Grass and Clover Ensilage

(Experimental Farms Note)
When the term "ensilage" is applied to the process of making a silage, it is nearly always referred to as ensilage made from corn, for the reason that corn is practically the only forage plant which is used for silage in this country. There are, however, a considerable number of forage plants which may be converted into ensilage of high feeding value, so far only such plants which cannot very well be cured into hay and which, at the same time, produce bulky crops have been utilized for the purpose. For the same reason, grasses and clovers are not looked upon as belonging to the class of forage plants from which ensilage may be satisfactorily and economically made, and yet the first ensilage produced in modern times was made from grass. Thus, history tells us that the people living in the countries bordering on the eastern coast of the Baltic sea in Europe made it a practice, long ago, to preserve their grass crops in a unique manner. Trenches were dug in the ground to a considerable depth and filled with freshly-mown grass. The grass was packed as hard as possible and, when the trenches were well filled, it was loaded down with stones so as to be kept under heavy pressure. After a certain time a product was obtained which to all intents and purposes was identical with what is now called ensilage. This method of converting the grass into a wholesome and nourishing food was later in a somewhat modified way, applied to Indian corn in France where, as a matter of fact, the making of corn ensilage was first successfully attempted. From France the method was brought to this continent where it was perfected and soon gained universal popularity wherever corn could be remuneratively for fodder. It is the irony of things that, while corn became increasingly popular as an ensilage crop, the fact that common grass was the first crop used for ensilage purposes was soon forgotten, so much so that at present only comparatively few farmers are aware that grass may be advantageously made into ensilage. But not only grass but clover, and alfalfa as well, may be converted into excellent ensilage. Some experiments with grass, clover, and alfalfa ensilage fed to dairy cows which recently have been conducted at the Dominion Experimental Farm, Agassiz, B. C., strongly indicate that ensilage made from the latter forage crops constitute a most valuable feed, the use of which spells profit to the dairy farmer. The practice of putting the grass and clover crop into the silo in about the same manner as for clover, may therefore well be encouraged, especially if weather and labor conditions at harvesting time are not favorable to the making of cheap hay of the best quality.

Broilers

(Experimental Farms Note)
Under ordinary conditions the most profitable time to market cockerels of the light weight varieties is unquestionably at the broiler age. All surplus bachelors and cockerels of similar breeds should be disposed of at this stage, as the quality of the flesh rapidly lowers with age and they are consequently not in demand as roasters. The most desirable weight for broilers is from a pound and a half to two pounds each and the quicker the chick can be forced to these weights the better the quality of the broiler. In growing broilers the chicks may be fed and handled in the usual way until they reach the age of about six to eight weeks. The cockerels should then be separated from the general flock, kept in confined quarters and forced with ground grains, mash and milk, just an occasional feed of wheat or cracked corn being supplied to stimulate the appetite. Milk is essential if the highest quality is to be secured and when fed sour it acts as a stimulant and keeps the appetite keen. A mixture of sifted ground oats and corn, corn, oats and barley, or buckwheat and barley, makes a good ration. This should be mixed to a rather thin batter with sour milk and fed at least three times a day all the chicks will clean up. They should have at least two weeks feeding of this kind before being marketed. When ready they should be starved for at least twelve hours, bled and neatly dressed, care being taken to avoid tearing the skin when plucking as they are very tender and consequently easily torn at this age. Those who are not experts at dressing or who live at a distance from market can make arrangements to ship to a dealer who will dress and deliver at so much a pair. This is usually a better plan than shipping dressed in hot weather as the danger from spoiling under this method is great. For the week of July 3th broilers were quoted in wholesale way at 45 to 50 cents per pound in Montreal; 40 to 45 at Toronto and Vancouver. Where shipping to clubs and retailers considerable higher prices can be realized.

Army put Canada on French Map

That business men of France are turning their attention to Canada as a source of supply more than before the war is emphasized in the information reaching the Canadian Trade Commission. It appears that the participation of Canadian troops, many of them with a knowledge of French, has stimulated interest, and has been, so to speak, an advertising force for Dominion trade. A typical instance is quoted by the Commissioner General for Canada in France, who in describing the requirements of a large importing house says: "I sincerely believe that much sentiment exists here in France from the many interviews I have had and continue to have with men of all sorts—business, commercial and professional. I believe that the sentiment exists that purchases would be much preferable from Canada than from the United States. There is a great deal of love for Canada shown and Canada has become known from the many lines of endeavor undertaken by the Canadian army."

Circus Day

Saturday, August 8th, at Simcoe. Sparks World's Famous Shows will hold forth for a matinee and night exhibition, and the rare, unique and wonderful things that have been promised on paper will be come a reality.

The airy riders who, in disapproving skirts have been prouetting on the expansive backs of beautiful and speedy circus horses (on the bill boards) will be seen in all the gorgeousness of tulle and seductive smile; the elephants will copy their pictured acts of comedy and so them one better; the contortionist will proceed to disentangle himself from the knots he tied in his responsive body last year; the acrobatic families will turn dizzy somersaults and the clowns will work off their latest comedy stunts to the great delight of the crowds present—all like the clowns.

There is nothing on earth like the circus. It is the people's show par excellence. It is the one great American amusement that appeals to all the people.

The merit in a big circus like the Sparks Shows is in the fact that everything in the show is the very best of its kind. There must invariably be riding acts, but the riders are the leaders of their profession. There must be acrobats, but the acrobatic artists and aerialists are gathered from the wide world, and are the best that money can procure.

It is this superiority in the quality of the performers that makes the Sparks Shows such a welcome visitor.
