"What do your people say about it, Barry?"

Barry for a moment seemed to lose his nonchalent ease. "Oh, you know the dear old mother," he said. "I really felt—yes. I don't mind owning up-downright uncomfortable when I told her. She seemed so pleased. She said she always hoped it would be one of you girls, and that an aim in life would steady me. She called you her Lew little daughter, and hopes you'll go and see her as soon as possible."

Moya's face fell in dismay-in more than dismay, perhaps. She laughed uneasily. At the bottom of her heart she had always envied Barry his mother, so easygoing, affecionate and kind. And now it meant playing on her kindness, too, just as she had unknowingly played on Guy's. Oh, why had she not thought of all this, what was bound to happen, before she plunged on her headlong course?

"She hoped it would be one of us girls," she repeated. "Oh, that was Una, Barry. Your mother's got a soft spot in her heart for her, I know. She would only be disappointed it was I. Only she's too kind-hearted to show it, dear old thing."

Barry leaned down, picked up a stone and flung it viciously seawards. "I tell you," he said in a low voice. 'I shall be glad when I'm out of this hole. You talked of being in one. I'm bothered if it's as bad as this. I did not think it out before I agreed to your mad scheme. It wasn't worth A bit of fun. Deceiving them. Honesty stirred in Moya. She did not like to tell Barry, but she had to do so. 'Oh, Barry, he isn't what I thought

'He's using the money for all sorts of big schemes," she went on. "Not exactly charity. He told me a lot about it last evening. But helping people to help themselves. Oh, it's wonderful to think what money can do in bringing happiness to others. Now, I should have just spent it on myself. It would have only made me vain and conceited, and very likely in the end as mercenary as I thought once that he was. But oh, Barry, it makes such a difference knowing all this. Instead of it being amusinga good bit of fun-to deceive him, if

"Tell him, then," said Barry. "If he's a good sort, he'll understand." Moya drew a long breath. How little Barry himself understood! Was it not literally impossible to tell Guy? "Or," said Barry quite eagerly. "let's break it off—here and now. What object is there in this pretence

Sne stopped herself on a queer little laugh. She could guess what Guy would do if he was told the engagement was broken off. He had constituted himself her champion. He would be distressed for her sake. Probably he would thing her mother to blame, and try to make matters right again. He might even see Barry, to try and bring the supposed lovers together again!

Oh dear! What a stupid tangle it was! Moya felt like one who has carelessly entered a labyrinth. She was learning at this moment one valuable lesson, that when one takes an important step in life, whether it be in jest and earnest, one generally has to step further on still-it takes courage to step back again. At any rate, it took more courage than Moya felt she had now.

She dared not tell Guy the truth. He had offered to be her friend. In her heart she felt proud that he, a man of such hig purposes and ideals. should be willing to give his friendship to a little girl like she wasfrivolous, careless, who had never thought about life at all, and just played at it till now. She did not want to lose that friendship. Guy thought her true to herself. What would he say if he knew?

But still less could she let Guy think Barry and she had broken off the engagement.

Barry threw her a humorous glance. 'You're very lacking in initiative this morning," he remarked. "Yesterday you were full of schemes, and scorned me because I found it hard to make convenient excuses and reasons at a second's notice. I'm the resourceful one now. Why should we not have a quarrel, I should like to know? Find we're unterly unsuited to each other? Nothing more simple!"

As if Guy would not consider it his duty to patch up a quarrel between lovers! She foresaw long explanations, evasions, excuses—another labyrinth more winding and dark than this was. And she dared not tell Barry. Barry would only see the funit rather amusing to get a rise out of old Berkeley. One could not depend on Barry where a joke was concerned—or what he thought was a joke. FROWN ON LUXURIES.

At Many Times Effort Has Been Made to Enforce Simplicity.

Luxury taxation is by no means a new idea. In Rome, more than 2,000 years ago, the Oppian law enacted that "no woman should possess more than half an ounce of gold, or wear a dress of different colors, or ride in a carriage in the city or wear a dress of diffeernt colors, or ride in a carriage in the city or within a mile of it except on occasions of public religious ceremonies." In 187 B. C. a law was passed to limit the number of guests at entertainments.

A limit was set on the cost of funerals and funeral monuments. And there would certainly be some outcry in this country against the methods of Julius Caesar, who had officers stationed in the market place to seize provisions forbidden by law, and sent soldiers to feasts to remove illegal ent person.

Its 7,000 acres (he says) are entirely under grass, and at present it is without suitable or adequate buildings. The soil is a rich alluvial loam, and the grasses it carries are luxuriant and provide good feeding for stock to summer and winter. A certain area is mowed every year to provide hay for young stock in winter, but the greater part is grazed throughout the year. The climate is severe, but cattle and horses can be out-wintered with safety and advantage. The summer production of grass exceeds the present requirements of the stock on a properly managed ranch, and the surproperly managed fanch, and the surproperly ma plus, then withered and dry, about the same feeding value as English hay, suffices to carry the animals through he winter. The climate renders through the winter. The climate renders this simple system of "haymaking" completely practicable in Alberta, and only the needs of young stock housed in winter have to be provided in the glaborate British method. Although there is no arable land within the limits of the E. P. It is true that the clouds that gather about the setting sun do take a sober coloring from an eye that has kept watch in man's mortality, to paraphrase Wordsworth a bit, and that the thought of constantly lessening activity and prospects which age entails is enough to make one pause and consider. But consideration that goes far enough will reveal that all time, whether of this world or another, is an unending oppor-

How Stomachs Can Be Restored to a Vigorous, Healthy Condition.

Not to be limited in diet, but to eat whatever he pleases is the dream of every dyepeptic. No one can honestly promise to restore any stomach to this happy condition, because all people cannot eat the same things, with equally satisfactory results. It is literally true that "what is one man's tood is another man's poison." But it is possible to so tone up the digestive organs that a pleasing diet may be selected from articles of food

When the stomach lacks tone there o build up the blood. Good digestion without rich, red blood is impossible, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and enrich the blood.
