THE FUEL SITUATION

Present Difficulties Attributed to a Number of Causes—An Important Statement

The following statement is sent out by Mr. A. D. MacTier, General Manager of the C. P. R. It is realized in most quarters that some more than others, that this country is faced with a coal shortage of very alarming proportions, and that by next winter, if conditions under which fuel may be obtained do not alter in the meantime, a great many industrial concerns and householders will be unable to supply themselves with sufficient coal to carry them through the severe weather.

The present and prospective difficulties in the way of bringing coal into Eastern Canada may be attributed to a number of causes, principal amongst which are dearth of mining labor and shortage of coal-carrying equipment at the mines. The situation in some of the mining territories at the present time, is that even with the latest shortage, mine operators are able to turn out coal at a greater rate than they can obtain cars to carry it away. It therefore, naturally follows, that more coal can be brought into Canada if the car supply is increased.

Unfortunately, it is out of the question to obtain any number of new cars at this time, and the situation can be met only by obtaining more service from the present rolling stock. To do this cars must be moved promptly between the mines and destination, and must be unloaded as soon as they reach consignees.

Railways must have coal in order to discharge their obligations to the country, and for their own preservation, as well as for the benefit of their patrons, they are putting forth their utmost efforts to minimize delay in cars while en route to and from the mines.

All efforts in this direction, however, will be of little avail without the whole-hearted co-operation of the man who unloads the coal and releases the car after it gets to its destination. Some consignees, who thoroughly appreciate the situation, have almost a hundred per cent. record in the prompt unloading of coal cars, but there are others who are helping to create the prospective shortage of coal by keeping the equipment out of active service. To-day there are in one town of company fifty small size fifty-two coal cars awaiting unloading. The arrival of these cars was spread over a period of thirty-one days, an average of cars

MARK TWAIN STORIES

An Unintended Joke and a Bit of the Humorist's Wit.

England fairly reveled in Mark Twain. At one of the great banquets a roll of the distinguished guests was called and the names properly applauded. Mark Twain, busily engaged in low conversation with his neighbor, applauded without listening, vigorously or mildly as the others led. Finally a name was followed by a great burst of long and vehement clapping. This must be some very great person indeed, and Mark Twain, not to be outdone in his approval, stoutly kept his hands going until all the others had finished.

"Whose name was that we were just applauding?" he asked of his neighbor. "Mark Twain's!" But it was no matter—they took it all as one of his jokes. He was a wonder and a delight to them. Whatever he did or said was to them supremely amusing. When on one occasion a speaker humorously referred to his American habit of carrying a cotton umbrella, his reply that he did so because it was the only kind of an umbrella that an Englishman wouldn't steal was repeated all over England next day as one of the finest examples of wit since the days of Swift—Paine's "Boys' Life of Mark Twain" in St. Nicholas.

USE OF THE TOOTHBRUSH.

It Was Unknown in England in Lord Chesterfield's Time.

When did the English first adopt the toothbrush habit, which in recent times has been denounced by certain medical authorities? In "Edmond" Thackeray makes Lord Castlewood spend "a tenth part of his day in the brushing of his teeth and the oiling of his hair," and in doing so the novelist commits a double anachronism. During the first half of the eighteenth century all fine gentlemen wore wigs and had no use for oil on their hair, while the toothbrush was so late as 1754 unknown to Lord Chesterfield. Writing to his son, Chesterfield says: "I hope you take great care of your mouth and teeth and that you clean them well every morning with a sponge and tepid water, with a few drops of arbusade water dropped into it. I do insist upon your never using those sticks or any hard substance whatever, which always rub away the gums and destroy the varnish of the teeth."—London Saturday Review.

Poisoning as a Diversion.

Poisoning is never likely again to become a fashionable diversion, as it was from time to time in ancient Rome. In B. C. 331, for instance, there was a mysterious pestilence which seemed to be particularly fatal to leading men. At last a slave girl gave information to the authorities, and a consequent police raid resulted in the discovery of about twenty matrons, some of them of high patrician families, busily preparing drugs over a fire. They insisted that the drugs were not poisonous, but, being compelled to drink them publicly in the forum as a guarantee of good faith, perished miserably. Further information followed, and 170 matrons in all were condemned. But this record was soundly beaten in B. C. 134, when a four months' inquiry by the praetor is said to have led to the condemnation of 2,000 persons.

A Resourceful Badger.

An English artist while painting a sea piece discovered a badger's lair and thought to play the animal a practical joke. Gathering together a bundle of grass and weeds, he placed it inside the mouth of the hole and, lighting it with a match, waited for the ignominious flight of the astonished householder. But Master Badger was a resourceful animal and not disposed to be made a butt of practical jokers. He came up from the depths of his hole as soon as the penetrating smoke told him that there was a fire on the premises and deliberately scratched earth on the burning grass with his strong claws until all danger was past. No human being could have grasped the situation more quickly or displayed greater skill in dealing with an unfamiliar event.

The First Stock Exchange.

The Stock Exchange did not call itself by that name till nearly the end of the eighteenth century. A newspaper of July 15, 1773, tells us how the name of their place of business was altered by resolution from "New Jonathan's" to "The Stock Exchange" which is to be written over the door. The brokers then collected sixpence each and christened the house with punch."—London Chronicle.
