At this moment the comedy was being extended behind the scenes. Anderson had kept his eyes on Mary and was getting anxious that his part of the plat should be carried to success.

The ingredients were ready, and in the most natural way possible he came rushing up to the greenroom.

followed him to the stage door. A woman stood there with a bundle in her arms. "Oh, mise," said she. "Forgive a poor creature for daring to trouble you, but the manager is so strict.

Would ye mind holding the poor little innocent while I go in to speak to him? He won't allow no babies behind the scenes." "I will hold her," said Mary; "but be quick, please." And with a smile she took the little thing and with a woman's divine love drew aside its "Poor girl! poor girl!" he muttered tapping another bottle of soda water. and stirring the fire between the draughts. "It is poverty or something of that sort that has driven her to it. I'll never believe that she is a hardend, wicked woman. By Jove: can scarcely believe anything wrong of her, but seeing is believing; there is nothing to be said to ocular demonstration. I have been deceived, self-deceived, and there's an end of it." But unfortunately for his peace of mind that was not the end of it. He had a duty to go through.

He must go to Lady Mand and confess his wrong-doing, explain that it was not Beau but he who had been making himself ridiculous, and altogether make the amende honorable for hos harsh speeches and general condemnation of her the night before. It was a beter task, but Jack was not one to shrink from duty, however

And what made you so dreadfully palelooking? Did you drink too much claret last night after you got home, or was it a bad cigar? Poor Jack!' "Mand," he said, walking to the fire, which she was poking, and leaning his strong arm upon the broad mantel. I have come here this morning to tell you-" She looked up at his sad eyes with sympathetic glance. He caught it and looked down. "I have had a bitter lesson, Maud." he said, "a very bitter one, and I am feeling the effects this morning. You remember—how should you forget, though?-telling me of Beaumont's infatuation for the girl we saw last

"I was obliged to wait," said Mr. Shallop, "for it's business, and important business, too."

"Not a word," said Jack, "till you have had some lunch." Mr. Shallon smiled, and preesntly the valet brought up anicely arranged luncheon. Then the two gentlemen drew up and fell to, Jack dropping off into the chair again after a few mouthfuls, but Mr. Shallop, like a wise man, enjoying the good things set before him and eating leisurely, relating scraps of gossip for Jack's amusement meanwhile.

"Do you mind smoke while you are eating?" said Jack. "I've finished long ago," said Mr. Sahllon, taking a cigar, himself and removing to the armchair with wine-
