Office report on operations of the gray of the East reads:

"The enemy attempted a surprise attack against our trenches in the region of Lake Presba, but was regulsed. Some prisoners remained in our hands.

"Rather spirited artillery fighting has taken place on both sides of the Vardar Liver and in the Cerna bend.

"British aviators have successfully bombarded the aerodrome at Limanore and the enemy's dopots in the regions of Seres and Stojakovo."
