

DIGESTION
 Common Trouble
 Horses.
 Condition of Homs Described
 and General Advices—Cultivation Department of Ontario.
 tion, or indi-
 engagement,
 improper food;
 sticated food
 dentition or
 meth, voracious
 feeding, heactivity of the
 ous appetite,
 t dith, usually animal becomes a dry scurfy
 e bowels, gen-
 ness and more inability, to caused by the
 ood, the cause
 by the appear-ecky pains are our or so after
 has a general
 ad lacks vigor,
 rge percentage
 ility of masti-
 th should alimed. If the
 and the owner
 y instruments
 o a veterinar-
 re years old
 on due to un-
 s. 1 and 2 in
 out four years
 These crowns
 by the use of forceps or a
 er horses the
 due to sharp
 of tooth sub-
 e of the upper
 of the lower
 that requires trouble that
 by an expert aments. When outh, and the
 t, a purgative
 and 2 drams
 purgation is action is not prepare the only for 18
 es after the urgative, the rest, and bran-
 gation com-
 ily 18 to 24
 ament. When 48 hours, a uler than the
 ve regained
 m, mix equal sulphate of x vomica and and give a e daily. Give small quan-
 on improves
 quantity, un-
 an be fed.—
 A. College,
 od Crops.
 Ontario are
 corn, beans,
 els, and car-
 by fully one During the rea used for
 at used for
 that for poactically the
 some varia-
 e referred to specially after well to have
 e early aut-
 ble, the land
 winter, marrow ridges
 t. This en-
 on the sub-
 and preserves
 themselves;
 way works
 hen brought case of po-
 to mature
 the spring,
 ecommended
 op previous.
 development
 eab on the re for the supplement-
 ited use of The fertiularly good
 th co-opera-
 out Ontario
 and turnips,
 pounds of ni-
 creased the
 ns per acre
 5 years'
 made up in bit of seven
 tteen parts
 ine parts of
 iven econo-
 used at the pounds per
 A. College,
 ily. The use
 means extra
 extra gains rnk during
 der. Horses
 when wore best gains
 day, and on d, freshly
 g on diges-
 particularly,
 ivo stock at
 will tend to 1922.

The Product of Experience

THE sensible size of the Chevrolet "Four-Ninety" Touring Car assures both riding comfort and low operating cost. It is a roomy car—three passengers being comfortably accommodated in the back seat.

It is heavy enough to hold to the road at all times—light enough to be easy to handle and economical of gasoline and tires.

Chevrolet dependability is so well established that you can buy this handsome touring car with entire confidence.

BOOTH & POND
 Sales Agents
 JARVIS, ONTARIO.

ESTABLISHED 1872

BANK OF HAMILTON
 JARVIS BRANCH—J. N. Brown, Manager
 Nanticoke—Tuesday and Friday

THE great success of the Bank of Hamilton is largely owing to its courtesy and careful service extended continuously over a period of forty-six years. The same service which has made friends of many hundreds of our customers in the past is at your full disposal to-day.

Shop in Simcoe
At Our Expense

We Refund Car Fare from Jarvis on a purchase of $6.00 and over, Hagersville $9.00 and over, and from Nelles Owners on $10.00 and over.

Murdoch's
 Simcoe's Favorite Shopping Place

Choice Line of Fresh and Cured Meats
 on hand at all times.

We also carry Fresh Sausage, Cooked Ham, Bologna and Weiners, Lard, Margarine and Mince Meat.

YOUR ORDERS SOLICITED.
 GIVE US A CALL.
EDGAR MACHELL
 The Old Veteran, JARVIS

Ice Cream Specials

Banana Split	Jarvis Special
Teddy Bear	Walnut Sundae
Cherry Sundae
Chocolate Walnut Sundae
Pine Apple Sundae.

All lines of Fresh Groceries.

THOMAS HARRIS
 Grocer and Butcher
 JARVIS — — — ONTARIO

FIFTY-EIGHT FIFTY
 By R. RAY BAKER
 (G. 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It did not look like a good investment that Hilda Caruthers had made. No, Hilda had not taken a flier in copper, oil or motors. She had simply bought a dress.

Clothes being a necessity, the purchase of a dress when one is needed is an investment. But Hilda was fairly well supplied with wearing apparel that was pretty enough, but suited only to everyday wear.

The reason the dress in question did not look like a good investment was that she wanted it for one special occasion, and it cost $58.50 of the $60 she had in the bank.

