

eady to serve. heat and eat.

CLARK, LIMITED, MONTREAL

c Denominations.

de denominations neasures of capacity are iloliter or stere, 1.000 litne cubic meter; hectolic e, equals one-tenth of dekoliter, ten liters. ubic decimeters. liter. ubic decimeter; deciliter. a liter, equals one-tenth ecimeter: centiliter, one h of a liter, equals ten eters; militer, one onea liter, equals one cubic

cely Publicity

nity of 50,000 words were from St. John to various rid over on the de arrival here. One English prrespondent cabled 1.000 oils on which would cost ive other English preesagthy cables to their pan from New York, Boeand other points, kept. throughout the day he biggest day's publicity has ever received.

and Labor Saver.

rice it is well to plan to eft over. With an egg. ttle fruit juice added it delicious pudding, or it into croquettes or cream

SIR WILLIAM'S

CHAPTER XVI.

When he saw Clytie on the day after the girls' return to Bromley, Dr. Morton smiled and nodded with the self-approval which is the doctor's due when his prescription has proved satisfactory; for Clytie was looking in the pink of health and spirits.

"Nothing like a change," he said, cheerfully. "Now, don't you get run down again, or I'll send you packing of perpetual youth, it would be absurd to-to the Cannibal Islands, Miss to call old, though her hair was Clytie. As for you, young lady-" he added, to Mollie.

"I'm too tough for the most enterprising of cannibals," she cut in. "Yes, she does look fit, doesn't she? That's thanks to my sisterly care, and the absence of medical men at Withycombe. Now, you'll stay to lunch, won't he. Clytie? Do; and give your other poor patients a chance! Clytie went about the house with light step, and often singing to herself; and it was Moilie who now looked somewhat grave and thoughtful, as she eyed her much-changed sister. What had happened to work that change? she asked herself. You see, she was ignorant of what had to Clytie: passed in the boat during that eventful Clytic no longer showed any desire rough, and sometimes so wild. Not for solitude, or disinclination to join that there's anything of that sort to Mollie in her rides, and the people of complain of in Percy," she added the estate noticed, and rejoiced in, the quickly, and with fond pride. "He brightness which seemed to radiate has always been the dearest of boys; from their young mistress.

early visitor; indeed, he came over the first day and stayed to the lunch which the doctor had refused; and presently the friendship between the young people was strengthened and, so to speak, put on a proper footing by the arrival of the aunt, who came to run the Towers for the young lord.

"Didn't I tell you she was a brick?" he said, in an undertone to Clytie, when she and Mollie went over to eall. He lowered his voice because Lady Mervyn was in the room, at a little distance, talking to Mollie. "She is quite charming and more than kind," said Clytie; "and appears to have only one fault." "Oh! what's that?" he asked.

"She is too fond of a certain nephew of hers," she replied, with a smile.

The lad grinned. "That's her chief be to have virtue." he retorted. "But, I say, daughter." hasn't she taken to Miss Mollie? knew size would. They cottoned to each other at once; did you notice?"

"Most persons take to Mollie," said Clytie, glancing at that personage with loving admiration.

"Yes, I suppose they do," he assented thoughtfully and rather wistfully. "I suppose she has no end of-of ad-

"She is too young and sees too few persons to have as many as that turned the kiss; she could not find means," said Clytie. "But when she goes out into the world-"

He stifled a sigh. "Rather! I think she's the joiliest girl I've ever seen: and the prettiest-bar one." His gaze was so direct that, Clytic, laughing and blushing, did not ask him to name the exception. Lady Mervyn came across to them. She was an aristocratic lady whom, in these days snowy-white, and she wore upon it a round of Brussels lace which was too small to be described as a cap. "Your sister has been telling me all about you Miss Bramley," she said. in a peculiarly sweet voice, which had a note of resemblance to Stanton's. "It seems that Percy has been having a very happy time by the seaside; and think he is much improved."

"We've done our best," remarked Mollie demurely.

