-THE-SLEUTH

here are youse?" Neil felt relieved. "What's that to he asked.

'Cause if you was I might put you

Well I am," said Neil. "Wat's his name?"

OT.

...ND

Mon

TED

"You tell me if you know it." 'No, sir! I'm a fly guy, 1 am. You tell me. Tell me what letter it begins wit', anyhow."

The boy's face cleared. "H for Hartigan," he said. "That's right! Guy wit fat cheeks and red neck." "Sounds like him," said Neil.

"Come on then.' "Come on a minute. Did he send you

"Sure! Said to tell you he couldn't come to meet you, and promised me a quarter if I'd bring you where he was. I thought maybe it was a stall, so I ween't goin' to let anyt'ing on, see?" Where is he?" asked Neil.

"Back room of a saloon on Twelf' street." "Alone?"

"Sure!" Neil debated inwardly what this might portend. It seemed unlikely that Hartigan should have found him out while they were parted, and if he had, surely he would never send an emissary from whom he might take warning. It must be something else that had kept him. Anyhow Neil had been taking chances from the beginning, and in his difficult circumstances there was nothing for it but to continue to take them.

"Lead on, Macduff!" he said. "My name's Mulligan," answered the gulde. The found Hartigan as the boy had promised, in the back room of a saloon on the corner of Twelfth street blinds were pulled down, and the elec- Fits the description to a T." tric lights turned on.

Hartigan sat by a window with a glass of bear and a leathery sandwich Harrigan was continually peeking arrest her for me. Huh I guess they'll around the edge of the blind. Elation have to hend it to Harrigan!" was writ large on his sanguine fea-

"Hey, boy!" he cried. "Good work! Good work!"

'What is it?" asked the startled

"Wait a minute!" He was mysterious. He dismissed the boy with his quarter, and waited until the lad was out of the place. 'Now, sit down," said Hartigan.

"What'll you have?" Again he peeked around the blind. A vague anxiety was gnawing Neil. "Oh, never mind that," he said.

"I'll tell you!" said Hartigan impressively. "You were right, friend!

Neil Ottoway didn't kill Caspar Tol-sen no more than you didn't!" Neil's heart went up with a bound. "I certainly am obliged to you for the tip." Hartigan went on. "It was a woman done it!" Neil's joy collapsed like a pricked "Let me tell you," the ex-policeman went on, peeking into the street.

"Soon as I left you yesterday I traced

Did a Good Turn

HOW TWO MEN PROVED THE

Henry Burkhart, of Saskatchewan,

Fox Valley, Sask., May 27.—(Special.)—"Latell everyone that suiteral from kidney trouble to take Dodd's Kidney Pfils." These are the words tinued, "and now I feel as well as ever let her get away. I daresn't telephone I did in my life. I also sent one box such a delicate matter, you underto a friend who lives in Dakota, and stand. I got to go in person to get "My friend wrote ma to get him be no slip-up. You don't wind doin' some more of Dodd's Kidney Pills, as this for me, do you?" the doctors could do nothing to help! him. He said Dodd's Kidney Pills were the best medicine he had ever taken.

"I would not be without Dodd's

Kidney Pills." In the sparsely-settled parts of the West, where doctors are few, Dodd's Kidney Pills have long held an honored place in the family medicine chest. The conditions which are common to newly-settled prairie countries make kidney trouble one of the most prevaa int ills, and the settlers early discoved the splendid results to be obtained "om Dodd's Kidney Pilis. Ask your It was a shabby, old fashioned English importantly. They were heading for

"Say, vouse ain't waitin' for no guy i that telephone call. Seven-eighteen p. m. Tuesday was the time. I found it came from a drug store on Fourteenth atreet, just west of the avenue. They have a couple of booths there. Well. I got hold of the clerk who was on duty at that time, and he give it to me straight. It was a girl that called Tolsen up. She had been in the store before. Seems she was a good-looking girl, and the clerk had tried to make up to her before and got turned down. That's what fixed it in his mind. He was sore on her. Give me a first-rate

