L'AFFAIRE ROCHETTE.

French Financial Swindler Had a Remarkable Career.

Henri Rochette, banker and promoter. has been sentenced to two years' im-prisonment and a fine of 3,000 francs for swindling French investors to the amount of more than 10,000,000 francs through the 'L'Affaire Rochette has afforded Paris "L'Affaire Rochette has allorded Paris a big sensation, which is not to be wondered at, considering the huge amont of money involved. Never in the course of French financial history has been such an extraordinary successful promoter as Rochette, the man of 43, who not many years ago was a cafe waiter and a barber's assistant. He seems to have been able to raise all the money he required for everything he took in hand. He began life as a messenger boy at a railway refreshment room at Meiun. He inherited a small sum of money and went to Paris where he took lessons at a commercial school. He then ecame a junior clerk in atgreat French bank, which he left to enter a company promoter's office. On his employer's failure Rochette circularized the crediters, offering it with their assistance, undertaking to get their money back for

He next succeeded in getting himself financed by a gentleman of large private means, and started the Credit Miner (Mining Bank). From that time forward he became a sort of financial wizard. Companies sprang up at his bidding as though at a command of a magician's wand. In a couple of years the Credit Miner was doing such business that it employed 400 clerks.

There was a continuous stream of promotions of companies of all kinds. There were issued to the public in turn the stock of collieries, copper, silver and sold mines. South American and Mexgold mines. South American and Mexican land and railway concerns, banks, fisheries, gas-mantle factories, colonial concerns, and various other undertakings. So enormous did the financier's business become that he formed a subsidiary company, the Banque Franco-Espagnol, and started a daily financial newspaper. In his beydey his two of-fices gave employment to 700 clerks.

In 1906, everything was going on swimmingly, and all that Rochette wanted was the Ribbon of the Order of the Jegion of Honor to enhance his prestige. An application was drawn up by some friends of his, and it was initialled by a great political personage; but he got the ribbon of a minor order instead, and the disappointment was intense. Then Rochette launched the Nerva mines, in result was also a disappointment to him, as this venture did not meet with anything like the support that he had anticipated. The "Buisson Heila," another of his undertakings, was a system for giving a wonderfully clear light by incandescent gas at very small expense, but it did nothing that was claimed for

It is alleged that M. Rochette spent a very large sum monthly in "hush money." It is stated that the money so paid amounted on an average to between $10,000 and $15,000 per month. Some of his influential protectors are said to have been in the receipt of weekly allowances of $250, $300 and $400 and from the Credit Miner, and it is alleged that but for their protection Rochette would have been arrested long before he was actually taken in. Although at first his liabilities were placed at $20,000,000 it was later found that twice that sum would be a more correct estimate.

The whole "affaire" was made the sublect of investigations by a Parliamentary Committee of Inquiry, and one of the most interesting witnesses examined was M. Lepine, the Prefect of Police in Paris. In the statement that he made he said that Rochette's method was to float companies in groups. As soon as one got into difficulties another was floated to support it, and was thrust upon the investing public by means of extraordinary ad-Seven companies were thus floated in the course of three years, he said, had brought Rochette more than $15,000,000, and by a system of inflating the prices of their shares they had been made to produce, altogether, nearly twenty-five millions. "It is a house of cards," he declared, "having no foundation but the credulity of the public.

SPRING WEATHER HARD ON BABY

The Canadian spring weather-one day mild and bright; the next raw and blustery is extremely hard on t'-3 baby. Conditions are such that the mother cannot take the little one out for fresh air so much to be desired. He is confined to the house which is often over-heated and badly ventilated. He catches cold; his little stomach and bowels become disoriered and the mother soon has a sick baby to look after. To prevent this an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets should be given. They regulate the stomach and bowels, thus preventing or relieving colds, simple fevers, colic or any other of the many minor ills of childhood. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville,

A HUNGARIAN IDOL.

British Admiral Could, If He Wished, Be Dictator.

A man, who, by his strong personality and by reason of having won the utmost confidence of the people of Hungary, could become dictator to-morrow if he so willed, is Admiral Sir Ernest Troubridge, K.C.M.G., president of the Danube Commission. Nominally his functions do not extend beyond the Danube. Actually he is the arbiter, counsellor, friend of soldiers, sailors and politicians alike. The Hungarians have the utmost confidence in him, and if he so willed he could become Dictator of Hungary to-morrow. But he has preferred to stay in the background, to advise the commander - Admiral Hungarian

Each time he appears in his box at the opera he is cheered to the echo, for the Hungarians know he had stood between them and the ravishing Roumanians. To him the Magyars owe their very existence this winter. Every time the Roumanians have tries to requisition food destined for the starving population, Admiral Troubridge has politely said "No," has struck terror into their hearts. The Roumanians had 40,000 men to enforce their demands. The admiral had two submarine chasers armed with sixpounders to enforce his. In appearance Admiral Troubridge is a typical John Bull. Snowy locks over a kindly, wrinkled face do not hint of the power that lies behind. Many stories of the admiral in Budapest could be told. When the Roumanians were setting free Bolsheviks in the hopes that Hungary would be left in such a state of chaos that they would get a mandate from Paris to stay permanently in Budapest, the admiral devised a plan to counteract them. He started a passenger service up and down the Danube. "It'e like this," he said, "Bolshevism is a disease which comes from lack of work and interest in the normal things of life. Some of the poor haven't seen their relations for months. I give them little trips down the river. They see their friends, buy cheap food in the country, come back normal, happy peo-ple, and forget all about Bolshevism."

SITTING A HORSE.

Rough-riding Westerner Talks About Royalty.