Lady Mervyn laughed and patted her hand, and, as Mollie went on to the terrace to pick up a cat, of course followed by Stanton, the old lady said "It is so good for him to know nice people, especially women; boys are so Be sure that Lord Stanton was an ment's uneasiness, excepting when he spent too much money and got into little boyish scrapes. Yes; it is very fortunate for him that you should be such near neighbors. What a charming girl your sister is, so quick and girlish, and with such delightful spirits! Now, she is just my ideal of what a young girl should be."

Clytie laughed with a little amusement at this unreserved approval. "I am so glad you like Mollie, Lady Mervyn," she said. "It isn't everybody who understands her."

"Oh, but I do!" Lady Mervyn declared. "I understood her at once; and she found her way to my heart directly. I haven't any children; and I pet Percy, as, no doubt, you see; but can imagine how delightful it would be to have a girl like Mollie for a

"And I can imagine how it would be for a girl like Mollie to have such a mother," said Clytie, with a sigh; and so won for herself a share in the heart of the old lady, who laid her hand in Clytie's affectionately, and kissed her. "You must let me mother you both, my dear," she said, in a low voice. "and you must let me call you Clytie and Mollie." Clytie's eyes were moist as she re-

A little later they dined at the Towers; a small party of the nearest neighbors, and a party which was made a merry one by Mollie's inexhaustible spirits; and, soon afterward, Clytic gave a quiet and informal dinner at the Hall. Among the guests was Hesketh Car-eds to express her gratitude, and

ton. He had called frequently since the girls' return to the Hall, and had several times proved himself of use to Clytic in some matters relating to the estate; and, Clytie was grateful to him, and treated him with a cordiality which, alas, Mollie did not simulate; for, though he strove hard, without seeming to do so, to win her good-will, Mollie declined to abondon her old dislike and

And yet he seemed so irreproachable. On the night of the dinner-party he bore himself with such modesty, such perfection of tone and manner as to gain the favorable opinion of his fellow guests excepting always Mollie, who, in a whisper, remarked to

"What does Mr. Hesketh Carton remind you of?" "Eh?" he said. "Remind me?"

"Did you ever see one of the crocodiles at the Zoo?

'Oh, I say, you know!" he protested, but laughingly. "He doesn't seem at all a bad chap!

Nor does the crocodile," retorted Mollie, "while it lies backing in the sun with a smile on its face; but you enap-ah!" She opened her mouth, and snapped her teeth expressively. "Yes; he looked like a beautiful sleek cat there, talking to Clytie; and she looks like a sweet innocent bird unconscious of danger, and not knowing that there are wicked claws under those silk

"Catch a bird not knowing a cat when it sees it!" he said, with a grin. And I say, you know, Miss Mollie, you're a bit hard on him-what?"

"All right," retorted Mollie, with nod. "You wait and see. Anyhow, wish he wouldn't talk to her so much; he's been hovering about her all the evening."

Other persons, whose eyes were not so sharp and who had not so much reason for watching Clytie, noticed that Mr. Hesketh Carton was parti cularly attentive to her; and Lady Winchfield remarked to her friend Lady Chillingford that it really would be a good thing if that wild Wilfred Carton proved to be dead, and Miss Bramley and Mr. Carton were to make a match of it. "It would dispose of that absurd will so nicely, wouldn't it, dear? And one must remember that, n the event of anything happening to Wilfred Carton, Hesketh would be the

And Lady Chillingford was. of course, of one mind with her friend. It was Hesketh Carton whosturned and he uncorked it and smelled the over her music for her when Clytie sang; and he and Stanton were the him, when he entered at the works, to last to leave, Hesketh lingering to study chemistry; and he knew that speak to Clytie about a lease of one the vial he held in his hand contained of the farms.

tasteful to Mollie vanished as he left difficulty at any chemist's, because the neuralgia of the sciatic nerve is called the house and walked toward his own quantity sold at one time was not sciatica, but the character of the and his face grew moody and thoughtful. He had been a guest in the house which, but for his hideous blunder in burning the "wrong will," would have been his. He had been just Mr. Hesketh Carton of the Pit Works, among the county people, instead of the master of Bramley; and the fact ate into his soul as acid eats into metal. But for that mistake! Was there no way of rectifying it, of recovering all that he had lost?