It seemed like downright foolishness but she just had to go to Anne's wedding, and as Anne's wedding was to be an event of stellar social importance common clothes would be out of place.

Anne was the best girl friend Hilda ever had. They had been chums in school and had been together so much they were taken for sisters, and even began to feel that way themselves.

In their senior year at high school the two girls became separated when Anne's parents moved with her to a near-by city. However, the two girls corresponded regularly and were as good friends as ever, spending most of their vacation periods together.

Hilda was graduated from high school, took a business course and became a bookkeeper in a department store. Anne took a position as stenographer in a broker's office.

Three years later came the surprising news from Anne:

"I'm going to marry a millionaire!"

It seemed that Anne's employer fell in love with her and she, with him, and there could be only one natural result. In the midst of preparations for the wedding the Moorehouse home burned to the ground, and plans were upset for a short time.

Then Anne got the idea she would like to be married in the little church she used to attend in her old home town; so the two families most concerned motored thither.

It was to be an elaborate function, and consequently when Hilda received an invitation she knew it behooved her to adorn herself suitably for the occasion.

The wedding was set for eleven o'clock in the morning, and at nine Hilda set out afoot for the church. It had been raining hard, but had cleared off, and the sun was shining brightly.

Two blocks from the church she stopped at a corner to let a big coupe roll past. The machine was closer to her than she had calculated as she stood on the walk, and the rear wheel churned up a sea of mud and hurled a tidal wave at Hilda.

As the auto vanished round a corner a block away the girl stood and with her fists rubbed wet dirt out of her eyes and looked down at her dress to see that it was ruined.

Hilda realized that as far as her presence was concerned the wedding might have been on Mars. She simply could not attend in that mud-bespattered costume. There was only one thing to do—retrace her steps, take off the $58.50 worth of ruined goods and spend the day in misery in her room.

As she walked dejectedly toward her home, trying vainly to brush the clinging mud from her, a feeling of rage gradually rose within her. She remembered how she had seen a young man driving the coupe, and she recalled that he had smiled at her as he drenched her with mud.

For a moment the smiling face had attracted her and she had wished that she might know the young man. Now she had the same longing, but for a different reason. She would like to present him with a slice of her mind.

Fretting and fuming, Hilda wended her way homeward, while the wedding guests crowded the church, and the bride-to-be, with the assistance of a maid, got into her gown in her room at the hotel, and the groom-to-be sat in his room with his father and smoked black cigars to steady his nerves.

In the midst of these preparations the telephone in Anne's room summoned her, and when she turned from the instrument she displayed excitement.

"Get mother," she ordered the maid. "Gwendolin has had a nervous collapse and can't act as bridesmaid. Anybody would think she was going to be married, instead of her cousin. I was afraid she'd do something like that, she's so high-strung. Mother insisted on having her, though. Now maybe she'll consent to Hilda Caruthers, if it's possible to get word to Hilda this late, and if she'll consent to playing second fiddle."

So Mrs. Moorehouse flustered onto the scene, and when she had been made acquainted with the situation she flustered to the young man who was about to become her son-in-law. The latter's brother, who was to act as best man, had just driven up in his machine.

"Fred," directed the prospective groom, "take a run up to the church and yank Hilda Caruthers out of the audience and bring her here. She can wear one of Anne's dresses."

"I don't know her," Fred objected. Mrs. Moorehouse flustered back to her daughter and returned with a picture of Hilda. Fred's face took on a queer, canted expression as he studied it.

"That's Anne's sister," he remarked.

"You, Anne—always and forever more." There was utter silence in the big room for a minute, and then the man went on:

"Do you remember the first time you called me Jimmy?" he asked. "It was at the Van Norden's. We sat out six dances in succession and started all the old gossips talking. That was the first time I told you I loved you, too—and I—"

"Don't, Jimmy," said Anne. "Our love didn't treat us very well, you know, and we buried it. Let it rest in peace."

"You do not mean that, Anne Dunsany," said Jimmy, advancing toward her, and before she knew it he had her in his arms and had kissed her. She could feel his heart beating heavily. His voice at her ear was unsteady, like an old forgotten melody. "You haven't buried it any more than I have," he said.

"Why not?" whispered Anne, trying to make her voice sound firm. "You made my life pretty miserable, you know. Your jealousy would have driven many a woman mad, and I wouldn't go through it all again for anything in the world."

"I've learned a lot since then, my dear," said the man. "You won't let love go just because it hurt you once," and he kissed her again.

