Protecting Birds.

Co-operating with the Dominion authorities, the Ontario Government, acting under power given in the Birds Protection Act, of 1918, has passed regulations providing for the protection of birds generally in the province. The regulations make it an illegal act to "shoot, destroy, wound, catch, net, snare, poison, drug, or otherwise kill or attempt to kill any native wild birds of other than goshawks, sharp-shinned hawks, great horned owls, crows, cow birds, blackbirds and house sparrows. This will not cover, however, the shooting in season of game birds specifically provided for in the Game and Fisheries Act, nor does it apply to cage or domesticated birds or poultry.

The regulations provide that where any of the birds protected become seriously injurious to the agricultural or other interests of any community the Minister may issue permits to kill them. The possession of any protected birds is made an offence, and it is equally an offence to take or destroy the nests or eggs of such birds—a bitter pill for youthful birds-egg collectors. Exception, however, is made in the case of ornithologists, biologists, or students of biology, who may, under conditions, secure a permit to collect birds or eggs.

Prosecutions will be made under the Game and Fisheries Act.

Shortage of Houses.
Houses and apartments seem to be scarce in cities on the other side of the Atlantic as well as here, as a result of the suspension of building during the war. Here are two humorous indications of the shortage. From a British weekly, Lady—How was it you lost your job? Tramp—Well, mum, I was a painter, I was used to paint them "To Let" notices. From a Christiania (Norway) weekly: "Have you a room to let?" "Yes, but I entertain application only from night editors who are out all day."

Making New Canadians

THIRTY-NINE young Polish-Canadians marched up and down the yard of a country school in Northern Manitoba and took their marching orders from a sergeant-major of fourteen years. They went through the manual exercise as precisely as a regiment of trained soldiers, and when they were through with it they passed in file into the school house. The day's work indoors began with some singing, in English, and the instruction during the day, as every day, was also in English. Yet a year ago not one of the young folk in that school could speak or understand a word of the language.

All through the prairie West the Canadianization of the foreign-speaking people is being given an increased amount of attention, and in many cases with surprisingly good results. What has been done in that one Manitoba school is being done in many others in that province and in Saskatchewan and Alberta. With or without military drill, the lesson of British patriotism is being driven home, and the virus of alien influence and prejudice is in some measure overcome by the good work being done with the rising generation. Perhaps the Bolsheviks have not sufficiently taken into account the Canadian educational system.

Dr. J. T. M. Anderson was a short time ago appointed director of education for new Canadians in Saskatchewan, and with the sanction of the Provincial Department of Education is now initiating a policy that aims at giving to every child of non-English parentage a training necessary for good Canadian citizenship. The instruction is to be given by Canadian teachers, and under conditions much more favorable than have obtained heretofore.

It used to be more than a year's salary made up for to live as the teachers in the average foreign-speaking community out West had to live. There was in many cases nothing for them to do but to go a-boarding with some of the funny-named people whose children they taught by day, and in whose back-smelling houses they slept at night. Non-English hosts and hostesses were frequently persons of excellent intentions, who did the best they could for the schoolmama's, but the results were seldom entirely happy, and as a natural consequence school districts of this kind were avoided. It is now proposed, however, to supply comfortable cottages in which the teachers are to keep house for themselves. To live among the immigrant settlers isn't so bad when one hasn't to live with them.

A similar plan is being put into effect in Alberta also. The Department of Education in that province will prepare plans for many residences for teachers, and will pay one-third of the cost of construction if the building is of a value of not less than $1,000. The local school district will then be asked to supply comfortable cottages in which the teachers are to keep house for themselves. This housing feature will not be compulsory, but will be introduced where local circumstances make it advisable.

Both in Saskatchewan and Alberta the new plans of the Education Departments involve the use of the school building as a centre of community life and betterment. In the latter province the trustees will be encouraged to furnish the schools so that they can be used as community halls for lectures, concerts, and such like. A grant of fifty per cent. of the cost of equipment for movable and adjustable seats will be made to each rural school district, up to a maximum of $250, and in this way it is hoped to encourage the country people to use their schools as real centres of social welfare.

Saskatchewan will try the plan of stocking some of its schools in non-English communities with newspapers and magazines. Grafanotas will also be recommended to the trustees as a means of cultivating the children's taste for good music and oratory, and wherever practicable sewing machines will be installed for the girls. Libraries will be established in the foreign schools of Manitoba by the Daughters of the Empire, as war memorials to the fallen.

Some of the rural districts of Saskatchewan, where the non-English population is dominant, have never before had winter schools, but the experiment has proved a success, and will likely be continued. In all such cases an effort is being made to cultivate community spirit and to use the school as a real source of social betterment. Here is a report from a teacher in one such school that shows how the plan is working out:

"We opened school about the middle of January. It is the first time they have had a winter school in this Ruthenian district. I have about thirty enrolled, and twelve are attending night school four evenings a week. On February 1 we held our first social evening. I was agreeably surprised to find the people so neatly dressed. Two other English teachers assisted me. We played games, and later danced. I was most favorably impressed with the manner in which all appreciated our efforts to entertain them. They used English quite freely throughout the evening."

Practical Mind.

The American tourist who said of Niagara Falls, "Gosh! that's neat!" is matched by a Scotch tourist at the Pyramids, who, according to Harper's Magazine, said, as he gazed at the stupendous pile, "Ah, mon, what a lot of mason-work not to be bringing in any road!"