In his safe lay Wilfred Carton's renunciation of Clytie; but it would not take effect before the time for grace had expired. Meanwhile, Wilfred Carton, that vagabond and outcast, might return; all sorts of things might happen to deprive him, Hesketh, of any hope of recovering the money and the estate. Even if Wilfred Carton's renunciation stood, the girl would be mistress of it all. There was one way of achieving the fortune he had let elip; he might get Bramley by marrying her. The idea had occurred to him long ago, and he had followed it up by paying her careful, guarded attentions. But he was no fool, and he knew that Clytie Bramley was one who would not be easily won; and the sisterhe clenched his teth at the thought of Mollie-disliked him, and would be dead against him. No, Clytie Bramley was not easy to win; and, if she refused him, she would stand between him and all that he coveted. There seemed no way open to him. He felt, as he let himself into the dark and gloomy house, that, if a way could be shown, he would foilow it up, hewever crooked it might be.

He turned up the gas, and was drawing a chair to the fire to crouch over it, for Hesketh was of a chilly disposition, when he heard a knock on the outer of the two doors communicating with the works.

He listened for a moment doubtfully, for the hour was late; then, as the knock was repeated, he rose, unlocked the doors and found Merril standing

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said 'I'm afraid I'm disturbing you at this late hour; but you had gone out when came in the evening, and I thought you ought to know!"

'What is the matter?" asked Hesketh, rather curtly. "It's Martha Brown, sir. She's "Well?" said Hesketh, rather impatiently. She was one of the ordinary hands: she had been ailing for some time, and her death did not appear to him to be a matter of such importance gia, twinges of pain here and there." as to warrant Merril's coming at this hour of the night to announce it. "I'm very sorry, but-"

'Quite so, sir," Merril hastened to explain. "But I thought you'd like to know something I've discovered, the and women, are consumptive; and I'm not surprised. They spend too much money on finery and cheap jewelry to have enough for warm, sensible clothes and boots." "That's true, sir, true enough," adnitted Merril, shaking his head: "and t was thought Martha Brown was taken that way. Though I had my doubts from the first." "Why should you have any doubts?" inquired Hesketh, with barely conceal-

"Well, sir, I've noticed the girl for some time back, and it didn't seem to me as if she were going the same way as the other girls who are in a decline. wait til it opene its jaws and makes a She'd be ill by fits and starts; at times she would get quite thin and pale, and seem to have scarcely any life in her; at others-" have to do the building up of brain and nerve matter and is absolutely free from alum or other injurious substitutes.

"There are always fluctuations in the course of the malady," said Hesketh, still more impatiently.

"But not like those of Martha's, sir." said Merril. "She scarcely ever coughed, and the only thing she complained of was neuralgia; and it was after one of her bad bouts of neuralgia that she got worse. It occurred to me, sir, that she might be taking something is very variable and generally less with care, remembering that the for it that didn't agree with her."

"Very likely, I should say," rejoined Hesketh. "People like that are always fond of dosing themselves. I'm very sorry, but-"

Merril drew a little nearer, and took something from his pocket. "Well, sir; I went to her stand-you know she worked by herself; just beside the big window-I went there today to put her things together, and I found this." He held out his hand and showed a small vial. Hesketh took it, and his face grew graver, and his eyelids drooped, as they always did when he was taken by surprise, or wanted to conceal any emotion. He carried the vial to the light; there was no label on it-it had probably been rubbed offcontents. It had been necessary for one of the recently discoveerd poisons The smile which had been so dis- which can be purchased without any > sufficient to cause death. In an instant ne saw what had happened. If the girl had taken the whole of the noxious stuff at once, it would not have kiled her; but its constant use, a few drops at a time, had, by degrees, proved fatal.

> "Have you spoken to any one of this find of yours, Merril?" he asked, with a casual air.

"No one, sir. I thought I'd better speak to you first," repfied Merril. "You see of there wasn't any harm in ing the blood. For this purpose we the stuff, there was no need to make know of no medicine that can equal a fuss. They'd probably want an in- Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills quest, and her poor people would be put to no end of trouble, and perhaps thus act as the most efficient of nerve expense. "Quite right!" said Hesketh, approvingly. "You acted quite rightly. As form of nerve trouble, give these pills a matter of fact, this drug is entirely harmless; it is just one of the remedies for toothache, neuralgia, which can be bought at any chemist's, and certainly"-he emphasized the word impressively-"certainly had nothing whatever to do with the death of the cine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Merril heaved a sigh of relief. "Im plad to hear it sir, "he said. I, myself, was inclined to be of that opinion; or else, of course, the doctor would have found out what she'd been taking."

