The Kaiser's Dream

A little girl of Phenixville, N. Y., has written a little verse, printed below. It is about—well, best read it through. There's a rumor now current, though strange it may seem, Of the German Emperor's wonderful dream. Being tired of the war he lay down in bed And 'mongst other things he dreamt he was dead. And deep in his coffin, lying in state, With the cold waxen features frozen with hate. He wasn't long dead when he found to his cost That is map of the next world and passports were lost. So, leaving this earth, to Heaven went straight, Jauntily strutting right up to the gate. But the lookout angel in a voice loud and clear Said, "Begone, Kaiser Wilhelm, we don't want you here." "Now" thought Wilhelm, "that's very unevill, Does he mean that I must go straight to the Devil?" So he turned on his heel and straight he did go, Running full speed to the Regions below. But when he got there he was filled with dismay, For while waiting outside he heard Satan say—to his imps— "Now look here, boys, I give you all warning, I'm expecting the Kaiser down here this morning, But don't let him in, for to me it is clear We're far to good for the mongrel down here. If he gets in there'll be the dickens to pay For as bad as I am, he's worse any day." "Oh! Satan, dear friend," the Emperor cried, "Excuse me for listening while waiting outside. If you don't let me in then where will I go?" "Indeed," said the Devil, "I really don't know." "Oh! do let me in, I'm feeling quite cold, If its money you want, I've plenty of gold Just give me a corner, no matter how hot." "No," said the devil, "most certainly not." "We don't let apartments for riches or pelf. Here's some sulphur and match, make a Hell for yourself." So he kicked William out and vanished in smoke, And just at that moment the kaiser awoke He jumped out of bed in a shiveying sweat, And cried, "Ach! that dream I shall never forget. That I won't go to Heaven I know very well, But it's awful tough luck to be kicked out of hell."
