Whoever Expects To Have Old Friends Must Have Them Young

Very few young fellows yoke up with old men. They look at and admire them, listen to them and are deferential to the old, and often quote what they say, but almost invariably they conclude that the old fellows belong to a past age. It is among their school-mates and associates in business or society that young fellows must settle upon their lifetime friend-ships—a much loved friend.

MONTREAL'S 275th BIRTHDAY

St. James' Catholic Cathedral, Montreal.

MONTREAL is proud to celebrate its 275th birthday this year.
On May 18th, 1642, Paul de Chomedey, Sieur de Maisonneuve, brought his little fortified settlement to anchor close to the site occupied by Samuel de Champlain thirty-one years previously, and the new settlement was formally dedicated by Pere Vimont.

To-day Montreal is a city of wide streets and stately buildings, with wealth uncountable and a population of nearly three-quarters of a million; headquarters of most of the great banking companies and of that world-wide enterprise, the Canadian Pacific Railway. But all this springs from the landing of Maisonneuve and his associates in May, 1642.

The island of Montreal was visited by Jacques Cartier in 1492, and nearly a hundred years passed before another white man came. On the 28th of May, 1611, Samuel de Champlain landed with another Frenchman and an Indian. He came to have explored the shore line as far as the Rapids, but finally decided that the best place for a settlement was a little strip of meadowland, to which he gave the name of Place Royale. Incidentally, it was de Champlain who first advocated the cutting of what is now the Famama Canal, in 1690.

Thirty years later, plans were perfected for the founding of the settlement, which was called in advance, Ville-Marie de Montreal for Mount-Marie. De Maisonneuve was appointed leader of the little party, consisting of about a score of people.
They set sail from France in a small pinnace, landing at Quebec on the 6th of May. Here they were warned by Montmagny of the danger of anticipation by the Iroquois.

"It is my duty and my honor to found a colony at Mount Royal," said Maisonneuve, "and I would go if Dundee Square, Montreal, with the great C. P. R. Station in background.

every tree were an Iroquois."

The long buffeting across the Atlantic in his cockleshell of a boat had not daunted his courage or that of his companions, nor did the almost equally perilous passage up the uncharted St. Lawrence, which occupied them ten days. He and his associates had their duty to do and they went on and did it.

It was a beautiful afternoon when they first sighted the island, with the forest-clad mountains rising steeply up by the side of a rivulet running into the St. Lawrence. There was a stretch of meadowland along the shore, with patches of forests growing amid the grass and brightly colored birds darting to and fro. Beyond the meadowland lay the forest, with who knew what secrets hidden in its mysterious depths. De Champlain had told them of the palmetto town of Hochelaga, which stood opposite the present Mount University.

De Maisonneuve was the first to spring ashore, followed by Governor Montmagny from Quebec, Pere Vi-mont, Mlle. Jean Mance, Madame de la Peltrie and her serving, Charlotte.

Barré, and about a dozen farmers, artisans and laborers. A guard was hurriedly set to watch the forest paths. Tents were landed and set up, and the baggage and stores were brought ashore. And then having provided for their immediate safety and comfort, an altar was raised and Divine Service was held.

The sun was sinking as Pere Vi-mont pronounced the last words of his solemn exhortation and the fire-flies were twinkling in thousands about the meadow. The colonists caught them and hung them in phials about the altar, where they gleamed for a little time and then faded one by one into the darkness. Whereupon the little company, having lighted watchfires and strengthened their guard, lay quietly down to sleep on the grassy slopes of what is now Place Royale. From the heroism of those early Canadians to the heroism of those who have immortalized the names of Ypres, Courletole, Gravelly and Vimy Ridge, is a long way as time goes, but it shows that the spirit of Maisonneuve and those who helped him to found the city of Mon-real still survives.