Neil scarcely needed to ask what it

"About five foot four, twenty-one or twenty-two years old, weight a hundred and thirty. Elegant shape, neither fat ner skinny, but round-lookin" he said. Dressed mostly in black, but not mourning like. Brown eyes, creamy skin, and thick, shiny brown hair High-arched eyebrows which give her a kind of funny, surprised look. Has a kind of high and mighty look to ner, and never smiles at nobody." Neil felt a little sick at heart.

"Weil, soon as I got that," Hartigan went on with unction. "I went over to 21 to talk to Mme. de la Warr -smart woman that; me and her's real good friends. She was the one first called me in Thursday night,

"I read it," said Neil. "Well, without tellin' her anything I knew, I described the girl and asked if she'd ever seen anything like that around the place. 'Sure!' she says

That's the girl artist upstairs. Calle herself Rose Raleigh.' The madame, it seems, didn't think much of her; kind of sniffed-you know how it is with women. 'Well. I lost no time goin' upstairs, but nachelly the bird had flew. and Sixth avenue. A single glance in Through the post-office I traced her the ex-policeman's face reassured to 52 West Twelfth street, which is Neil. Hartigan's confidence in his right across the way there a roomyoung friend was so far undisturbed. ing house. She made it easy for me the only occupant of the because she didn't change her name. room. Out of deference to the day the She's home now. Just saw her go in. "But-but what are you going to do about her?" faltered Neil. "Do" echoed Hartigan, "I'm going before him—the latter out of respect to nab her, quick! I want you to to that strange law which ordains watch for me, just for three minutes, that men may not drink without also while I go down to Jefferson Market cating on a Sunday. The window looked out on Twelfth street, and who's on duty there to come up and > Neil, gasping, so to speak, sparred wildly for time. "But man, you can't

 How to Purify

"Fifteen to thirty drops of Extract of Roots, commonly called Mother Seigel's Carative Syrup, may be taken in water with meals and at bedtime, for the cure of indigestion, constipation and bad blood. Persistence in this treatment will effect a cure in nearly every case." Get the genuine at druggists.

arrest her on the evidence of that telephone call alone!"

"Oh, I ain't told you all yet," said Hartigan. "I searched her room good, top floor front hall room at 21. Looked to me like somebody'd been scrubhing the floor of her clothes closet. I scraped some dirt out of the cracks and took it to a chemist. He says it's For an Old Friend blood, all right. I picked up some hairs, too; short gray hairs. The microscope will prove if they come out of the dead man's head. My theory is young Ottoway was stuck on the girl Laura reached Neil well in advance. WORTH OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS and he offered to dispose of the body for her."

Neil silently curred the stupid fat man's shrewdness. A clever man and His Friend. Joins in Their simple as the truth, "But now you've simple as the truth. "But now you've spetted her," he said, "you're safe. Don't risk the whole thing by acting too precipitately." Hartigan was already up. "I'll take my chance," he said. "You sit over of Mr. Henry Burkhart, of this place. that door. If she should come out behere, and don't you take your eyes off ; "I took Dodd's Kidney Pills for fore I get back, detain her at any cost. eight months," Mr. Burkhart con- Never mind what you say, but don't who I knew suffered from his kidneys. some friend to help me, so there won't up later at Gimpy's Hotel, Coney Is-

> "Oh, no, no!" ried Neil. "Go ahead!"

"Back inside five minutes," said Hartigan.

In a daze Neil watched him go. and watched him to the corner clear. It was about fifty steps to the through the crack of the blind. The corner of Sixth Avenue. instant he disappeared in Sixth aveaue the young man's aub-consciousness galvanized him into action.

