Changing Styles

Last year I bought a limousine, the latest thing in boats, and it was painted black and green, and cost me many groats. "It is the very latest word in cars," the agent cried; "all other cars will look absurd, this noble bus beside. The pride of ownership 'twill give, and fill your heart with bliss, and it will last you while you live, I wot and ween and wiss." And now my tumbler's out of style, it looks like Noah ark, and when I'd push her for a mile I go out after dark. For if I take it out by day, by jokers it's abused; they ask me if it is the dray the Pilgrim Fathers used. My wife declares she'd rather walk, and proper pride maintain, than ride with me around a block in that ancestral wain. And thus the motor game is played upon the trustful chump, whose last year's model looks decayed and ready for the dump. My van is just as fine as silk, so far as chugging goes; but people of the critic ilk turn the scornful nose. Its hood is badly out of date, the windshield slant is vile, the body lines, which should be straight, bulge out in ancient style. And so I'll have to buy a gig that's up-to-date and new; and in six months I'll bet a fig, will be a has been too.

Lord Robert Cecil Has Taken a Unique Position

In British Public Life

BRITISH politics are in a peculiarly fluid condition and no prophet has arisen bold enough to say what the outcome will be. It is agreed that the present Government contains few if any of the elements of stability, but whether Lloyd George will break with his Tory lieutenants or maintain the coalition by accepting their viewpoint are points on which there is little light.

There seems to be only one point in connection with British politics on which all observers are more or less agreed. The coming man is Lord Robert Cecil. A man of rare intellectual power and enlightened views, Cecil is looked upon as a real force. In fact, although he comes of the Tory-est of Tory families, he is regarded as a possible leader for the Labor party! Discussing Cecil in the English Review of Reviews, H. W. Wilson Harris writes:—

His experience at Paris left visible marks on him. He went there one man and he came back another. He carried through with unlooked-for success the work he was charged with. He gave evidence of unsuspected executive ability. And when he came back to Parliament in June it was manifest that his work of the past six months had invested the member for Hitchin with a new authority and a new power of leadership both in the House of Commons and outside it.

He had filled a great place in Paris, and his work there had reacted on his personality. No man could hold the position he held in an international gathering and come back to play a secondary part in home politics. The impression he made at the Peace Conference was profound. Holding no status beyond that of an ordinary member of Parliament—he had ceased to be a Minister in November—he was as largely responsible as anyone for the two great constructive achievements of the conference, the creation of the League of Nations and the relief of starvation in Europe through the Supreme Economic Council. No member of the conference—certainly no member of the British delegation—was held in higher respect or regard.

If there is one thing that burned itself into Lord Robert's soul at Paris it was the suffering of the world. No man who had access, as he had, to the reports coming in almost hourly from relief agents in every corner of Europe could be insensible to the misery they unfolded. That was Lord Robert's task when he came home to address the House of Commons in April, and he has returned to it again and again in speech and interview since. It may be that the part he had played when Minister of Blockade in imposing starvation as a weapon of war made him the more resolute in his fight against starvation when the war was at an end. At all events, his contact with the sufferings of the people bred in him a new sympathy with the people as people. Aristocrat, Tory, Cecil, as he was by tradition and origin, you could imagine him now preaching with all the conviction of his nature from the Corn Law Rhymers' lines:

The people, Lord, the people,
Not thrones and crowns but men.

He returned to the House of Commons to make himself its leading figure. There is no one whose criticism is more uncompromising, more sincere, more constructive, or more just. He speaks as one having authority. His escape from the office of Bench to the independence of the private member has unfettered him. But no one believes that Lord Robert Cecil has gone off the Treasury Bench to stay off it. All that is in question is the time and manner of his return. Someone described him not long ago as the only possible Tory Prime Minister. That judgment is already out of date. That Lord Robert is a possible Prime Minister is manifest. That he would be willing to head an administration composed of the type of politician who calls himself Tory to-day is not credible.

Where, then, is he to find his associates in the work of government? He is said to have observed once that the only party that had really interested him for ten years past was the Labor Party. There is still a wide gulf that separates him from even the moderates of the party—men like Mr. Henderson, and Mr. Thomas, and Mr. Clynes. Where they stand for nationalization, he preaches, as he has always preached, co-partnership.

Irrigation Best Kind of Farming

Col. J. S. Dennis tells of introduction.

Just why the farmers of the southern territory of the prairie provinces are clamoring for further extensions of the existing irrigation schemes was made clear recently, when Col. J. S. Dennis, of the C. P. R. Department of Colonization and Development, addressed the professors and students of Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, on irrigation in the west. The large attendance listened intently to the lecture, which was admirably illustrated with a series of lantern slides depicting the progress of the C. P. R. irrigation system and the fruits of this method of farming.

The speaker divided his discourse under three heads, dealing with the introduction of irrigation in Alberta by the C. P. R., and the motives which had induced him to recommend and urge this; the success as proved by the company; but the temporary failure of some settlers due to lack of experience in the application of water and cycle of wet years; the reversal of opinion after practical tests, and the consequent overwhelming demand for further irrigation projects on the prairie.

