Besides her husband she is survived by two sons, Dr. Walter Langrill, superintendent of the city hospital, and Major Ashton S. Langrill, M. D., a former officer in the 37th Battalion rifles, who is with the first Canadian troops now in France and stationed at the base hospital on the Somme; and three daughters, two of whom are married and Miss Margaret at home. "The only danger is from falls and falling trees," he says. "There is not anything in the woods of North America that will attack you unannounced." "The Wood-duck," by E. V. Williams, supplements the cover picture for this month which reproduces in colors that are true to life this rarely beautiful and comparatively scarce species of duck. "Old Flying Pan," a bear story by H. C. Haddon, "Hawks and Other Game Destroyers" by Reginald Gourley, "With a Watch and Compass," "With the Timber Wolves in Northern Canada," etc., etc. along with the regular departments which are well maintained, make up a particularly interesting number of this premier Canadian magazine of outdoor life. W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont. is the publisher.