Leaving money on the table to pay for what they had ordered, he hastened out of the place. He darted across the etreet to gate Hartigan and a portly friend in the door marked 52 and rang the bell. bine have around the corner, walking thin as if it had been squeezed under heavy lateral pressure. The effect was heightened by the round arches over all the narrow windows. The old house seemed to be saying, "Ch!" as if the pressure hurt. There was a fence in front, of iron under a hundred coats of paint, with a gate which opened with a wheeze and shut with a clang like a cracked bell.

Neil stood in the vestibule, suffering a very torment of impatience. He had a vivid mental picture of Hartigan hurrying to his destination and hurrying back, while he was compelled to stand still. Would they never come? More time would surely be lost inside. He rang thrice.

The door was finally opened by fat woman with a hard eye. "What's the matter with you?" she demanded crossly.

"Does Miss Rose Raleigh live here? asked Neil breathlessly. He made no pretence of concealing his agitation, but there was no infect ing this mountain of flesh. She looked him up and down deliberately before replying, "She does." "I want to see her. It's very important! Tell me her room and I'll go right up."

The fat woman blocked the door. The malignant creature guessed how to madden him, and became slower and slower. "Not in my house," she drawled. "I don't know you. I'll tell her myself." "For God's sake, hurry!" cried Neil.

Tell her to put on her hat so she won't have to go back after it." "What name shall I say?" asked the woman heavily. She afflicted Neil. like some horrible nightmare shape. "Never mind the name!" he cried 'She will know who it is."

Clearly, she would have liked close the door in his face, but she did not quite dare. Neil came into the She commenced to raise her enormous bulk up the stairs a step at a time. Neil watched her, grinding his teeth. Meanwhile he was making desperate, futile calculations of the number of steps it would take Hartigan to reach Jefferson Market Court and return. "I suppose Laura lives on the top floor!" he thought with an inward However, the fat lady proved to have no intention of putting herself to the trouble of more than one flight. From the landing overhead Neil heard her call: "Miss Raleigh!" and presently heard the dear and silvery reply that made his heart jump: "What

THE FF DALLEY CORPORATIONS LINGUISH COMOR.

In accents of strong scorn: "Here's a young man asking for you. He says it's important, and to bring your hat." There was no stupid antagonism in Laura's actions. Almost instantly and with blessed relief Neil heard her flying steps on the stairs, nearer and nearer down three flights, swift and sure as a sanupiper's run on the beach. She rounded the top of the last flight and his heart leaped up to meet ner; in sorrow or in joy in dan-ger or in safety, he loved her so! Her face changed upon beholding him and he saw that he was not the one she expected to see there; but whether she was glad or sorry he could not tell. She became alert, composed and unsmiling; she was pinning her hat as she came. The landlady, anxious to hear Neil's communication, followed at a surprisingly rate for her; but She asked no questions, save with her grave, deep eyes.

"You must get away quickly," Neil whispered. "The police are coming here. They tracked you through the telephone message. Not an instant to "The telephone message!" she whispered with a catch in her breath. She gave him a poignant look.

Something deep in him answered the look quicker than thought. "I do not doubt you.' Her eyellds dropped like winged birds. "How about you?" she whis-"I'm safe for the present. Call me land. Ask for Archie Tinling. Will you remember that "Gimpy's Hotel, Coney Island, Archie Tinling," she repeated, moving toward the door.

"Let me go out first," said Neil. He looked out. The way was still corner of Sixth Avenue.

"Come ahead" he said, "Go toward Fifth. Walk quickly, but not too quickly. Don't look behind you." She nodded, sparing unnecessary

Alas, as he pushed open the wheezy basement nouse, unnaturally tall and the saleen across the street, but inntently they caught sight of the cou-ple, and changing their direction, broke into a run. Neil grouned in spirit. His brain worked as swiftly as a shuttle. He seized Laura. "Make believe to struggle with me," he whispered.

