"BELA"

Whether or not he heard him run away, the song presently ceased, and he returned to his blankets, but not to sleep again.

It became as dark as it would get. Midnight at that season is no more than an intensified twilight. By and by the moon arose far across the water, looking like an old-fashioned gas-globe, and set sail on her brief voyage down in the sky from southeast to southwest.

Sam received the friend of lovers with a scowl. He had omitted her from his calculations. The nights are short enough without that! he thought.

Thinking of escape, a new idea came into his mind. He had omitted her from his calculations. The nights are short enough without that! he thought.

When the bright slanting edge sunk this I could paddle anywhere. She behind him, the Point he arose with a beating heart. Making his blankets into a bundle, he took his way once more around the strip of beach, his moccasined feet falling noiselessly on the sand.

It was about two o'clock, and the sky was clear. In an hour it would be light again. The island objects loomed twice their size in this dusk of dusk. Sam kept close under the willows to avoid making a silhouette against the sky.

CHAPTER XII. Sam was awakened by the rising sun. He arose sore in spirit and unrefreshed. It was without hammer and nails and he had not been long enough in the country to learn how to do it.