With a sudden remembrance of her real mission in the house Anne tore herself free.

"How can you?" she cried. "What about Daisy?"

"Oh, Daisy!" said Jimmy, his eyes sparkling gently. "Daisy looked so like you, Anne, that I just couldn't keep away from her. Then I knew, too, that sooner or later she would bring you to Glenbrook. But I didn't dream of finding you here today."

With her face against his shoulder Anne explained. "They told me the past of a man named James must be looked into before he could pay further attentions to my young cousin. You knew in Glenbrook it is a serious thing to pay attentions."

The man's gray eyes twinkled with understanding, and Anne continued: "So I decided the best way to unearth the creature's secrets was to inspect his house, he being absent. I had just found 'Monsieur Beaucaire' when you spoke. I thought I was dreaming."

"And do you really think you are not going to marry me, my dear?" asked Jimmy, his lips brushing her hair.

"Poor little Daisy!" said Cousin Anne.

Jimmy laughed in a way Glenbrook had never heard him laugh before.

"Look!" he said, pointing to the window. Coming down the street hand in hand, oblivious of neighbors, of the beauties of the sunset sky or of anything but themselves, came Daisy Trent and Tommy.

"Daisy likes certainties better than mysteries, dearest," said James.

GIVEN NAME BY FRANKLIN
 Suggestion of Famous Philosopher Re-sulted in Current's Becoming Known as Gulf Stream.

The Gulf stream, which was discovered by Ponce de Leon while on his famous search for the fountain of youth, received its name through a suggestion of Benjamin Franklin, because it issued from the Gulf of Mexico. While it is only a part of the grand scheme of ocean circulation, and the Gulf of Mexico is in reality only a stopping place, this name is generally applied to the current now as it was given by Franklin.

Franklin's theory of the cause of ocean currents, the Detroit News remarks, was that the winds produce the current by air moving over the surface of the water, and thus illustrated his theory: "It is known that a large piece of water, ten miles broad and generally only three feet deep, has by a strong wind had its water driven to one side and sustained so as to become six feet deep, while the windward side was laid dry."

It has been found, however, that the water entering the Caribbean as a result of the trade winds is not more than one-half the amount which flows through the Straits of Florida from the Gulf of Mexico, and the other half is supplied from a source which does not come under the head of a measurable current. The waves caused by the wind is the other source, every ripple carrying a certain amount of water in the direction toward which it is flowing. Irrespective of the current caused by its friction. When the waves become large, tons of water are hurled from the crest into the trough every time the waves break.

Potential Uplifter.
 "The young woman who is reading a paper on hygiene seems to take herself seriously."
 "Yes," replied Mr. Cobbles. "That's Sally Toedle, daughter of th' richest man in town. She thinks this old man's money sorter makes her responsible for other people's goin' on, one way an' another. I'm afraid that unless some feller comes along an' marries Sally, an' maybe mistreats her a little an' leaves her at home with th' baby an' th' servants while he's sky-larkin' around, she's goin' to meddle with other folks' business all her life. There's nothin' like a matrimonial jolt or two to teach a woman common sense."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Principal Signification.
 "What is the meaning of the freedom of the seas, pa?"
 "It means you are free to take a drink when you get beyond the three-mile limit."

Falls' August Furniture Sale

Is a Delight and a Wonder

To say that this is a Furniture Stock and Home Furnishing Department without a rival within fifty (50) miles of Simcoe is to give it very faint praise indeed. Every kind of furniture, that anybody who wants to have a good home, their desire is here, in a choice that makes it practically impossible for one not to find the kind of furniture one wants. As the stocks stand to-day they are practically proof against disappointing anybody who wants good furniture at true savings.

Good Furniture Does Not Necessarily Mean Costly Furniture.

In Falls' August Furniture Sale there is such a showing of low and moderate priced furniture as has never before been seen within many a mile of Simcoe. We feel free to say these things now because so many people who were here the opening days of the sale have seen the proof of them with their own eyes. The proof is Still here.

In its complete arrangements this August Sale is the largest that we have ever held, and we believe that it is the best. The display is extensive, but is so well shown in its arrangement that on the third floor that there can be no difficulty in finding the exact price you want in the shortest time.

One of the Best Stores in Ontario.

Our Whole Stock of Furniture, Rugs, Mattresses, Beds, Refrigerators, Kitchen Cabinets, Etc., is Reduced.

Everything on our floors and everything to be brought in. It is important that the reductions are large, but it is more important that they are actual.

HSC FALLS