She obeyed like lightning. They gave a highly realistic imitation of a struggle all over the sidewalk. The fat landlady stared from the doorway, turned into stone with astonishment. "It's too far to Fifth. Make for Sixth," Neil managed to whisper. He had to trust that she understood him. When the two men were close upon them he whispered: "Push me away, hard!'

She thrust him back with a will. The was surprisingly strong. Neil went careening backward with both arms extended and contrived to collide with both running men. The three of them went down together. Laura was off like a released arrow, across the street and back around the corner into Sixth Avenue.

Hartigan and the uniformed man bounced up again like rubber balls. They took after the flying girl silently. It is surprising how these fat policemen can run. Neil was put to it to keep up with them. They rounded the corner just in time to see Laura's skirt disappear inside a doorway fifty steps away. The whole street was agog with astonishment. A few bystanders started to run after them in uncertain fashion. There was no sound but the running feet.

It was in one of a row of the oldfashioned, smallish brick buildings with which the street abounds that she had disappeared. There are shops on the street level and flats above; old-fashioned, respectable Irish New Yorkers live there. Hartigan left the uniformed man to watch the street dbor. He and Neil found themselves in a narrow black hall, and bounded on upstairs. Doors stood open on the landings, and voices and pointing fingers urged them on up.

"If they weren't so damned respectable they wouldn't be helping the police," Neil thought hotly.

They heard a door slam above There were four flights of stairs. A door blocked the topmost. It opened to their hands, and they found themselves out on a flat roof amidst a tangle of clotheslines. There was no sign of the girl.

Hartigan halted for a moment, undecided. There were half a dozen or so of the little buildings with roofs of Hartigan. on the same level, divided by low parapets. At each end of the row was a much taller building with a blank wall offering an unscalable barrier. There was a score of chimneys to hide behind, and in each roof was a sort of companionway leading to the floors

"We've trapped her up here all right," said Hartigan. "And if she goes down through one of the other buildings Conley will nab her on the street. You go to the right and I'll chimneys. Holler if you see anj-Neil nodded, and obeyed, praying with his whole heart that she might be on his side. A few residents of the floors below ventured up the stairs behind them, and stood around outside the door, prepared to duck inside if matters got too warm. Everybody was asking Neil found her.

Let Cuticura Care for Baby's Skin

It's really wonderful how quickly a hot bath with Cuticura Soap followed by a gentle anointing with Cuticura Ointment relieves skin irritations which keep bally wakeful and restless, permits sleep for infant and rest for mother, and points to healment in most cases when it seems nothing would help.

Sample Each Free by Mail. Address post-card: "Cultures, Dept. N. Besten, U.S. A." Sold by dealers throughout the world.

white ing, a hunted thing, and dared not look up to see who it was had found her. Neil's heart was wrung at the sight.

"It's I," he whispered swiftly. 'Lon't give up. Stay where you are for a few minutes. I'll try to lead them away." She looked at him with eyes full of gratitude.

Neil flung open the door around the corner from her and shouted. Hartigan came vaulting over the parapets with amazing nimbleness. The slat gratings which protected the tin roof creaked and slapped under his flying feet. Neil stood holding the door open in such a way that Hartigan was blocked from looking around the corner, if it occurred to him to do so. Laura was not eighteen inches from where Neil stood.

"She was just inside." said Neil. "She went down when I opened the door.

They plunged down the stairs together. The others on the roof followed at a more discreet pace. Neil contrived to reach the street in advance "There she goes!" he shouted.

pointing diagonally across the street into Twelfth street. (To be continued.)

The War's Recompense.

Ye that have faith to look with fearless eyes
Beyond the tragedy of a world at strife,
And know that out of death and night shall rise

The dawn of ampler life,

Rejoice, whatever anguish rent the heart, That God has given you a priceless go to the left. Look behind the To live in these great times and have your part. In freedom's crowning hour.