Pictures of the country's recent guest, the Prince of Wales, engaged assistant cow punching in the west and riding a western saddle in the western fashion, have been generally printed in the newspapers. Perhaps even in this age of automobiles there are horsemen enough still left to share the interest in the exhibition expressed by a Canadian writing in the Daily Mail of London. "Yesterday," he writes. "I was comparing a photograph of the Prince of Wales taken in Hyde Park and another of him taken during his tour in Canada. In the first he sits an Irish hunter on an English hunting saddle. He has the seat of a horn cavalier. In the second he sits a Canadian bronco on a California stock suddle (a stock saddle has a high cantle, a horn, and is ridden with a long stirrup. His heels are up and he is 'all of a hump.' "Horsemen in Canada smiled indulgently at the prince's father when, as the Duke of Cornwall and York, he made a similar tour to the one his son recently made and first put leg across Canadian horseflesh. Englishmen could not sit a horse, they proclaimed. They were all right for hacking about, but when it came to ridingreal riding—they were not in it.

"I recall well the day the riding master strode into the Royal Northwest Mounted Police stables at Regina and announced that he was looking for a high-stepper to carry the heir to the throne. No 'mean' tricks, some sense and plenty of style was what he called for.

"I was in the rough-riding squad at the time, and we paraded a few of the 'perfect ladies' that we had in the stables. He chose a bay mare who had brains enough to do almost anything except talk, and told me to school her and get her into shape for "Some weeks later the duke-today's King-rode through the lines on that same little bronco and inspected the Northwest Mounted Police. He inspected me casually, I am afraid, for she was giving him a lot to do. He did not understand the stock saddle and the bitting.

"We, on the other hand, inspected His Royal Highness critically. We liked his horse but we did not approve of his seat. Englishmen certainly could not sit a horse. "Many years later we came to the war. And we saw Englishmen, many of them sitting on horses. At first we were inclined to sneer. There was nothing about the management nor the handling of horses they could teach us.

"But we worked side by side with crack British cavalry regiments, and they kept their horses in as good fettle as we did, and seemed to make longer marches with as little fatigue. we began to wonder if, afte rall, there might not be something in the English seat and the English saddle. "Finally our lot got cut up a bit and

Apple Pork Pie-An old-time recipe is called apple pork pie. The plate is lined with four juicy tart apples sliced thin. Four heaping table spoonfuls of sugar and salf a teaspoonful of cinnamon are spread over them, and on top of that are dotted twelve small pieces of fat salt pork the size of a

There are those in Japan who regard with disfavor, despite their excellence in the eyes of reigners, the dolls wearing the "latest thing" in costume, that it has become more and USE more the custom to display in shop windows. These dolls, they say, represent the decadence of the ancient Japanese art of doll making. They are quite overdone. They lack the simple art of the Japanese doll of an earlier period. They are nothing but window mannequins. The criticism seems to be founded on fact, for although there are some who maintain that doll making is still one of the Japanese fine arts, no modern dollmaker seems to have succeeded Kisaburo Matsumoto, with whom ended, in 1889, the doll-making traditions of the pre-Restoration period. More than that, the mu ern theatre and now the motion pictures have supplanted the puppet shows that long provided a fine incentive to the men who made dolls for them, and created a great number of colls which everybody recognized as characters in the national drama. The other dolls, moreover, were not dressed in real clothes, but painted to represent different styles of costume, and a finished doll, like any other work of art the world over, was expected by the connoisseur to reveal something of the personality of

Here Are a Few First-Class Recipes.

Almost every housewife has her own favorite recipe for apple pie. One old lady in New England, who is famous for hers, makes a rich apple sauce first, spreads it over the bottom crust. covers it with a layer of the thickest of yellow country cream, puts on a rich, flaky crust and bakes it. It is no wonder her relatives all ask for it whenever they plan to visit her, because no one seems to be able to make it suit tates quite like "grand-

Snowdrops From Hooge.

Hooge is an evil memory to a great number of our returned soldiers. East of Ypres, close to Maple Copee and Sanctuary Wood, just above Bellewarde Lake, and astride the Menin road, no stretch of ground has been more often and more hardly fought over from the dark days of late 1914 until last September. The whole area of Hooge and Bellewarde is scarred and pocketed by chell holes, craters and defences until there remains not a yard of undisturbed ground. Yet here, making gunpits last March, the writer discovered on the very lip of a shell hole a clump of snowdrops gayly blooming and when in April we had to was back from the Y res ridges because the Germans had outflanked us on the south, he carried away with him the bulbs. They were sent home, and to-day in a Harborne garden are shyly putting up their buds of white, green-striped, and a few days of more congenial weather will bring them into bloom.-London Mail.

cedes in England the "right of approach" was used often by those who believe their rights were being trampled upon, and in many cases their contentions were well grounded. History tells also that the dissenters on various occasions failed to receive the affable treatment accorded to them by King George. Non-Comformist bodies, according to the "right," have the privilege of approaching the sovereign and laying before him the facts regarding any curtailment of civil or religious liberty which may threaten them because of their faith. A general body was formed for the purpose of carrying this right into operation. It was composed of representatives of three great Non-Conformist churches-Congregational, Baptist and Presbyterian.

"Dissenting deputies" were appointed in 1732. They were laymen and were chosen originally to consider an application to Parliament for the repeal of the corporation and the test acts. The deputies became a permanent body later, with the object of looking after and safeguarding civil concerns of the dissenters.

At present their duty is to see that the civil and religious rights of the Non-Conformists are not infringed. In conjunction with the general body they possess the right of personal approach to the King.

Notwithstanding that liberty of conscience has now won general recognition in England, as in most countries of the world, the old right bestowed upon the fathers of Non-Conformity is still exercised upon important occasions. Previous to the offering of peace felicitations recently the last time the right was invoked was when King George ascended the throne.