"For a long time," said Col. Dennis, "there were many who claimed that irrigation was unnecessary in Western Canada. Because conditions of drought do not regularly occur there, they argued, there was not the same urgency for irrigation as in other less fortunately situated countries north of the Rocky Mountains. The experience of the past two years, with a rainfall in Southern Alberta of less than 10 inches, and the bumper crops raised by irrigators, is responsible in no small measure for this great change in opinion."

Outlining the extent of the semi-arid portion of the province of Alberta, which he stated stretched 160 miles north of the American boundary and from the Rocky Mountains to the Cypress Hills in Saskatchewan, the speaker stated that American irrigation engineers of prominence, after investigating conditions thoroughly, had given it as their opinion that the rainfall was insufficient to follow farming profitably, and the question to be decided was not whether water was needed, but rather just how far this territory could grow any kind of crops without irrigation.

"Irrigation, when practically applied, is the best kind of farming," said the colonel with conviction, "because it is the only system that permits of the most intelligent treatment of every individual crop to suit its own requirements. It eliminates the necessity of summer fallow and elaborate treatment of the soil to conserve moisture. It is quite agreed that mixed farming is the basis of agricultural prosperity and this system flourishes splendidly under irrigation in the raising of special fodder crops which it is difficult to raise without water."

"In every case where it has been put to the test in competition with ordinary farming methods, irrigation has been proved to increase production from 25 to 100 per cent. This accounts for the fact that in the irrigation belt land is being sold for considerably over $100 per acre, and that farms are seldom offered for sale even at that price, the owners being reluctant to sell. The 'Lethbridge Herald,' by careful compilation, placed a conservative estimate of $54.71 as the average value of the production on an acre of the 82,230 acre tract. Cases were many where potatoes yielded $170 to the acre, alfalfa $125, and wheat $105 per acre. The annual report issued by the Board of Trade in this same city contains a comparative statement showing the results of crops grown on dry and irrigated land and gives the following increases of crops grown under irrigation:—Wheat, 23 bushels, or 77 per cent.; oats, 35 bushels, or 54 per cent.; barley, 25 bushels, or 81 per cent.; peas, 14 bushels, or 51 per cent.; potatoes, 250 bushels, or 105 per cent.

The Canadian Pacific Irrigation scheme in Southern Alberta Col. Dennis visualized as the largest individual project on the American Continent, with an area greater than the whole irrigated area of Colorado or California. The irrigable area totals more than 600,000 acres whilst the aggregate length of its canals and ditches is greater than Canada's longest river or the rail distance from Vancouver to Halifax. To this area of 190,000 acres a further area of 100,000 acres in the Lethbridge district was added when the C. P. R. took over the block originally developed by the Alberta Railway and Irrigation Company, and this has shown the same remarkable progress and prosperity.

"Agitation at the present time is for further irrigation and quick irrigation," continued Col. Dennis, "Farmers claim with justification that it is a life and death issue with them. If they are to remain on the land they must have it; if they do not get it the only thing to do is get out. That the Provincial Government realizes this also is very evident from the fact that they have energetically taken up the new projects. The Lethbridge Northern Irrigation District scheme comprises the irrigation of about 100,000 acres and will cost between three and four million dollars. Just recently farmers in the Raymond, Magrath and Sterling district were called upon to vote on the formation of a further irrigation project which would embrace a total area of 190,000 acres and irrigate 95,000. When the ballot came to be counted there was not a solitary vote recorded against the project.

"A vast sum of money," said Col. Dennis in concluding, "was put into the irrigation scheme by the C.P.R., but it has proved a sound proposition. The bumper crops raised on these irrigated farms, the high prices at which the land is held, the reluctance on the part of farmers to sell, and, above all, the general clamor in the south country for schemes to include the greater part of the south territory all prove that the initiative and foresightedness which promoted the project are now appreciated and rewarded."

EVIDENCE

Of Success of Hacking's Heart and Nerve Remedy and Hacking's Kidney and Liver Pills

Wm. Fullarton, R. R. 1, Listowel:

"I doctored for eight years for Stomach Trouble and Pains all through my body, got no relief until I used Hacking's Heart and Nerve Remedy which fixed me up all right. I used Hacking's Kidney and Liver Pills along with the Remedy."

Mrs. H. Hincliffe, Wingham:
"I was on the point of a complete Nervous Breakdown, could not sleep or plan my household duties, suffered with my Heart and my Nerves and doctors could do little for me. After taking the first box of Hacking's Heart and Nerve Remedy I improved so much in health that I continued with a 6 box treatment and am able to return to my work with renewed vigor."

Mr. Richard Jones, Doon, Ont.:

"I have had Pains under my Heart for some time and tried all sorts of remedies and have been to four different doctors and could get no relief. I took one box of Hacking's Heart and Nerve Remedy and felt very much better. I took another box and have been able to work again. Before I took your remedy I could not work for weeks at a time, the pain was so great."

These are only a few of the many testimonials that come to us voluntarily and I am sure that you too will get beneficial results if you will give them a fair trial. Buy them from your dealer. Insist on Hacking's.
