When I was told that if I went to a High Command had something of the certain office at a certain hour, I would at tude you suggest. But whenever have the pleasure of meeting the Rev. there was anything to be done to help Charles W. Gordon (Ralph Connor), I the boys the Y. accepted with joy. I wanted to meet it and do it well. him for two reasons. I wanted to meet assuming helpfulne im because he is our most disanguished won the hearts anadian novelist, and also because in men, no matter what their church conmy boyhood I wriggled on hard, wa- nections may be or may not ising benches, listening to the gives and it does not ach Caelie and English, and wondered if he emphasize about its wo and a few minutes to wait, and fell to wendering what he would be like. Unconsciously I associated him with those old-time Free Kirk ministers and wondered if he would be like the Rev. John Ross, of Brucefield, or the Rev. Lachlar MacPherson, of East Williams. So my surprise was complete when a brisk man in khaki uniform stepped into the room. He did not look enough like those old ministers to make my heart come into my mouth with terror as I aced him. Neither did he look enough like a military martinet to make me click my heels together and come to "attention." And there was absolutely nothing to suggest the producer of "best sellers." It took less than a minute to discover that "Ralph Connor" is, first of all, a fellow-human being, who is ready to take a glance at anything from any

'A reference to the old ministers gave us an instant point of contact, and with much laughter-kindly and reverentbut still laughter—we compared notes and exchanged reminiscences of the good men who made the Scotch settlements where we had both been brought up, the places of stern discipline we remembered so well. The hour that had been promised to me was gone and part of another hour with it, before I remembered that the man who arranged the meeting had not done it out of pure kindness. He wanted me to interview Raigh Co. about the war work of the Y.M.C.A. By the time I remembered my duty we had reached a point where I felt that I could ask him about it from a rather daring point of view. I began with a straight question:

man's point of view.

"What do you think of the work of the Y.M.C.A. in the war?"

He hunched his shoulders slightly and slipped down a tritle in his chair. From the expression on his face I was afraid that he was going to offer an unfavor- the Y.M.C.... charges for some of its able criticism. But his answer made it supplies." clear that that was not what disturbed

"It is doing a lot of work that the be made. If there is any profit on the church should be doing."

Now you can understand why my question caused him a shade of discomfort. The minister in him—a touch of the lines, every cent of it goes to provide things free—absolutely free—to those who are in the front line trenches. the old Free Kirk spiritual guide that other organizations under the control of calling—made him regret to confess that a purely lay institution is carrying prac- Y.M.C.A." tical Christianity to a point that is as yet impossible for the churches—"beating them to it," as the soldier boys would say.

"Don't misunderstand me," he protested. "The churches and their chaplains are doing a wonderful work, but ing question: the Y.M.C.A., being without a propaganda or dogmas, is able to adapt itself instantly to any needs that may arise, either at the battle-front or wherever the boys may be located. It meets them at all hours and in all places with a spirit of good cheer, comfort and help- zation under whose discipline they live