Professor H. Strauss, M. D., of the Royal Charity Hospital, says, "The cause for an attack of gout, rheumatism, lumbago, is supplied by the increase of uric acid in the blood serum, the result of various causes, the most frequent of which is renal. Before an attack, one suffers sometimes from headache, neural-

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead when the back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; when you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach; or you have rheumatic Hesketh moved impatiently. "It was consumption, was it not?" he said, the weather is bad, do not neglect the "A great many of the hands, the girls warning, but try simple means. Take

> This is the discovery of Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. "Authe Invalids' Hotel, Buttato, N. I. "Anuric" is an antidote for this uric acid > poisoning and dissolves uric acid in the > body much as hot coffee dissolves sugar.
>
> "Anuric" will penetrate into the joints > and muscles, and dissolve the poisonous > accumulations. It will stamp out toxins.
>
> Sand 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's invalidations.

Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package.

sheth turned away to poke the As the man spoke, he reman-rending stransizes of the thing. and the statement that it was one of the few poisons which leave no trace

"Just so," he said. "Of course, he would. I'm glad you kept this thing to yourself, Merril; and that you came to me before mentioning it. Ut course you will say nothing about it. would only cause useless trouble and pain to her folk. You showed your usual good sense."

"Thank you, sir," responded Merril, much gratified by his master's approval. "Shall I take the bottle, sir. and throw it away?" Hesketh held it out, then drew back his hand.

"Oh, don't trouble," he said. "I'll throw it away. Will you have a glass of wine, whiskey, Merril?" Merril declined gratefully and respectfully, and, after a few more words, departed. Hesketh stood before the fire, with the vial in his hand, pondering over hte case. "This universal drug-taking is the curse of the age," he muttered. "I wonder how many persons die of poison without their friends, or they themselves, for that matter, suspecting

He raised his hand to fling the vial on the fire; then he checked himself as he had checked himself in returning it to Merril. "I wonder in what strength they make it up?" he mused. "I'll see to-

He placed it on the mantelshelf and stood looking at it absently; then, reflecting that one of the servants might be tempted to taste it, he went to the safe and locked it up; it rested on Jack's paper of renunciation, which he had stolen at Mr. Granger's.

> (To Be Continued). Clouds.

"The height maintained by clouds than you might suppose," writes Jean Henri Fabre. "There are clouds that lazily trail along the ground; they are the fogs. There are others that cling to the sides of moderately high mountains, and still others that crown the summits. The region where they are commonly found at a height varying from 500 to 1,500 meters. In some rather rare instances, they rise to nearly four leagues. Beyond that, eternal serenity reigns."

Is Caused by Thin, Watery Blood and Cured by Enriching the Blood.

Most people think of neuralgia as a pain in the head or in the face, but neuralgia may affect any nerve in the body. Different names are given to it when it affects certain nerves. Thus are the same. The cause being the same, the cure to be effective must tal strain of driving and repairing be the same. The pain in neuralgia automobiles." is caused by starved nerves. The blood, which carries nourishment to the nerves, has become thin and impure and no longer does so, and the pain your feel is the cry of the nerves for their natural food. You may ease the pains of neuralgia with hot applications, but you can only cure the trouble by enriching and purifyactually make new, rich blood and tonics. If you are suffering from this most dreaded of troubles, or any a fair trial, and see how speedily you will be restored to good health.

PAINFUL NEURALGIA

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer ,or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medi-

St. John, N.B.

St. John is a city of 63,000 inhabitants, situated on the Bay of Fundy, at the mouth of the River St. John. The St. John River is 450 miles long. and passes through a fertile, productive and most beautiful region. The various products of the Province find their way to the sea at the Port of St. John, where also the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Lines of Railway join forces with ocean steamships from all parts of the world. Its harbor is always open for raffic, winter or summer. In the hannel and at the ocean freight wharves there is a depth of water at low tide of 32 feet, which gives a high water depth of about 58 feet. It is the chief winter port of Canada, taking the place of Montreal and Quebec in me." the winter season, when the St. Lawrence is closed. Having the shortest land haul to the sea of any developed Eastern Canadian Port. it is rapidly progressing as a National Port.

