CURED HIS SWEET TOOTH

It Was a Lasting Lesson and Killed His Taste For Sugar

"Once there was a little boy who was very sweet. He liked to eat sugar and candy. He would eat it all day long. His mother was very angry with him. She said, 'You are too sweet. You will be a sweet tooth. You will be a sweet tooth. You will be a sweet tooth.'"

PENALTY OF LIBERTY.

A Lesson John Ruskin Learned in His Early Childhood.

In the matter of discipline John Ruskin's mother was a Spencerian before Spencer. "Let your penitence," says that austere philosopher, "be like the penalties inflicted by inanimate nature, inevitable. The hot cinder burns a child the first time he seizes it. It burns him the second time. It burns him every time, and he very soon learns not to touch the hot cinder."

Training Raw Recruits.

An army officer, speaking of the necessity for the rigid training of recruits, said: "Don't delude yourselves with the idea that a man won't be frightened under fire, because he will be. He'll be badly frightened if he is a normal human being."

Heigoland. Centuries ago Heigoland, in the North sea, was at least five times its present size, and a place of no little importance. Like so many islands, it had a peculiar attraction for the natives of the surrounding mainland.

Fireproof Writing.

Documents written on paper made from asbestos fiber, with links prepared from the nitrates of iron and cobalt, have withstood a red heat for two hours without being damaged in any way. No damage resulted until the intensity of the heat was exposed in it for ten hours. It is expected that further experimentation and study will result in the perfection of a paper and ink practically indestructible by fire.

The Word "Slave."

The word "slave" is a word of brilliant historical antecedents. Its original, the Russian "slava," means glorious and is the title of that race which includes the Russian people. But when the Germans reduced hours of the Slavs to servitude the name, from malice or accident, as Gibbon says, became synonymous with "servile."

How It Happened.

"Why did you leave your first wife?" asked the boss. "I didn't leave it. It left me." "Rather strange, I should say." "Not at all. I worked in an ammunition factory."

A Crab.

"They say that what we eat makes us what we are." "Then old Puddin' must have lived upon a steady diet of crab meat all his life."

True politeness is perfect composure. It simply consists in treating others just as you love to be treated yourself.

The Government's Wolverine

JOE SMITH has been the population at Castle Mountain, Alberta, ever since the rest of the population moved out with C. P. R. construction in the early eighties of the last century. He makes his living by hunting, trapping and prospecting. Three winters ago, bothered by the dependence of a wolverine he set traps with a cunning which was part instinct and partly acquired, the result being that he caught a lusty young but somewhat incautious wolverine. Joe, who has found that live animals of the wild often brought more money from the government officials at the zoological gardens in Banff, twenty miles away, than the dead ones did from the fur dealers, decided to take his prize to the government park. So, after painful adventures he boxed the muscular young feline and delivered it before the superintendent of the park. He was greeted with warm words of commendation, for the park had now a live wolverine in its cages. The fact that the animal had broken a front leg did not detract at all against the prize Joe added. Joe put his catch in the strongly scented cage, took his money and went home. The wolverine sniffed and licked his paw. He snarled and growled and glowered at the keeper, who stood hard on his heels with heavy boots. Two weeks passed, the broken bone of the feline knit—but suddenly, the knob flying outward, the wolverine was as far advanced in captivity that he began to eat the food given him, but he always refused more than one day to do so. Having the dog, he growled and
