GERMANY STANDS FIRM FOR FOURTEEN POINTS

Cabinet Announces Refusal to Sign Terms Offered-Calls On United States to Enforce Its View.

Berlin Cable—"Germany declines to sign the peace terms laid before it, because they spell the economic destruction, political dishonor, and moral degradation of the entire German nation, not only for the present, but also for still unborn generations," was a statement authorized by the Cabinet this morning through the Associated Press.

"That these consequences must logically follow acceptance of the peace conditions the American press itself has recognized without question," the statement continues. "Toward them Germany took the standpoint that acceptance of such conditions could not be demanded, and that the Entente was unjustified in imposing such demands.

"Germany has not only a moral right to compliance with the general promises made it, but a firmly grounded, definite, clearly-defined claim, according to the basic rules of international law, on all the Entente powers, and especially on the United States. A specific recognition of the right of Germany and of the German peoples to a peace of right, justice and reconciliation, instead of the paragraphed song of hate which was written at Versailles, is contained in the note of the American Secretary of State Lansing of Nov. 9, 1918.

"The declaration of rights emanat ing from these specific declarations of all the Entente Powers and the United States constitutes Germany's sole asset in the general moral breakdown of all international politics which has found unsurpassable expression in the Versailles terms.

"Germany answers them with its clearly juristic rights in international law. Toward the politico-moral bankruptcy of Versailles the German nation stands as a creditor with unden!able rights, and it is not in a position to yield on this chief point. Germany ided peace on the basis of President Wilson's fourteen points, which all America had mad eits own, and all America, every individual, is responsible for the fulfilment of its claims. "It is not the German people's bustness to indicate how its rights shall be realized by the fourteen points, or especially by the note of Secretary Lansing. That, rather, is the task of those who constructed the fourteen points and brought them to acceptance, thereby inducing Germany to lay down her weapons. We do not believe that President Wilson, Secretary Lansing and the American people can take other than this German standpoint if they do not wish to do that which President Wilson, in his message of Dec. 4. 1917, condemned categorically when he said: 'We would dishonor our own cause if we treated Germany other than in a non-partisan manner, and did not insist upon justice towards all, no matter how the war ended. We demand nothing which we are not ready ourselves to admit. "And the German people demand nothing more than that which President Wilson announced in his declaration. We demand nothing more than that Americans place the fourteen points opposite the peace terms. We do not believe that anyone in the United States will then have the courage to claim that there can be found in the peace conditions one single trace left of President Wilson's pro-

"And here begins America's definite duty to step in. America either must put its fourteen points through or it must declare that it is unable to do so or that it does not want to do so, so that in no case may the world be so that in no case may the world be led to believe that America desires to have the peace conditions count as President's Wilson's fourteen points.

"That is our demand, to which we eling, and we cannot imagine what argument from the American side would be effective against it."

Kerensky, former Premier of Russia, and seven other members of the Russian Constituent Assembly, and members of the Parisian union for the regeneration of Russia, have issued an appeal to the democracies of the world for prompt action with a view to helping Russia out of her present chaoti ccondition. It proposes the organization of a mission, composed of delegates from all the powers, and including representatives of organized labor, which will go to Russia and explain to the people and the different Russian Governments the democratic aims they are pursuing. The appeal says: "It should be stated categorically that the different Governments repudiate the idea of any intervention likely to infringe upon the sovereign rights of Russia."

Never before have cattle prices, as real as many other meat products, seached so high a level as at the possible when the feeder plake up cattle as at the calves of different grades of breeding, through the country, with the intention of feeding them for beef, as the general run of animals are not well enough breed to develop into beef at such an early age. It takes an animal of good breeding to do it, lecause meat products are as high as even the price, and grain prices for such as barley, etc., are much lower breed it yourself, and feed it from the grade. It will be found much the put directly on to it from the put directly on the put directly on to it from the put directly on the put directly on to it from the put directly on the put directly well as many other meet products, reached so high a level as at the present time, and assuredly there is no room for doubt but that feeding will, at present, pay any cattleman who is finishing stock for the marsible last year are within reach now, because meat products are as high as ever in price, and grain prices for such as barley, etc., are much lower than they were during the war. However, such high prices are not permanent and cannot be counted on for a very great length of time. It will be well for each one to lay his plans accordingly.

The countries of Europe which were engaged in the war are dependent on this country for many articles of diet, but once they get a crop off their own land, they will not feel the need so greatly, consequently the demands made on agriculture here will not be so great. This will result in a lowering in foodstuff prices, and live stock prices also, because it seems to hold true that the price of meats depends almost as much on whether there is a shortage or surplus of cereals, as on whether is an actual shortage of meat products themselves.

It is one thing, however, to. say that prices for meats will decline, and another to predict when that situation will occur. One thing is certain, they will not come down until feeds first drop in price, and these cannot drop to normal until European and other countries which are short have had another harvest of their own. Until then, countries with good crops such as ours, will have to supply them. From this it would seem that prices will likely continue strong through the summer and to the end of the year. After that prices are uncertain and will depend on future conditions and developments.

The demands of the market of today require a different size of animal than was in favor a number of years ago. In those days, both here as well as in England, the heavy stuff was in favor and farmers fed to that end. In some cases, animals were four years old before they had attained the required finish. To accomplish such required too much expenditure of labor and feed than would be profitable at present. know this by experience, and they are gradually turning the younger stuff off at between two and three years of age. The reason for this is not only because it makes easier feeding, but because the market demands that weight of animal before the heavier stuff, and this is the case in England, as well as in our home market.

The man who produces beef, makes being evacuated by the Bolsheviki. The extraordinary commission to fight the

the time it takes the first drop of milk. Some may say that it can't be done, and that the animal will be no larger than baby-beef, but it is being done by good cattlemen, who find that such is the best method to follow at the present time. However, in order to ensure a steady growth and development, the feeder must keep the calf flesh on them, and keep them gaining from the time they are born until they are ready for the block. Such a method has several things. which recommend it to any stockman.

In the first place he can handle more cattle in a given time than when they are kept till they are older. Toke, for instance, the man who can keep forty head of cattle. If he keeps the steers or feeders until they are three years old he can carry only 10 cows, 10 yearlings, 10 two-yearolds and 14 three-year-olds, while the man who finishes his steers at two years, can, on the same size of farm, keep 13 cows, 13 yearlings and 13 two-year-olds. He can turn out he can produce his beef more cheaply than the first man because, young cattle growing and fattening at the same time, will make much better use of products than more mature They will utilize protein rich foods, such as oilcake and alfalfa or clover hay, more efficiently, because they require the protein to make muscle as they grow, while the more mature ones will soon use hardly any of the protein fed to them. gradual fattening in this way also. while growth occurs, will result in a much higher quality of beef than when the animal is allowed to rough it for a year, and then fattened in he will find that its use will benefit short space of time. The dressed arcasses in the former case will show better marbled beef, which means jucier beef also, and as this is the kind that brings the premium price, it will naturally follow that the feeder will realize a better price for his The feeder of two-year-olds stuff. has still another advantage in that he can hold his cattle without losing money on them, if the market does not suit him. They will keep on growing, while the mature animal when finished is a losing proposition if not marketed at once. Although grains are not nearly so much more by producing two-year-old high in price as they were a year beef than three and four-year-old, ago, the feeder is wise who makes a beef breed to make good beef at Gardhouse, one of our prominent beef as it has been proven that summer a success of it, should be, "to breed cattle breeders, laid stress on this gains made on pasture can be made right and then feed right."