Nathaniel's "Jinx" Active.

Nathaniel Ripte had a terrible experience one afternoon when he was about twelve years old. He opened the doors of the buggy house and was backing the buggy in when the wind blew both doors shut. He propped them open with small sticks, but just as he reached the buggy tongue one of the sticks fell and the doors came around far enough to stop the buggy. A moment later Grandpa Ripple, who had just come down to the barn, said: "What's that you are saying, Nathan-

Cat Victims of the War.

During the four and a half years of the war 70.000 diseased, mangled, blind, starved and injured cats were taken off the stre s of London by the shelters of Our Dumb Friends' League, mercifully destroyed in lethal boxes. and their t dies afterwards disposed a renewal of health. of by cremation. It is claimed in the fourteenth annual report of the organization that the shelters have done you'll feel the brisk, keen their share of war work, for thy have tion of a healthy, well-reg victims of air raids, evolosions and other war disasters. During the year

LAW AND THE AUTOMOBILE

Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, we being congratulated at a luncheon his ordinance forbidding chauffours to blow their horns in the crowded be ness section of the city.

"Chauffeurs think," he said, "that they need only to blow their home and the pedestrians will leap out of their way. Let the chauffeurs drive destrian's right is supreme.

"Why, if something isn't done, the chauffours, in their arrogance, will be getting up a horn code for the pedestrian to learn and obey-a code so thing like this:

"One toot-Throw a quick handspring for the sidewalk. "Two toots-Dive over the car.

Three toots—Lie down calmly; it is too late to escape; but we will go over you as easily as possible, if you keep very still. "One long and two short toots

Throw yourself forward and we will save both your arms. One short and two long toots-Throw yourself backward and one leg will be saved.

"Four toots—It's all up with you but we promise to notify your family.

The late Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, the neurologist, was escorting some New York friends through a Philadelphia sanatorium in which he was interested. Opening the door, he remarked: "This big room has been set aside for the care and cure of who have broken down under the men-"Very fine," said one of the doc guests, "but where are the patients the chauffeurs?" "Under the bed, mending the slate."

ness box to tell what she knew about the annihilation of a prize pig by motor car. Being sworn, she was asked if she had seen the car kill the pig in question.

"I seed it," she answered. "Then," said the counsel, "tell the Court in as few words as possible fust how it occurred."

"That I can, sur. It just to and tuck him." A man lay groaning and writhing by the wayside when up dashed a constable and proceeded to investigate; but all he could get out of the sufferer was: "I ate one, two-I ate one, too." .

The constable was puzzled, but not for long. "Poison!" was his diagnosis, and, mindful of his training, he at once procured an emetic, which simply electrified the recipient.

Between convulsions he managed to ask the reason for such treatment. and on being told and asked what it was he had eaten, he become more abusive.

"What did I eat?" yelled he. "Why, you idiots, '1812' is the number of the car that knocked me down. "You tell me," said the Judge, "that this is the person who knocked you down with his motor car. Could you swear to the man?" "I did," returned the complainant, eagerly, "but he didn't stop to hear

BILIOUSNESS

How to Prevent and Gure

Among the earliest symptoms are furred tongue and dull headache. Then come dizzy spells, bad taste, quick pulse, fever and cold sweats. Finally, sleeplessness and vomiting make the condition of the sufferer almost intolerable. The root of biliousness is with the liver, which is clogged and can't keep bile from getting into the blood Nothing works with the certain of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they directly on the liver, restore the bile to its proper course and prevent it from contaminating the vital fluid. Of course, the bowels are o and relaxed by Dr. Hamilton Pi and kidneys receive new ton blood is renovated, and the re

No need for delay; the sooner was use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, the

He-Did you love me when you fi frequently taken in the maimed feline tem. Sold in yellow boxes, 250 1917 the seven shelters received over saw me? She Oh, no. I h

