TEN MILLION YEARS AGO IN CANADA

(1) Prof. Walcott, discoverer of the Fossil Beds at Field, B.C.
 (2) Climbing into the undiscovered past.

PROF. CHARLES D. WALCOTT, of the Smithsonian Institute, has discovered a deposit of extremely valuable fossils of early marine life on Mount Field, overlooking Emerald Lake Chalet and the beautiful Yoho Valley in the Canadian Pacific Rockies. Far up over Burgess Pass, at an altitude of nine thousand feet, where the tourists in the fashionable summer hotels and camps can barely hear the boom of the blasts as they quarries down to the fossil bearing shale, the professor has been securing some wonderful specimens of sea life of over ten million years ago. These are of the period when life was just emerging from the jelly-fish stage into an era where a bony structure was becoming apparent. Dying, they were deposited in the mud of the ocean bottom that has since hardened into rock, and been raised to the snow-covered mountain top.

The strata of fossil-bearing rock discovered by Professor Walcott is of much earlier age than any in the surrounding mountains, and has, he says, been pushed up over the newer formations for a distance over twenty-five miles.

The fossils were discovered by Prof. Walcott while travelling over Burgess Pass, a peculiar formation in a piece of shale attracting his attention. He followed up the shale slide almost to the top of Mount Field, and finally located its source, far above the timber line. The workings are very peculiar, because of their height, and are probably the only ones of their kind in the world. Some of the specimens taken out are so perfect that Prof. Walcott has been able to determine what they ate just before they were buried in the mud over ten million years ago.

DIAMOND RING AS TEE

Seattle Society Woman Plays Unique Golf at Banff Springs

MRS. MAE STEHLE, of Seattle, Wash., was recently the heroine of a unique bet at Banff Springs which caused much comment.

Engaging with a fellow member of the fashionable colony at Banff Springs that she could make nine holes in a round on the mountain golf course, Mrs. Mae Stehle, of Seattle, Wash., took her ball from the top of a fifteen hundred dollar diamond ring and placed it on the hole. A slip, a low swing or anything that would not come under the title of a perfect drive would have sent the ring spinning after the ball and returned or lost it.

A large gallery left the Banff Springs Hotel to watch Mrs. Stehle use a magnificent self-made ring in fulfilling her unique wager. The Seattle society woman, who is a crack golfer and who finished high in the recent tournament at Banff, placed her ring on a small mound of sand, took her ball upon it, and with the utmost coolness made her drive as though the safety of a valuable ring did not depend upon her success. Nine times Mrs. Stehle repeated her feat on each tee and by her success won one of the most elaborate dinners of the season.

In response to a number of private Canadian and Provincial Shaughnessy has views on the pro as follows:—

THERE is a general feeling that renders form of legislation invade the personal subject, save such as necessary for the safety of the peace, health and welfare of the people.

Enforced military of peace, as it exists in countries, would be a category of object because it has the same man from his own and, for given per subject to military the control of military because of any dependence upon his life-time something involve the nation trained military.

The encouragement spirit in normal times the people whose promotion of a peace, prosperity and it may be said if of its military establishments and covetous trained army and means of war, will cause of quarrel and.

The gravity of admitted it become the effort of nations to create and in forces sufficient for be attack, but assume the offensive be the best strategy. Should it be the safety of the nation remitting condition of peace, it may where the limit is cause there must military autocracy as that which the determined to destroy very serious cost.

If the people are this menace of military be a pride of count spirit of patriotism all the necessary material with the day, whenever they defend the rights of nation, all citizens respective shares of nearly as possible.

At the outbreak of Britain's navy was splendid achievement the service saving a nation fraught with war, will always be friction and pride, land forces consisted of men, barely maintenance of order becomes a matter of importance that a large soldiers should be