That ye may tell your sons who see the light High in the Heavens-their heritage to talie—
"I saw the powers of Darliness put to I saw the Morning break."

teacher began to tell of the wonders everybody else what was the matter. of the elements. "Jimmy," she asked, left are slow to heal and invite disease Neil cursed them in his heart for idle "why is it that lightning never strikes and decay." Behind the farthest of the lit-said Jimmy, confidently, "after it uits tle houses containing the stairs one, the same place ain't there any view that he ought to be able to see There she more."-Christian Register.

AT PRESENT.

In veilings, large open r rather bold patters are favored but bold patterns are daintily, not her wrought, in the mesh, scroll designs he ing the favor. Black, brown and tau veils are considered in best taste.

Fancy checked voiles make mart chemise blouses Flowers of raffle with mess ba trim garden hats. Blue argandie is combined

Bright rose and pumpkin celo orites for linen frecks. There are so many bell-shape each layer scalloped and embr Parasols are smartest when sin for street use at least. Handles medium length with wrist loops of for easy carrying.

The very latest tub frocks are Flowers made of ribbon decorate orga

Coat sets are of sheer, fine organdis or batiste embroidered by hand and trimmed sparingly with filet or Venice lace. Some sets are in triple each layer scalloped and embroid hand.

Camisoles of filet lace ar Bison, hay, chinchilla and deer names of new colors.

Silk petticoats are gay in color they strike the dominant note in costumes of rather sombre hues. Soft silks and tersely sey cloth are to be favored materials and the petticoat that rustles is absolute.

The fashionable new gray is a

Write for Free Booklet and particulars of

THE MEARS CO., OF CANADA. Dept. D. 194A St. Peel St., Contreal.

Roots and Crowns Must Be Made to Balance Properly.

FOR HEALTHY TREES

Weil nourished, healthy trees are less liable to the attacks of insects than those that for lack of sufficient plant food are making a slow and uncertain growth. To keep trees well fertilized and a vigorous condition is the best possible insurance against irsect depredations and all forms of disease.

A soil which supplies abundant nutriment and moisture is the prime requisite for successful tree culture. In the forest natural conditions are favorable in this respect, but in the open field or town they are frequently quite the reverse. The roots are robbed of the required moisture and air by heavy sod or pavements. To grow trees under such conditions requires scientific care in the way of fertilizing and prunning to maintain proper balance between the roots and the crown or top.

If the nourishment received by the roots is scanty the judicious thinning out of the branches of a tree has much the same effect as soil improvement. A heavy top cannot be adequately nourished by a stinted root growth. indicated by dying branches here and there, nature's way of maintaining the right balance between root and crown. It is better for the tree to forestall During a violent thunderstorm the nature in this respect by timely and careful pruning. Dead branches are not only unsightly, but the scars thus

It's when a fellow has no end in

A New Dress For Your Home

Cover the scars of wear and tear on walls and floors

A wall re-tinted a floor varnished a hall painted a chair or dining room set re-stained—the whole house made fresh and bright, spic and span. There are for every surface—for everything you want to "do over".

SPIC AND SPAN FINISHES

"NEU-TONE"—the washable sanitary, soft tone Wall Finish, in pleasing tints.

"WOOD-LAC" Stains make soft wood look like expensive Mahogany, Walnut, etc. "MARBLE-ITE" Floor Varnish-for hardwood floors. Won't mar or turn white.

"LIOUID WAX" for floors. Easily applied, Dries hard. Shines easily. "SENOUR'S FLOOR PAINT"—the hard-drying paint for the floor that wears, and wears, and wears.

"VARNOLEUM" brightens up and protects Oil Cloth and Linoleum. These Finishes have proved their worth and wear and economy in a great homes. We have handled them for years and can guarantee results. FRUIT JAR LABELS FREE-a handy book of them-printed in colors and ready summed, given away. Write for them. The MARTIN-SENOUR Ga

GREENSHIELDS AVENUE, MONTREAL:

While

m. to Equ Free ...