License Inspector Facrett of Brantford has been notified that he must take over the work of Haldimand county as well as Brant, with the exception of Rainham and Walpole Township, which will still be under the Norfolk inspectorate. Just why the change has been made is not in evidence. It may be that the government is doing away with some of the inspectors, or just a reconstruction of the inspectorate.

The Flu in the village has apparently become worse than ever, a large number of new cases being reported. The authorities have deemed it best to again close the school, churches and other public places. Although a number of cases are very serious there has been no deaths. The Government has directed the preparation of a list of claims by Canadians arising out of the illegal methods of warfare by the enemies during the war. These claims arise through the torpedoing of ships without warning, the aerial bombing of fortified places, and commanding or requisitioning without compensation, destruction and similar illegal acts on land. The Canadian claims are largely limited to the first class mentioned. The claims relate to loss of life, as well as of property. A further list is also to be made covering claims for damages arising out of breaches of contract with neutrals which were declared illegal because of the neutrals making the claims being on the Statutory List of persons in neutral countries commonly called the Black List. All persons having claims indicated should file them without delay. The making of this list does not imply an undertaking on the part of the Government to put forth the claims at the Peace Conference, or any assurance that if put forward they will be paid. But the list should be completed without delay so as to enable the Government to make a demand if an occasion therefor should arise. Instructions, showing the methods of filing claims and the proof to be forwarded, may be obtained from Thomas Mulvey, Under Secretary of State, the officer appointed by Order in Council to prepare, examine and report upon the claims.

Nearly 4000 troops returning from overseas are expected to arrive in Halifax on Friday or Saturday next. The party which consists of 2000 soldiers and 50 civilians, mostly women and children, sailed from England on the steamship Aquitania. It includes 40 officers and 1,800 other ranks returning to the Toronto military district: 111 non-commissioned officers and men for the London district; 16 Montreal district and two officers and 600 other ranks for Quebec.

William Haver, a prominent farmer of Durham was killed at his home a few miles west of Tillamook on Tuesday.

Keeping Roots in Pits over the Winter

(Experimental Farm Notes)

If roots are to keep satisfactory in pits outside, it is of primary importance that, when steady cold weather sets in, they are in such a condition that they can stand being covered heavily and tightly and yet not heat. In other words, the roots should be given every chance to sweat thoroughly before the pits are covered or or thoroughly.

In view of this, it is not as a rule advisable to cover the pits completely immediately after the roots have been piled up. A layer of coarse and perfectly dry straw to a thickness of from four to six inches may be put over the pit, but the following layer of earth, amounting to about six inches should be put over the top of the pit. In fact, it is essential that the top of the pit be left open as long as this can possibly be done without exposing the roots to danger of freezing, so that as much as possible of the moisture caused by the sweating of the roots be let out before it is necessary to cover up the pit permanently.

In case of wet weather, the open top of pit should be protected so as to prevent rain from soaking down through the roots. This can be done, for instance, by placing along the top two boards nailed together in the form of a "V". When the weather begins to get so cold that there is danger of the roots freezing, the top of the pit should be covered like the rest of it. Later on, when steady cold weather sets in, it may be necessary to put on another cover of straw and on top of that a second layer of earth. The thickness of these two covers will depend entirely on local conditions. It should be so chosen that the roots are protected against the frost.

In order to enable adequate regulation of the temperature during the winter when pit is all closed in, some sort of ventilation system should be installed when the pit is being built. Perhaps one of the best systems is one using vertical shafts, reaching from the bottom to the top of the last cover of the pit, and placed at intervals of anywhere from six to ten feet. These shafts may be plugged at the top in case very severe cold makes it necessary. The advantage of using vertical ventilating shafts are several. One of the most obvious is that the temperature in the pit can be taken at any time, thereby of course making it possible to ascertain whether the temperature is suitable. The temperature should not be allowed to drop below 32 deg. nor should it be allowed to rise over 40 deg. In case the temperature in the pit shows a tendency to go too low, more cover should promptly be put on; and in case the temperature rises too high, the pit should equally promptly be opened for a short while so as to allow it to cool off.
