Build up the Small Town

It is high time that all of us paid more attention to the building up of the little town and less to making the overgrown city larger. The little town is home—or should be. It needs our support and we are the people who must give it life and power if it is to have either. The big cities care nothing for us. It will if it can pull our dollars away and lure our boys and girls into its whirlpool, and that is the only use it has for us. The little town needs us and we need it. Hall's Corners may not be as large a dent on the map as New York, but it really means more to us, and we ought to help make it something to be proud of. Why not get over the idea that the bright future of America lies in the great cities? It does not. The future which lies in the great cities is shopworn, smoked, dirty and unclean. The true future lies in the country and in the little towns. Back them up and make them grow. — Rural New Yorker.

The glad vacation days are here. When those with money roam And sit and sigh as days go by For all the joys of home.

Though the Canadian National Exhibition only dates back to 1879, the first exhibition from which the Canadian National Exhibition developed was established in Toronto in 1846.

Much Sickness Due to Lack of Work

The healthy body produces more energy than it needs to keep the heart, lungs and bowels working. This surplus energy must be spent in mental or physical work. On the other hand, people who work too hard use their reserve strength and wear out the system.

People who are inclined to Nervousness, Constipation, or have any of the Troubles of the Heart, Liver, Nerves, Kidneys, Stomach or Bowels can greatly improve the condition of their health if they so desire.

If you work too hard, take more rest, if you work too little, take more exercise, you will need medicine to correct the troubles caused by your indiscretions and to assist nature to restore health. Then take

Hacking's Heart and Nerve Remedy and if you require a laxative take

Hacking's Kidney and Liver Pills

These two preparations will work wonders and we will guarantee beneficial results because we know they will do so.

Mr. Wilson E. Eagleston, of Bayfield, writes as follows: "I have much pleasure in addressing you in regard to Hacking's wonderful Heart and Nerve Remedy. I have used quite a few boxes and I must say they have done me a world of good. Please send me 5 more boxes of Hacking's Heart and Nerve Remedy and 2 boxes of Hacking's Kidney and Liver Pills."

If you too want to regain your lost health, then go to your nearest Drug Store and ask for Hacking's.

KANGAROO HUNT.

Australians Chase Bounding Animals With Greyhounds.

A kangaroo hunt is to be one of the novel sights that the Prince of Wales will witness during his visit to Australia. Such a hunt is an exciting business. Sir Peter McBride, Agent-General for Victoria in London, thus describes one:

Accompanied by a pack composed of a particular breed of greyhound, the party rides out until it comes within sight of a herd of kangaroos browsing.

Very much after the manner of a fox hunt, the pack starts off in full cry, and the horsemen follow, with cries and encouragements.

Off goes the herd, covering the ground with amazing swiftness in great bounds. It is a case of the survival of the fittest.

The hounds draw nearer. The leaps of the hindmost kangaroo become shorter. Hounds and horsemen are almost upon the animal—when it will halt at a suitable place and back against a tree or rock.

As the hounds close in the kangaroo's fore-paws grip the foremost pursuer and lift it. The hind paws rise and tear the hound to ribbons!

Another dog comes on and is cast away dead. But numbers finally overwhelm the kangaroo.

The hunt may last from half an hour to two hours; it may go on all day, with hounds in pursuit of several successive kangaroos. Perhaps the whole herd will make for a wall or fence, if there is one in the neighborhood.

Over they go, in great sloping bounds, even though the barrier be ten feet high. And unless the hunters can go round it they are "stumped."

Or the herd may be hunted into a prepared enclosure and there exterminated. This kind of hunt is often practiced because of the annoyance kangaroos give to the farmers.

The latest method, however, is the motor car hunt.

Cars drive out to a herd and give chase. Somebody stands on the footboard, and when the car plunges among the animals or comes alongside one, he makes a grab for the kangaroo's tail.

The kangaroo bounds on; the car follows. Another grab, and a miss. At last, however, the crouching hunter will seize the tail and swing the animal over his head into the back of the car, where it is despatched by a knock on the head.

Kangaroo hunting is more exciting than fox hunting, but the danger is no greater—unless a huntsman were unwise enough to get within reach of the terrible hind paws.

Moving the Feast.

When Almanack's, the original Brooke's, was founded, it was under "distinguished patronage," for Charles James Fox and casual dukes and earls saw it down the ways. Of course they drew up an elaborate set of rules, the most painful of which was as follows: "Dinner shall be served at exactly half-past four o'clock and the bill shall be brought in at seven minutes past four." Fox had his faults, but in many ways he had a modern mind, and for all he loved candles and the hour when the fairies were chillest, and Napoleon said was the most ticklish for courage, he was a child of light. How sad it is then to behold so great a man so much a slave to the small conventions of his day that he could as a scholar and a gentleman ask other gentlemen and scholars to dine at so hideous an hour as half-past four o'clock, even though the bill was to be handed in at seven. But in 1764 men did dine at half-past four o'clock and thought themselves pretty fellows. And they were, compared with fifteenth century John Paston who did his dining at 11 o'clock in the morning, at which hour he stoked himself with beef, pork and mutton. In those prehistoric days, beef was an article of commerce, mutton was current, and pork passed from hand to hand. They had no breakfast foods, no condensed milk—nothing in fine, save food. In our memory, we can recall the day in Oxford when twopenny would buy a bland and snowy cauliflower, and even the consorts of duns for their Savoy at one penny. Now all is changed, but we cannot regret that dinner is no longer at 11 o'clock in the morning, nor yet at half-past four o'clock in the afternoon. Yet these things oscillate, and men may find themselves dining again at half-past four o'clock though one can be quite sure that with the great progress made in methods of finance, the bill will be presented well before seven.

Children of Modern Science.

Remembering the lessons of the past, said Sir Robert Hadfield at Sheffield recently, his firm (Hadfields, Ltd.) prepared to undertake, should the gun ever be built to fire them, the production of armor-piercing projectiles weighing nearly 2½ tons each and 21 inches in diameter.

This is probably 50 per cent. heavier than the biggest projectile yet fired. It would perforate 30 inches of hard-faced armor at a range of ten miles, or 50 inches of such armor at short proving ground range, and would require 1,200 pounds of propellant.

The "Woolwich Infant," completed early last year, is the largest gun ever constructed, weighing 150 tons, and fires an 18-inch shell, weighing about 1½ tons, piercing 22 inches of armor at ten miles.

Capt. Delamarre-Mae, a Frenchman, has invented a new type of gun capable of firing shells 150 miles.

Don't Read When Drowsy. To read or study when tired or drowsy is to strain the eyes to a dangerous degree, writes W. M. Carr, in Public Health. Avoid evening study when possible. If you are using your eyes by artificial light, be sure the light does not shine directly into the eyes, and try to have it come from behind and to the left side so as to avoid the harmful glare.
